Building Boom at Chilton May Hit Nearly $2 Million

$600,000 of Expected Work Will Not Add to Tax Base

BY DON KAMPFER

CHILTON — A building boom that could reach record $2 million proportions is slated for this community this year.

The Aluminum Specialty Company's decision of the last week to go ahead with a $200,000 plant expansion assured significant tax base gains despite the fact that well over $600,000 of scheduled construction will be non-taxable property.

Set definitely is a $425,000 Calumet Memorial Hospital addition, a Calumet County courthouse annex that will cost perhaps $250,000 before completed and the aforementioned Aluminum Specialty Co. project. Other firms that figure in the construction picture are the Carnation Co. and the Quality Manufacturing Co.

Residential construction, too, is expected to reach an all-time high.

Hospital Project

Ground will be broken for the hospital project by June, hospital officials have stated. The three-pronged expansion will double the hospital's floor space while adding 24 beds to boost its capacity to 60 beds. A total of 17,343 square feet of first floor space and 7,813 square feet of basement space will be added.

The present structure has 21,000 square feet of first floor space and a 2,500 square foot basement.

At the court house annex site, just north of the existing court house, workmen from the Joseph Lorenz Construction Co., Hartford, general contractors, are completing preparatory work and heavy equipment is expected this week.

The 9,440 square foot annex will house two new courtrooms.

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The United States plans to launch its Saturn superrocket on a second test flight next Wednesday, and as a bonus experiment, to blow it up 65 miles high to determine what happens when 95 tons of water is sprayed in the icy ionosphere.

Primary goal of the flight is to further test the propulsion system of the first stage, an eight-engine monster which pours out 1.3 million pounds of thrust, more than three times greater than any present U.S. rocket.

Objectives will be similar to last October's extremely successful first launching of the Saturn, which is a forerunner of rockets which will carry American astronauts to the moon.

The Saturn launching is one of three major firings scheduled this week by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. Previously announced were the effort Monday to fire a Ranger 4 instrument package to the moon and an attempt Thursday to orbit an international satellite developed by the United States and Britain.

The Saturn water is carried in two dummy upper stages to simulate the weight of the actual upper assembly to be employed on later flights.

and facilities for related departments. Bids on the project, less movable furnishings and landscaping, totaled $223,000. Before all aspects of construction and furnishing are completed, its cost should reach $240,000 or $250,000.

After many months of contemplation and overcoming a land acquisition problem, the Aluminum Specialty Co. has announced plans for a 30,000 square foot plant addition. Its construction cost has been estimated at $200,000.

Hike Payroll

The two-story structure will be built on what is now employee parking lots. Expansion of existing production processes are the purpose for more plant space, company officials have stated. When completed, employment will be boosted by more than 100 persons bringing the firm's work force to 500.

A company spokesman said no starting date for construction has been set but the announcement to proceed with the project stated that it would be built this summer.

Still unofficial but very definite.

Showers to Mar Parade Of Finery

Rain, possibly in the form of a thundershower, may dampen the Easter parade this morning, the weatherman has announced.

This bit of unpleasant news is the result of two weather systems centered around Wisconsin. The rest of the nation is experiencing a proper Easter Sunday.

To the south Saturday a warm front brought Chicago a high of 80 and Milwaukee 74. To the west a cold front hovered in Minnesota. As a result of unstable air, the Fox Cities had a high of 66 and scattered showers throughout the day.

Today the temperatures are expected to hover near 60 but fall swiftly after noon as the leading edge of the cold front moves into the state. With the cold front will come clearing skies.

Temperatures are expected to slip into the 30s tonight and back to the 40s for Monday.

$2,890 Swindle

Con Man Bilks Madison Bank

MADISON (AP) — A confidence man with a persuasive telephone manner and a split-second sense of timing has bilked a Madison bank out of $2,890.

Madison police are trying to unravel the tangled trail left by the unknown man on April 3 and who said he was an employee of Ray-O-Vac. Bank officials were convinced by his knowledge of First National Bank in Madison account numbers used by the man and represented himself as an employee of Gisholt Machine Co. package totaling $2,890 in bills of $20, $10 and $5 denomination.

Bank employees became suspicious when the man could not identify to their satisfaction top Manpower, Inc., a firm which provides temporary office help, to have a girl pick up the package at the Security State Bank.

On April 4, the Security State Bank received a call from a man who said he was an employee of Ray-O-Vac. Bank officials were convinced by his knowledge of First National Bank in Madison account numbers used by the man and represented himself as an employee of Gisholt Machine Co. package totaling $2,890 in bills of $20, $10 and $5 denomination.

Two Neenah Women Hit by Car; One Dies

Police Say Auto Ran Into Group of Young People on 114

A Neenah woman was killed and a rural Neenah girl seriously injured about 11:40 p.m. Saturday when a car ran into a group of young people on State 114 near the Pied Piper tavern east of Menasha.

Pronounced dead at Theda Clark Hospital, Neenah, was Mrs. Richard (Bonnie Boushley) Fulcer, 20, 240 1/2 Grant St., Neenah.

Confined at the hospital with a leg fracture and other injuries is Beverly Voldness, 18, route 1, Neenah. Her condition was not available at 12:45 a.m.

Winnebago County Police said the young women were struck by a car driven by Brevett Porter, 141 Law St., Neenah.

Porter told police he was headed toward Menasha and was returning to his lane of traffic when he saw "a lot of kids" ahead of him. He swerved to avoid the group, he said, but the two girls were struck. Another was pulled out of the way by a companion, police said.

Blood on the highway and skidmarks indicated that the auto was near the center of the roadway when it struck Mrs. Fulcer. Damages indicated the left headlight of the car struck the woman.

New Orleans Group Rapped for Sending Negroes to New York

NEW YORK (AP) — A Negro family of 10 arrived here by bus from New Orleans Saturday on one-way tickets paid for by a Southern segregationist group.

The action by the Citizens Council of New Orleans raised a storm of criticism from welfare and equal rights spokesmen here. They said the family was used cruelly as a pawn.

But the father of the family, Louis Boyd, 41, an unemployed longshoreman, said he was glad to be here.

"My wife and children were needing," Boyd said as he stepped from the bus with his wife and their eight children, ranging in age from 3 to 12 years.

"I feel that I can make it a little better in New York. I see a lot of people working here and you don't see much of that in New Orleans."

MANITOWOC (AP) — Funeral services will be held at Fond du Lac Monday for Philip J. Bunker, 52, former state president of the Fraternal Order of Eagles. Bunker died at his home here Friday. He had moved to Manitowoc from Fond du Lac two years ago. Bunker was a native of Oconto Falls.

Three-Year Agreement Will Give 47-Cent Hike in Wages, Benefits

Apprentice and journeymen plumbers in the Fox Cities area will, for the first time, get a week's paid vacation as the result of a contract negotiated Saturday with the Central Valley Plumbing and Heating Contractors Association.

About 150 union members in the Fox Cities will be affected by the new contract. They will return to work Monday.

Terms of the contract include increased welfare benefits, the paid vacations, wage rate hikes and increased subsistence allowances while on out-of-town jobs.

Base Rate Hiked
Base wage rates will go from $3.47 to $3.52 an hour for the first year of the contract, and benefits will jump from 18 to 28 cents an hour.

That will increase the total wages and benefits from the present $3.65 to $3.80 an hour. The plumbers and steamfitters will receive the remaining 32 cents in the 47-cent package increase during the next two years.

The plumbers and steamfitters went on strike April 1, after their old contract expired at midnight March 31.

Since then numerous negotiation meetings were conducted.

Arvid Anderson of the Wisconsin Employment Relations Board was in charge of several of the meetings and mediated the session Saturday night when the new contract was accepted by the workers and the contractors.

Behind Iron Curtain
Easter penetrated the Iron Curtain, carrying its hope of life everlasting into Orthodox and Baptist churches in Moscow.

The commemoration of Christ's sacrifice on the Cross brought thousands of pilgrims to Jerusalem, tens of thousands of visitors to the Vatican in Rome and millions of the faithful to special services throughout the world.

On mountain tops, in valleys, beside lakes, in city stadiums, the rising sun found worshippers gathered in prayerful thanksgiving.

The Easter message of Pope John XXII, Roman Catholic pontiff, repeated the words of Christ risen: "Peace be to you."

Pope John invoked Heaven's blessing "to all men without exception."

In the First Baptist church of Frankfort, Ky., about 50 deaf persons, many of them also mute, neared the end of a wordless three-day vigil. Flying fingers spelled out in the sign language of the afflicted the message of Christ's life.

Army Chief Forced to Yield Reins

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — President Jose Maria Guido, supported by a tough cavalry general and a column of tanks, gained the upper hand over ultimatum-bearing Argentine military chiefs Saturday just as civil war seemed to be exploding.

The diminutive president imposed a truce while insurgent armor stormed into the outskirts of Buenos Aires and probed machine gun and artillery emplacements of army commander Gen. Raul Poggi in the heart of the capital.

The crisis, the nearest Argentina has come to serious blood-letting since dictator Juan D. Peron was routed seven years ago, burgeoned when cavalry Gen. Enrique Rauch launched unexpectedly an "insurrection" against the army high command Friday night from Campo de Mayo, Argentina's most important military camp, 30 miles outside the capital.

Gen. Poggi surprised and surprised Poggi, key leader in deposing and imprisoning President Arturo Frondizi on March 29. Guido is Frondizi's military-picked successor.

All morning it seemed blood would be spilled on the issue of whether Peronists, who won in the March 18 elections, would be barred from office by Guido's dictatorial decree, as the high command demanded, or by legal processes sanctioned by Congress, as the insurgents insisted.

The upshot was a dramatic summit conference of Argentina's generals and admirals behind the heavily guarded gates of Guido's suburban residence.

Satisfied With Truce
Rauch, 48, commander of the cavalry corps at Campo de Mayo, came out smiling and declared himself satisfied with a truce formula proposed by Guido himself.

Poggi sourly waved to newsmen and refused to talk.

As events unfolded it seemed clear Guido had triumphed.

The main development suggesting this was, when Guido's office announced the appointment of Gen. Juan Bautista Loza, comparatively unknown politically, as the new army secretary with a free hand to name his own army commander in chief.

This meant Poggi was through, as well as Gen. Marino Bartolome.

Salan Hears Charge He Attacked State

Death Likely Penalty for OAS Leader

PARIS (AP)—Gen. Raoul Salan, imprisoned chief of the European Secret Army, was formally accused Saturday of attacking the authority of the state in his campaign to keep Algeria French. Conviction on the charge carries the death penalty.

The charge was read to Salan in the stocky ex-general's prison cell. Prison officials said Salan, still wearing his black moustache and black-dyed hair, appeared relaxed as Examining Magistrate Guy Courcol read the complaint. Under French law, a prisoner must be formally charged within 48 hours of arrest.

Earlier, Salan had been pictured as resigned, tired, seemingly without hope, as he told police interrogators his arrest was inevitable—"everything was collapsing around us."

New Violence
Benedict Salan, former supreme French military commander in Algeria, was arrested Friday in Algiers. For the past year he had been in underground revolt against the Algerian policies of President Charles de Gaulle. Reaction to his capture caused new bloodshed in Algeria.

A year ago Sunday Salan and three other generals touched off a short-lived putsch, seizing power in Algiers. When his insurrection collapsed under the weight of De Gaulle's prestige, Salan and Gen. Edmond Jouhaud went into hiding. They formed the underground Secret Army Organization (OAS) which rallied European settlers for a last-ditch terrorist campaign against Algerian independence.

Death Sentence Probable
Salan and Jouhaud were stripped of rank as generals at the time of the putsch. Jouhaud was captured in Oran March 25 and has been sentenced to death. The same fate probably awaits Salan and he seemed to know it when he arrived at the prison gates Friday night.

Salan's trial probably will open around May 15. The investigating magistrate who will prepare the case for the special high military court—the same court that sentenced Jouhaud to death—interrupted his Easter vacation to start work.

De Gaulle will meet with the Superior Council of Magistrates Tuesday to review the Jouhaud case in a clemency hearing. No matter what the magistrates recommend, the final decision will be up to De Gaulle.

Clemency Urged
Letters and newspaper editorials have been urging a commutation of sentence for Jouhaud, a native Algerian who said he could not stand idly by while his homeland was being torn from France.

At Sainte Prison, Salan told police: "I saw too many people for silly reasons. People that I didn't know. That is probably how I was captured. But it was probable now, or later. What difference does it make? Everything was collapsing around us."

Salan told police he had planned a complete reorganization of the secret army in Metropolitan France and that one of the projects was to kidnap Marshal Alphonse Juin and take him to Ireland.

Using Public Interest Concept Puts Kennedy On Subtle Terrain

Rhetorical Expansion of Presidential Power May Not Win Future Battles

BY PETER LISAGOR
Chicago Daily News Service

WASHINGTON—In his more reflective moments during his Easter interlude at his Florida base, President Kennedy has a chance to contemplate the subtleties of life in the White House.

In the steel price controversy, he shows himself to be, in the Churchill phrase, "magnanimous in victory." But the President's problem now was nicely stated by an ancient sage who wrote:

"Those who know how to win are much more numerous than those who know how to make proper use of their victories."

Winning in this town can be a subtle business. Unlike a ball game or even a battle, victories here often have a glassy imper-manence, and today's triumph can turn into tomorrow's debacle.

In his mop-up sorties, the President moved onto subtle terrain with his assertion of the "public interest" principle as the major guide to wage earners and employers in determining how big their slice of the pie should be.

In a competitive economy, the public interest he defined precisely enough to serve as a voluntary brake on either wages or prices? Will the President be accepted as the supreme arbiter by either side in collective bargaining if he leaves the "public interest" principle in the condition of being a mere rhetorical injunction?

The steel companies proved to be a patsy against the President's massive expression of presidential power, although the only thing slapped against them in the midst of the melee were a few subpoenas.

Will Jimmy Hoffa's Teamsters, to cite a possible future example, be as responsive either to the President's ire or to the "public interest" when they sit down to talk wages with the companies?

"We would like both labor and management to be very conscious of the public stake at this time," the President told his weekly news conference.

Influence the Economy
The President was speaking, of course, about the big basic industries whose wage-price policies greatly influence the economy. But one can almost imagine management saying to the next wage slave asking for a little more green in the weekly pay envelope: "Haven't you been listening pal? That's against the public interest."

If, as the President has often noted, the nation is in a long grim battle against the forces of Communist imperialism, requiring a $50 billion defense effort over decades, the skillful use of rhetoric and verbal injunctions is not enough to maintain a vital stability, in the judgement of some economists.

Except for the precious sparing of lives, the cold war today makes demands upon a nation's resources, as well as its nervous system, that are equal to most shooting wars in the past. Government regulation and controls were freely used to protect the public interest during those upheavals.

Mr. Kennedy, like his predecessors, apparently believes that with care and restraint on the part of labor and management, the economy can flourish in this period without any greater regulation and control than are now on the statute books.

But he has added a new line to the job description of the presidency—define the public interest. And unless he does it with great subtlety, skill, persuasiveness and judiciousness, he may have to turn his rhetoric to the writing of new laws that will make it stick.

Communists in India Open Power Struggle

Meeting to Decide If Moscow, Peiping Will Give Orders

NEW DELHI, India (AP)—

Communist party of India opens a meeting here Sunday that could decide whether Indian Communists look to Moscow or Peiping for leadership.

A struggle for supremacy is expected between two factions. One is the relatively moderate group, aligned with Moscow, that appears content for the time being to work through India's parliamentary system. A pro-Chinese group is inclined toward the tougher approach of fighting Prime Minister Nehru's government with strikes and even violence.

The party struggle will begin in an Executive Committee meeting and move Monday into a six-day meeting of the party's National Council. The result could be compromise.

Main business on the agenda is selection of a general secretary to succeed Ajoy Ghosh, a middle-of-the-road leader who died in January. Choice of his successor was delayed by the parliamentary elections in February and by intense maneuvering within the party since then.

In the February elections, the pro-Chinese faction of the party improved its position in its Calcutta stronghold. The group aligned with Moscow lost heavily in the Bombay area, its home territory, and its leader, S. A. Dange, failed to win re-election to Parliament.

Dange was the first important Indian Communist leader to accuse the Chinese of aggression when India's border dispute with her northern neighbor flared into the open in 1959. Calcutta Communists have been inclined to make excuses for the Chinese—earning for themselves scathing criticism from Nehru.

An Air Force F-102 fighter plane, one of a flight saluting the opening of the Seattle World's Fair, crashed into this residential area north of the city Saturday. This airview shows several demolished homes and one burning after the pilotless plane crashed. At least two people were killed.

Kennedy Gives Word

Crowds Hail Opening Of Seattle World Fair

SEATTLE, Wash. (AP)—"Let the fair begin!" announced President Kennedy in Palm Beach, Fla., and the Seattle World's Fair swung open to the public Saturday amid cheers and cannonading.

Excited crowds hailed the beginning of the Century 21 Exposition unaware that an Air Force jet fighter plane had crashed into a neighborhood just north of Seattle after flying over the opening ceremonies.

The F102 leveled two houses and damaged two others. Two persons were killed and one hospitalized. The pilot, Capt. Joseph D. Wildt, 33, Cincinnati, Ohio, was rescued unhurt after parachuting into Lake Washington. Officials at Paine Field, 20 miles north of here where Wildt was stationed, said he lost control of his plane on the second fly-over.

Twelve thousand early arrivals crowded into Memorial Stadium to watch the opening festivities and hear President Kennedy in a telephoned message hall the opening of the first World's Fair in America in 22 years.

"What we show was achieved with great effort in the field of science, technology and industry," the President said.

"These accomplishments are a bridge to carry us competently toward the 21st century."

"Many nations have sent exhibits and will send their people. We welcome them. This exemplifies the spirit of peace and cooperation with which we approach the decades ahead. May we open not only a great World's Fair, but may we open an era of peace and understanding among all mankind."

Secretary of Commerce Luther H. Hodges, the administration's chief delegate to the fair, declared that "symbolizes our faith in the future of this country and the world."

Overdue Schooner Safe

big spending, an ever-expanding role of the federal authority. These charges are too general and undramatic to sway large numbers of voters.

Hence, the steel drama has been seized upon as an opening act in the campaign to depict the administration as addicted to the use of "naked political power."

The president and his lieutenants haven't responded to the GOP attacks, and it is unlikely that they will join the battle until after congress adjourns.

Needs GOP Help
For the presidential strategy has been to avoid partisan donnybrook. He recognizes he needs GOP help to pass some of his cherished programs. The Trade Expansion Act, which will allow him to cut tariffs and negotiate with Europe's Common Market, especially requires bipartisan support.

The president will hesitate to jeopardize that program, as a case in point, by locking oratorical horns with his critics at this juncture. But if the GOP campaign takes hold, according to Democratic sources, the president almost certainly will be prompted to take an even greater role in the congressional campaign than he now contemplates.

Moscow-Peiping Cleavage Modified

Chinese Speaking Softer Line At People's Congress Sessions

BY BAKER MARSH
Chicago Daily News Service

CHICAGO — There was an indication that Communist China and the Soviet Union, the two shades of Red that clash, might have come up with a lipstick pink this week.

"They weren't kissing and making up. But they weren't about to consult a marriage counselor, either."

The latest indications of Moscow-Peiping relations came from the reports of the Chinese National People's Congress.

At the end of the congress' long and secret sessions it looked as if "peaceful coexistence" might be the spring style for the biggest Communist countries — coexistence with each other if not with the West.

For what it's worth, Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev seems to feel that communism can bury capitalism without resort to all-out war. The Chinese Reds, from an older culture but a newer communism, have taken a much harder line.

Fundamental Cleavage
This fundamental cleavage would appear to be modified as a result of the 1,100-member meeting of the Chinese rubber-stamp parliament.

China's Premier Chou En-Lai made this report: "We should strengthen the unity and might of the socialist (communist) camp, support the struggle of the masses of the various countries against U.S. imperialism and its followers, unite all forces that can be united, isolate U.S. imperialism to the maximum extent and strive for lasting world peace."

That sounds belligerent enough. But Soviet newspapers printed the text of the Chinese communiqué (something they don't always do) and from Moscow we get this bit of loophole finding: Peiping is willing to go along with coexistence with the West without insisting that it is a temporary thing and without saying that war with the capitalist powers is inevitable.

Peiping did not insist that negotiations with the United States on such subjects as Berlin are hopeless and foolish.

Also, Peiping did not include in its official communiqué any statement of support for Communist Albania — the tiny communist state that was cast into the outer void by Khrushchev and brought back at least into the inner circles of communist purgatory by China.

China Has Troubles
The fact that China's official report seemed to pull back from the hard line and from open opposition to Moscow is interpreted in Moscow as a victory for the Kremlin.

This has as much validity as what sports writers say about baseball teams in spring training. The facts are that China is having its own troubles. Chou himself admitted to the congress that there had been "serious natural calamities" for three consecutive years—drought, flood, locusts. It was even implied that communist mismanagement had helped nature to create serious food shortages.

There are also reported serious differences among the high Chinese brass about domestic and foreign policies. We may yet learn for whom the gong sounds in Peiping.

Meanwhile, Moscow's Pravda and Izvestia imply that their boy is ahead in the East-East struggle. But Khrushchev might ponder the observation of Bret Harte that "for ways that are dark, and for tricks that are vain, the heathen Chinese is peculiar."

Navy Quickly Refloats Sunken Medical Ship, Avoids Serious Damage
PORT AU PRINCE, Haiti (AP)—The U.S. medical ship Haiti sank in the harbor of Jeremie this week but serious damage to its valuable equipment was avoided by prompt U.S. Navy refloating operations, authorities said Saturday.

The Haiti was fitted out by the North Carolina Tuberculosis Association with vaccines, X rays and other equipment for use in an anti-tuberculosis campaign in southern Haiti.

The ship ran into heavy weather Tuesday and sprang a leak 20 miles outside the harbor of Jeremie, which is 120 miles west of Port au Prince. The Haiti managed to make the dock but settled to the bottom.

Finland Buys Modern Radar Equipment

Chicago Daily News Foreign Service

PARIS — In the last three months Finland has bought the most modern radar equipment available in Western Europe. The price was $10 million, according to foreign diplomats returning from Helsinki.

This unusually heavy order is described here as one of the consequences of secret military agreements concluded in Moscow when the Finnish president, Urho K. Kekkonen, visited Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev in November, 1960.

Khrushchev reportedly had asked that the Finns tighten their sky protection against "enemy" planes coming from the West over what the Soviets call their "security zone."

Whether Finland's new radar system will be manned by Finns or by Russians is not known here. What is known, however, is that Finland has paid for her new radar equipment in gold rubles, part of war reparations of $120 million which the Soviets consented to pay to Finland in 1959.

Kennedy Rates High in Opinion Poll, Reuss Says
MILWAUKEE (AP) — Rep. Henry Reuss, Democratic congressman from Milwaukee, said Saturday an opinion poll among 15,000 of his constituents showed 56 per cent thought President Kennedy is doing a good job.

Thirty-four per cent thought the chief executive was doing a "fair" job and 10 per cent rated it "poor."

Reuss' district consists of the northern half of Milwaukee County.

Concerning the work of the United Nations, Reuss said only 31 per cent rated it "good," while 45 per cent classified it as "fair" and 24 per cent "poor."

West German Injured In Border Incident
FULDA, Germany (AP)—East German police opened fire Saturday on four officer candidates of the West German army, wounding one seriously.

The injured man was hospitalized with lung and leg wounds in this West German city near the East German frontier, police reported.

They said the four men were hiking through a forest when they strayed across the border, attracting police fire.

Argentine Troops Under the command of army commander Gen. Raul Poggi set up a gun emplacement in the square facing government house in Buenos Aires Saturday. The military preparations came during a crisis which threatened civil war when Gen. Enrique Rauch supported President Jose Maria Guido and launched an insurrection against the army high command.

Carrera, army secretary, who resigned Friday night.

The showdown came quickly after Rauch, solidly based with more than 12,000 soldiers and 150 Sherman tanks at his command at Campo de Mayo, ordered an armored column to advance on Buenos Aires.

Poggi, depending on the 1st, 2nd and 3rd Motorized Infantry regiments, deployed defenders in trenches in Palermo suburb in the path of the armored column. His forces wheeled out light artillery and anti-aircraft pieces behind a barricade of buses and cars around the dominating War Ministry building facing the Plaza de Mayo and pink-walled Government House in the heart of the city.

Storm Into Suburbs

Rauch's tanks and armored personnel carriers stormed on into the suburbs, despite the risks of warfare, and 60 men seized control of the national radio station. But just as it seemed that something would break out, cars filled with generals began arriving at Guido's gates to seek a peaceful solution.

What apparently turned the tables on Poggi was this: In the minutes before he went to Guido's residence the huge army garrisons at Santa Fe and at Rosario, Argentina's second largest city, came down on the side of the insurgents.

Elements of the air force also were reported to have declared themselves for Rauch.

The navy throughout kept hands off, declaring the crisis an army affair.

Spokesmen for Frondizi's Intransigent Radicals, who from the first have opposed outlawing the Peronists by decree, also proclaimed their support for Rauch.

Kennedy Vs. Eisenhower

Dinners Measure New Concept of Diplomacy

BY PHILIP E. MEYER

Chicago Daily News Service

WASHINGTON — In his first year in office, President Eisenhower held three state dinners for visiting diplomats or heads of state.

President Kennedy, in his first year, held 22.

This is one measure of the New Frontier's concept of personal diplomacy.

Another measure is the wear and tear on those who take care of the ceremonial aspects of visits by foreign dignitaries—from the Army private who dusts the red carpet at the airport to the man who decides when it's time to lay out the President's white tie and tails.

"We know from our work here that activity has really increased," said William T. Czesak, deputy chief of protocol. "We're working for a young president who is anxious to meet the world's leaders throughout the year."

Made to Feel Welcome

A staff of nervous young men, headed by suave Angier Biddle Duke, chief of protocol, has the job of planning visits down to the last detail and seeing that the guests are made to feel welcome. What draws them to this line of work?

Publishers to See Telstar Satellite Transmit 1,000 Words in One Minute

NEW YORK (AP) — American Newspaper Week will be observed here next week with 1,200 publishers attending the annual meeting of The Associated Press and the annual convention of the American Newspaper Publishers Association.

The ANPA is marking its 75th anniversary.

Members of The Associated Press, worldwide news cooperative, will meet Monday. U.S. Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy will be the luncheon speaker.

ANPA sessions the next three days will conclude with British Prime Minister Harold Macmillan addressing a dinner Thursday night.

A demonstration of transmitting 1,000 words a minute via a model Telstar satellite will be presented at the ANPA Wednesday session by E. J. McNeely, president of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co.

The actual Telstar is expected to go into orbit later this spring.

Benjamin M. McKelway of the Washington Star, president of The Associated Press, will preside at a morning business session of the AP.

The meeting will elect six directors to the 18-member AP board to fill expiring terms. The nominating committee has renominated the six directors whose terms are expiring and has nominated six additional candidates. The slate:

Burford Boone, Tuscaloosa, Ala. News; Millard Cope, Marshall, Tex.; News-Messenger; M. J. Frey, Portland, Ore.; Oregonian; Martin S. Hayden, Detroit, Mich.; News and Sunday News; William P. Knowland, Oakland, Calif.; Tribune; Kenneth MacDonald, Des Moines Iowa, Tribune; Robert McLean, Philadelphia, Pa.; Evening and Sunday Bulletin; John W. Runyon, Dallas, Tex.; Times Herald; Franklin D.

McKewen, South Bend, Ind., Tribune; John C. A. Watkins, Providence, R.I., Journal.

To represent cities of less than 50,000 population: Hugh N. Boyd, New Brunswick, N.J., Daily Home News and Sunday Times; and Clyde M. Reed, Parsons, Kan., Sun.

Incumbents renominated were McLean, MacDonald, Runyon, Cope, Schurz and Boyd.

McKelway also will preside at the luncheon Kennedy will address in the grand ballroom of the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel. Francis Cardinal Spellman, Roman Catholic archbishop of New York, will deliver the invocation.

The afternoon session will include a pictorial presentation of AP activities around the world.

nitely in the planning stages is an extensive expansion of the Carnation Company's Instant Milk plant here. It is rumored at being a $500,000 project promising doubled production capacity and an increased work force.

Lewis Towers, superintendent of the local plant, said an official announcement on the project is expected in late May or possibly June out of the company's Los Angeles office.

The fast-growing Quality Manufacturing Co., which builds ice cube machines for an international market, also is contemplating construction of a new factory.

Norman Lunde, president, said plans are being prepared for a new plant. He said the 11,000 square feet of plant space the firm now operates on at two sites is about 25 per cent of anticipated needs. His aims are 50,000 square feet of production space.

Steady Growth

The firm started manufacturing ice cube machines at what was once the Bond Pickle Co. factory in January, 1961. It has since outgrown the site and a second plant which it moved into for partial assembly several months ago.

Already completed and in operation is the Zarnoth Brush Works factory on New Holstein Street. The 4,000 square foot plant that houses Zarnoth's unique business was completed in January. Operations began shortly thereafter. Cost of the plant was not disclosed.

Even successful completion of every planned and actual project, would result in only a comparatively moderate effect on the city's tax base. The courthouse and hospital are not taxable. The Carnation Co. plant, though considered a part of Chilton, is actually just across the boundary line and is located in the Town of Charlestown. Its taxes will go there.

The Aluminum Specialty addition will have a bearing on taxes and so will the Zarnoth Brush Works. Lunde has not announced the site of his proposed plant, thus its tax value cannot be determined.

Madison Police Detective Heizer said "We're still trying to get this thing untangled."

The scheme would not have been discovered until the end of the month when Ray-O-Vac was to receive its bank statement had not Manpower billed Gisholt for the delivery girl's services.

The bank said the loss is insured.

Plan Talks

11-Day Strike

MADISON (AP) — The Wisconsin Employment Relations Board has arranged a mediation session for Tuesday in an attempt to settle an 11-day Teamsters Union strike which has halted major construction projects in the Madison area.

The Madison Employers' council and officers of Teamsters Local 695 have agreed to attend.

University of Wisconsin officials and the State Bureau of Engineering and Department of Administration have discussed the possibility of asking Gov. Gaylord Nelson to intervene if a settlement does not result from the scheduled meeting.

About 120 teamsters struck April 11 in support of wage and job benefit demands. Picket lines were established at 15 Madison area ready-mix concrete and building supply firm headquarters.

Analysts Look To Future for Market Rallies

Stock's Value Not Estimated Strictly On Price Basis

BY JOE BECKMAN

Chicago Daily News Service

CHICAGO — "We heard about the 'fall rally,' and it never came. Then we heard about the 'year-end rally,' and it lasted one day. Then it was the 'spring rally,' and we're still looking for it. What's next, the 'summer rally'?"

Speaking was a highly disgruntled and profitless — stockholder and he spoke for many other shareowners.

There's one thing about predictions, as a partner of a large Chicago brokerage house once said:

"When you're in a market that's trending downward, if you keep predicting an upturn, eventually you'll be right, and therefore a hero, even if it takes 10 years. Then you can say, 'Remember, you heard it here first.' The same is true if you're a bear in a bull market."

Future Thoughts

Investors and traders have a stock in trade made up almost entirely of the future. Past and present affect a stock, it's true. But what actually causes a stock's price to jiggle in one direction or the other is what all people who hold the stock, or who would hold the stock, think about its future.

Estimating a stock's value strictly on the basis of price can be a relative thing. For example, a stockholder who bought American Motors at 5 several years ago might have considered that, when he sold it at 10, he had pulled off a great coup.

Another stockholder, buying it at 10, felt the same way when he sold it at 24. And so on up to the time the same stock reached the low 90s.

The same idea can be applied to the market as a whole.

While some analysts say they look for the market to continue downward to the 650 level in the Dow Jones Industrial Average, the number is growing of those who say, "How much lower can the market go?"

Analysts Join In

It was a small but hardy band, made up mainly of technicians, who for several weeks kept saying the market was about ready to turn upward. Now, slowly but surely, a few analysts who put their trust in fundamentals have begun to join the group.

They point to the fact that many stocks have come down to about their year's lows and are, in many cases, resisting further decline.

While a rally of any proportions would be mainly a technical one after the weeks of selling, it would at least carry the DJ industrial back to the 730-740 level, they say. Many technicians still see the 800-plus area as the target for this year.

Eventually the public at large will join one group.

Maybe the thing to discuss would be a "late spring rally," or maybe the "summer rally," at that.

Utility Service May Become Political Issue

Private and Rural Units Clash Over Right to Serve Areas

WASHINGTON (AP) — The

swift urban and suburban expansion into rural America is generating a controversy over electric power service that could soon become a major political issue.

On one side are the privately owned and municipally owned electric utilities. On the other are farmer electric co-operatives.

At stake is the right to sell in rural areas being added to urban and suburban communities.

Before Legislatures

The issue already has come before a number of state legislatures.

In many parts of the country, rural areas being annexed by towns and cities have been supplied with electricity by farm co-operatives financed by loans from the Rural Electrification Administration. These co-operatives want to continue to serve these areas.

But the private power companies and municipal electric units want to take over these customers.

It is a case, contend the farm co-operatives, of the power companies "seeking to skim the cream again — on milk they did not produce."

The power companies argue

Attention Directed Toward Unhealthy Over-Sized Dogs

LONDON (AP) — A British manufacturer is marketing a prepared reducing diet for overweight dogs.

The company also offers chafis so that a fat dog's progress toward a normal waistline can be checked.

The canned product includes fresh meat, liver, ground bones, vegetable fiber, vitamins and minerals.

Theoretically, this doggy diet is available only through veterinary surgeons.

Dogs tend to be pampered in Britain. Many a pedigreed spaniel waddles along like a wounded hearthrug. British animal societies carry on an endless campaign against owners who feed crackers and candy to pets between meals.

that the co-operatives have no legal or moral right to customers in urban areas.

The REA, which has loaned $5 billion to more than a thousand such co-operatives and public power districts since its establishment in 1936, has drafted what it calls a model territorial integrity act.

The act would give the co-operatives exclusive rights to service any of their service areas annexed to towns and cities.

The private power companies also argue that co-operatives get federal loans at a much lower rate of interest—2 per cent a year—than that paid by the privately owned concerns. Furthermore, the co-ops are exempted, in most states, from regulation of rates and service to which the private concerns are subject.

Much Prosperity Hurting Japanese Economy

BY ALAN CLINE

TOKYO (AP)—Too much boom. That, in the view of many Japanese leaders, sums up the trouble with this island nation today. They feel the economy really is sick, although outwardly buoyant with health.

Government people and economists use the popular term "overheating" to cover what they consider an excess of production and growth.

There is nearly full employment. The standard of living is rising. Stores are loaded with goods. Prices are rising, however, and the nation's foreign exchange reserves dropped drastically last year.

Out of Hand

In many ways, the situation is similar to that in Germany, the other major foe of the United States in World War II. Officials there, too, see signs that prosperity is getting out of hand.

Japan's foreign exchange reserves have dwindled as dollars were spent abroad for machines and tools needed for industrial expansion. Everyone has wanted to get in on the ground floor of men and economists.

Prime Minister Hayato Ikeda's plan to double the gross national product between 1960 and 1970. This scheme called for a yearly advance of 7.2 per cent. Last year the rate shot up to 11.6.

Key Issue

An important upper house election is scheduled for July, and the economic situation is certain to be a key issue.

The foreign exchange problem, though probably not understood by a great majority of the electorate, is particularly vexing to business.

Aichiro Fujiyama, a potential Ikeda opponent although a member of the prime minister's Cabinet, says there can be no optimism about the state of the Japanese dollar reserves.

"Production continues to rise. People are spending too much," says Fujiyama, director of the Economic Planning Agency.

The Ministry of International Trade and Industry says manufacturers, though heavy with inventory, have been continuing production "unchecked on a fairly high level." It sees the solution in a tight money market and higher interest on bank loans.

Fujiyama and the Bank of Japan go along with this reasoning. The bank, owned primarily by the government, hiked interest rates twice last year.

Mexico Opens Superhighway

PUEBLA, Mexico (AP) — The tourist driving between Mexico City and this colonial capital had his choice this week: An old route featuring history, beauty and hair-pin turns, or a new speedway.

Puebla is Mexico's fourth city. For almost four centuries the highway to Mexico City has followed virtually the route worked out by Hernan Cortes, the Spanish conqueror. It twists over mountains, some 12,000 feet high, with steep grades and 380 curves over 70 miles long. You can drive 60-75 miles an hour on a divided highway, whizzing by more than 100 underpasses and overpasses.

Through tolls, expected to be a dollar or less, the government hopes to recover in 20 years the $16 million invested. There is only one midway toll station, so tourists traveling out of Mexico City to see snow-capped Popocatepetl volcano need not pay.

The speedway, already open, will be dedicated by President Adolfo Lopez Mateos May 5, when a $5-million fair opens at Puebla.

The old highway remains free. It goes by the Emperor's Bridge, still sturdy, where Emperor Maximilian said goodbye to Empress Carlotta, heading for Europe, to seek help from Napoleon.

Molten Copper Spills On Workmen, One Dies

NEW YORK (AP)—A cable supporting a crucible of molten copper snapped and dumped the contents onto five workmen at the Phelps Dodge Corp. plant. One man died and the others were seriously injured.

Lindsay Brown, 30, Brooklyn, died early Saturday of injuries suffered in the accident Friday night at the Long Island City, Queens plant. He was struck a glancing blow by the falling crucible and was burned by the molten metal.

BAD GODESBERG, Germany — Women here are learning to shop by car. That's nothing new for American wives but it's a revolution for German housewives. The German women usually are more careful than their husbands in our opinion has no right to be behind the wheel, but they throw caution to the wind when they spot a vacant parking space.

Much Prosperity Hurting Japanese Economy

BY ALAN CLINE
TOKYO (AP)—Too much boom, that, in the view of many Japanese leaders, sums up the trouble with this island nation today. They feel the economy really is sick, although outwardly buoyant with health.

Government people and economists use the popular term "over-heating" to cover what they consider an excess of production and growth.

There is nearly full employment. The standard of living is rising. Stores are loaded with goods. Prices are rising, however, and the nation's foreign exchange reserves dropped drastically last year.

Out of Hand
In many ways, the situation is similar to that in Germany, the other major foe of the United States in World War II. Officials there, too, see signs that prosperity is getting out of hand.

Japan's foreign exchange reserves have dwindled as dollars were spent abroad for machines and tools needed for industrial expansion. Everyone has wanted to get in on the ground floor of Prime Minister Hayato Ikeda's plan to double the gross national product between 1960 and 1970.

This scheme called for a yearly advance of 7.2 per cent. Last year the rate shot up to 11.6.

Key Issue
An important upper house election is scheduled for July, and the economic situation is certain to be a key issue.

The foreign exchange problem, though probably not understood by a great majority of the electorate, is particularly vexing to businessmen and economists.

Aichiro Fujiyama, a potential Ikeda opponent although a member of the prime minister's Cabinet, says there can be no optimism about the state of the Japanese dollar reserves.

"Production continues to rise. People are spending too much," says Fujiyama, director of the Economic Planning Agency.

The Ministry of International Trade and Industry says manufacturers, though heavy with inventory, have been continuing production "unchecked on a fairly high level." It sees the solution in a tight money market and higher interest on bank loans.

Mexico Opens Superhighway

PUEBLA, Mexico (AP) — The tourist driving between Mexico City and this colonial capital had his choice this week: An old route featuring history, beauty and hairpin turns, or a new superhighway.

Puebla is Mexico's fourth city. For almost four centuries the highway to Mexico City has followed virtually the route worked out by Hernan Cortes, the Spanish conqueror. It twists over mountains, some 12,000 feet high, with steep grades and 380 curves over drive 60-75 miles an hour on a divided highway, whizzing by more than 100 underpasses and overpasses.

Through tolls, expected to be a dollar or less, the government hopes to recover in 20 years the $16 million invested. There is only one midway toll station, so tourists traveling out of Mexico City to see snow-capped Popocatepetl volcano need not pay.

The speedway, already open, will be dedicated by President Adolfo Lopez Mateos May 5, when a $5-million fair opens at Puebla.

The old highway remains free. It goes by the Emperor's Bridge, still sturdy, where Emperor Max-

Molten Copper Spills On Workmen, One Dies

NEW YORK (AP)—A cable supporting a crucible of molten copper snapped and dumped the contents onto five workmen at the Phelps Dodge Corp. plant. One man died and the others were seriously injured.

Lindsay Brown, 30, Brooklyn, died early Saturday of injuries suffered in the accident Friday night at the Long Island City, Queens plant. He was struck a glancing blow by the falling crucible and was burned by the molten metal.

Use Covers Where Grass Won't Grow

Have Advantage of Not Requiring a Lot of Upkeep

Nearly every home has a spot or two where grass won't do well or requires too much effort to grow. It can be a steep slope, an irregular bed that's hard to mow, or a densely shaded place under a tree. Ground covers solve such problems and when well established, they require almost no upkeep.

The term ground cover usually means plants grown to cover soil, either to improve its appearance or protect it from erosion. In this sense grass is the most widely used ground cover, but other plants have individual advantages. Some are evergreen, others have attractive flowers, or survive lack of care. They don't have the ruglike look of grass, but have interesting textures.

Best Kinds
The best kinds to choose are durable, rapid spreaders that hug every node that touches the soil or progress by runners. The best season to plant is early spring in the north, early spring or early fall in a mild climate.

You can buy ground cover plants either locally or from mail-order nurseries. Most ground covers are sold in small sizes after being grown in pots to establish good root systems. Vigorous types may be shipped in bundles, bare root. Estimate that you'll need at least one plant per square foot.

If you're lucky enough to have a friend who can give you a start, separate crowded older clumps into as many divisions as possible rather than planting an entire clump. Sometimes it pays to put these small divisions into a row in the garden, and cultivate and tend for a year, to get them growing vigorously.

When planting ground cover, prepare the soil as carefully as you would for choice plants. Dig the full depth of a spade, and mix in deep peat moss or compost if available. Rake in two or three pounds of a balanced plant food such as 6-10-4 for each 100 square feet.

Dig Trenches
If setting small rooted divisions (as periwinkle) you can dig shallow parallel trenches about 18 inches apart, and space the plants in them at intervals of six to 12 inches. Larger plants or clumps can be spaced equidistant in staggered rows. When the ground has been spaded deeply, the planting goes swiftly. Use a trowel for setting.

KPs to Sponsor 5th Annual Home Show

Here's How To Map Plan For Property

You should keep in mind these three important facts when planning a new property or reorganizing your present one: (1) You are planning for the convenience of your family, and needs will change if your family grows; (2) You have certain fixed features with which to work, such as the shape and size of your house and lot, and (3) Whatever you plan will be kept up by members of your family or by paid labor.

A practical plan involves proper placement of the three main divisions of your lot: the public, service, and private areas. The public area is that which is visible from the street. The service area may

40 Exhibits to Give Ideas For Building, Remodeling, Repairing, Decorating Homes

Got the spring urge to clean up, paint up, fix up, or maybe start all over again?

If you do, the Valley Fair home show is the spot for you. And if you don't, the show will probably give it to you.

The fifth annual Valley Fair Home Show will be held in the enclosed weatherproof mall May 23 through 26. Official show hours will be from 1 to 9 p.m. each day.

Sponsored by KP Lodge 40

The show is being sponsored for the first time by the Knights of Pythias Lodge, an Appleton fraternal organization which has more than 20 years experience conducting similar shows in its own building and at the Appleton Armory.

This is the only show being planned for the Fox Cities area. It will provide an opportunity for firms from the entire area to display, demonstrate and pass out literature on products and services they offer for home building, remodeling, repairing and decorating.

Organ music is planned as an entertainment background for the show. Amusement rides and concessions will be available in the parking area. There is no admission charge for the home show, and ride discount tickets will be provided to shoppers through the stores.

Space for 40 Exhibitors
About 20 exhibitors have already reserved space for the show, which has accommodations for about 40 exhibitors.

The K.P. lodge has its own booths and other equipment, and is handling all arrangements with participating exhibitors. Attractive drapery covered booths will be erected along the mall, with electrical outlets provided for each booth. David Meyer and Frank Lappen of the lodge are co-chairmen.

Shows in past years were arranged by the E.Z. Housekeeping Institute of Milwaukee and the Valley Fair Merchants Association.

include space for deliveries, garbage disposal, and laundry lines. The private area, usually at the rear, includes the porch, terrace, play area, and garden.

Convenience is vital. Put a good deal of thinking into your lot's circulation system. Plan so that you can circle the house without jumping over a hedge, be certain that access isn't hindered by a too-narrow gateway, and that you don't have an obstacle course between the house and clothesline.

Grading adds to convenience. Grade not only to set off your house to the best advantage, but also to make the areas around it comfortably level to live and walk on. And don't neglect grading for good drainage.

The outdoor living area should be conveniently located and well equipped.

Common Periwinkle surrounding the trees in this back yard living area solves the mowing problem and does well in sun or shade. It is hardy in all but extreme northern areas of the United States. The ground cover is an evergreen trailer that roots at every node, so soon makes a dense mat. Rooted shoots or divisions should be planted 10 to 12 inches apart.

The Durable, Built-In furniture in this boy's room leaves plenty of play space, says Better Homes & Gardens magazine. The desk and chest are unfinished pieces carved with wood-grain plastic to take a lot of wear and tear and give long service. Insulating cork which is stained dark brown covers the walls above the unit and provides a mammoth pin-up space.

Be Careful in Remodeling

Exterior Changes Should Provide Unity of Design

Tasteful exterior home remodeling creates the impression that the altered house was planned and built all at the same time.

Often, especially with additions, it's a problem of integration, that is, maintaining uniform roof shape and slope, and lining up window and door heads.

Exterior materials should be related to site as well as to architectural style of the house. Natural woods, for instance, make a home part of a forest area, and colored stucco looks best in the sun.

Just as good interior decorating schemes center on one color with smaller areas of accent color, a well-designed exterior wall is made up of one material with others in contrast. White clapboard, for example, brings out the strong texture of stone if enough is used so the wood counts as a secondary material.

Can Improve

Additions can improve the proportions of a house by adding breadth and producing a roof-lowering effect, or a drop roof on an addition can break the roof line away from a husky, central chimney, to illustrate the range of problems which can be solved by exterior face lifting.

Here are some principles of good design to keep in mind when remodeling the exterior of your home:

Stress horizontal lines with wide siding and windows.

Use shutters on long, narrow windows.

Reduce overbearing height by bringing the ground level up to the top of the foundation.

Eliminate fancy or ornate arrangements and carvings.

Select a color scheme for making the house seem low and wide rather than high and narrow.

Simple Grounding Wire
To make a grounding wire for an electrical shop tool which does not have one, attach a wire to a screw on the metal tool frame or case. Connect the other end of the wire to a grounding clamp and attach the clamp to a cold water pipe or a grounded conduit.

Bedrooms for Youngsters

Children Need Space For Study and Play

A youngster needs room to study, as well as space to play in a bedroom.

A boy wants a room where he can "hole up" with his friends. Even a little girl craves a spot that is usable — which to her means open play space, and a place to keep her many "treasures." And it's essential that both rooms include provisions for studying and hobbies. Then, too, children as well as adults need dressing facilities — mirrors, artificial light, privacy — and should have the bedroom located near the bath.

Every little girl deserves some frills in her bedroom decorations. But it's wise to limit them to more personal elements — draperies, bedspreads, wall coverings and accessories. All fabrics should shrug off soil and wrinkles.

Furniture for boys should have simple, masculine lines, and should not be too easy to mar.

Should Clean Easily

Walls in children's rooms must be able to take punishment and also have some sound-deadening value. Keeping these walls clean can be a chore if crayon and pencil marks or smudges don't wipe off easily. The floors, too, should be able to stand a little action.

Since bedroom light fixtures often are viewed from a reclining position, exposed bulbs should be covered and care should be taken to see that globes are not excessively bright when lighted.

Children need low selves to bring toys within easy-reach, low drawers for clothing, reachable hooks and closet rods. Include an automatic light in the closet so they can see what they are doing, and a safe step stool if they need to reach high.

Children grow rapidly, so choose furniture to suit their "grown-up" taste, too.

As youngsters acquire more possessions, a well-designed built-in can be adjusted to accommodate them. Most toys for indoor play can be stored on shelves 12 inches deep. Racks for books and records can be made by nailing wood strips to 2-inch-square wood blocks, then screwing blocks to wall studs. Quarter-round molding on front edge keeps books in

Plan Bathroom Luxury Room

Eliminate Windows If Possible When Planning to Build

Built-in and color-matched tubs, lavatory counters and storage facilities, bigger mirrors, better lighting, and privacy partitions between fixtures are fast converting the bathroom into one of the most luxurious rooms in the home.

The old concept of the bathroom as being an inconspicuous little room has been discarded, and it now resembles a combination dressing room-lounge.

In remodeling a bathroom, it's a good idea to either eliminate windows in favor of skylights or make them large enough so they don't label the room from the exterior. The best location for bathroom windows is usually on either side of the lavatory counter.

Basic Colors

Choose basic or somewhat neutral background colors for your bathroom, colors which will allow you to change the decorating scheme with towels, curtains and shower curtain. Use decorative containers for soap and cleaning aids.

Plan artificial light to avoid shadows on mirrors. Light should be in line with the face and shielded. Shower stalls should have an overhead light. An exhaust fan is important to take out moisture and freshen air. As a safety measure, place all electrical switches outside the entrance.

Provide plenty of storage space for towels, toilet articles, makeup, first-aid supplies, and cleaning materials. And you'll want a clothes hamper or a chute to the laundry room.

If yours is a large family, consider twin lavatories, a separated tub and shower for time savers and convenience. Folding doors, ceiling-to-floor dividers, and cabinets all can be utilized to provide separate compartments. Select wall and floor coverings with protection from moisture and ease of cleaning in mind.

If you're in need of a second bath, back-to-back closets between two bedrooms can be converted. Remove the wall between the closets but leave the doors for easy access from either bedroom. Many end-of-the-hall areas can be remodeled into half-baths opening into bedrooms and under stairs space is often large enough.

Get More Use Out of Your Lot By Making Lawn Into Livingroom

Here is moral support, if you need it, on two items:

- (1) working less on your yard, enjoying it more; and
- (2) putting up a fence.

The experts are now urging both of these courses of action for the home owner.

There was a time when American families were yard-proud and fence-shy. A yard was a show-place to be kept in perennial competition with the neighbor's. A fence was often considered unbecomingly.

Nowadays, even the landscape and garden specialists are pushing the idea that some of the plant life should move over and make room for the family. Architects have long insisted that space is becoming too valuable to pass up the chance for an outdoor living room that can be enjoyed many months of the year.

Champions of the modern family's right to peace and privacy in a worrisome world, they have boldly walled off yards with wooden fences, high and handsome.

Good sense makes good manners today, say the better-living experts. Your neighbors in a yard agree, split the cost, and the fence can be placed exactly on the lot lines.

Autumn is a good time to get the fence up, the National Lumber Manufacturers Association suggests. Winter is a good time to build your outdoor furniture, if you are a home craftsman. Come spring, you can start arranging your outdoor living plan, using plants and shrubs as background decorative effects or as "partition" for your family yard activities.

Your local lumber dealer can give you information on fences and outdoor furniture. And your nurseryman can advise you on garden arrangements that have the advantage of simplicity and minimum upkeep.

Other Choices
If you feel that the high, solid fences that wall off the patios of so many of today's custom-built homes are a little too "modern" for your house and neighborhood, there are many other pleasing choices in wood fences, from rustic and informal to elaborate and formal. The picket fence never goes out of style. Materials for many types of fences are carried as stock items by the dealer, and cost depends more upon the amount of "special material" used rather than upon the size or style of the fence.

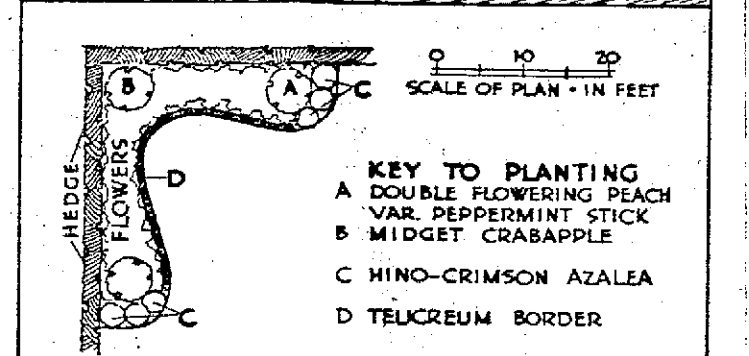

You can get more use out of your yard, and cut down on future yard work, if you pave part of it — laying stones, brick or wood "rounds" for a pleasing informal effect. Add a wooden shelter over part, or all, of the terrace, and again you multiply the use value of your outdoor space.

Outdoor living is pleasant and takes a good deal of strain off today's smaller houses. The more living outdoors, the less house-keeping and the less wear and tear on furniture, walls, and floors indoors.

That's why the petunias are moved over. Here comes the family!

It's Your Landscape

Put Trees, Shrubs in Garden for Interest

BY GEORGE E. CREED
Landscape Architect

Small trees and shrubs can add vertical interest and contrast to a flower garden or border, but you must be careful in your choice and use of them. Obviously tall-growing, wide-spreading trees with dense foliage are not suitable for a flower garden.

Select those with compact forms. Some with loose, open forms may also be suitable if they have other commendable features such as good foliage and flowers. Small trees that have been trained to grow on one stem (called standards) lend themselves especially well to garden.

Trees and shrubs should be used as adjuncts and not be overwhelming in themselves. Therefore limit their use to a bare minimum.

Their arrangement is also of great importance. They should be placed to complement and strengthen the design of the garden. Texture and color of leaves should also be considered. For example, avoid those with exceptionally large leaves or exotically colored ones.

An example of the use of trees and shrubs is shown in the accompanying plan. The peach trees are small and few enough to never dominate the garden, except when they are in bloom. Then their blossoms are spectacular. They bloom before the leaves come out on their branches, so the none of their floral beauty is hidden.

The shrubs are evergreen azaleas.

cas. Note that they, too, are few in number. Their main function is to provide closure of an interesting nature at the ends of the bed, but in spring they also furnish masses of blooms, which add to the over-all beauty of the bed.

Other interesting plants that could be used are: American Holly, Japanese Holly, Stokes Holly, Andromeda, Hick's Yew, Dwarf Japanese Yew, Remont Norway Spruce, Dwarf Flowering Almond; white, pink and red varieties of the Double Flowering Peach and Wisterias grown on standards.

Q. Do you recommend the multiflora rose as a hedge on a small property?

A. No. It is too vigorous in growth for a small place. I would, however, recommend some of the floribunda roses for this use.

Q. In pruning an American holly how far back on a stem can you cut without damaging the plant?

A. As far as you wish, providing you leave at least one bud or leaf between the cut and the main stem.

Noisy Window Cure

When windows rattle, they usually can be controlled by taking off the window stop, filling the nail holes and re-nailing close to the sash. The window slides should be waxed with paraffin or a candle to prevent sticking of the sash.

Brush at Angles

For the smoothest possible stroke when applying enamel or varnish, hold the brush handle at an angle of about 60 degrees to the surface being coated, with the dry brush with the grain.

Ponder Border Plants' Height, Blossom Time

Carpet From Spring Until Autumn

A colorful ribbon of flowers an assortment will also help to along a drive, in front of a shrub-bery border, or as an edging for a garden of taller flowers can be most attractive for a home set-ting if it is done effectively. Here are a few suggestions for good border varieties: Snow Cloth Alyssum is easy-to-grow and will take into consideration not only the height and color of the flow-ers but also the time of bloom-ings. When you make your selec-tions, be sure to look on the back of the seed packets before you buy them. You should purchase only of seeds that tell the period of bloom as well as the height of the flow-ers and the time of germination. Ideally, it is desirable that your low-growing border plants should bloom from early spring till late fall. For this reason, it is per-quite close to the Royal Carpet's haps advisable to select several varieties for your border. Such

The Royal Carpet Alyssum, a purple edging flower, looks well next to a carpet of Snow Cloth, another edging flower. Both strains grow about the same height. Together, they will provide a lovely ribbon of purple and white from early until late in the season.

Blue Cap Ageratum. It's definite-ly taller than the Alyssums, though still a low-growing variety. The blue and white make an excel-lent combination.

If you'd prefer to begin with a color rather than white, there are several delightful possibilities. Among them are the dwarf Marigolds, like Yellow Pygmy (a light lemon yellow) and Golden Pygmy (a golden yellow). For a mixture of edging colors, I find nothing better than Portulaca, though it requires plenty of sunshine and would not do even for a partially shady spot.

Twinkle Little Star Phlox is still another good border choice. It's a very dwarf society, but somewhat similar to the Star of Quedlinburg. Both have the same star-shaped flowers with chintz-like markings and coloring.

If blue is your favorite color, by all means try the Blue Bells of California. This is a low growing plant known botanically as Phacelia. Crystal Palace Lobelia is another very dwarf flower, less than six inches tall. A somewhat taller blue is the Jubilee Gem Bachelor Button, growing to about one foot—considerably lower than most Bachelor Buttons. Jubilee Gem is the original dwarf variety of this family.

Another possibility for a low border is the Gem Nasturtium, either is a mixture or a single color. The Cherry Rose strain, a deep pink Nasturtium, is a real treat to the eyes.

No discussion of edging vari-eties is complete without some strain to brighten up the bed.

Starting From Seeds Simple

Also Saves You
Cash, Gives Sense Of Satisfaction

BY EDNA KING MANDEVILLE
Some people just do not seem to know how really simple it is to raise flowers from seeds.

When they see the beautiful flowers in the garden of a friend or neighbor, they seem to think that only an expert can get such results. Nothing can be further from the truth.

It is no exaggeration to say that, once planted, it is almost impossible to keep many flower seeds from growing into luxuri-ously flowered plants. Nature meant for seeds to grow. They will do so despite poor soil, drought, lack of cultivation and many other obstacles.

Take zinnias, for example. I recall once having a surplus of seeds that I threw on the ground ment of Verbena. These are al-so available either in mixed or separate colors, and an outstand-ing one is the bright Scarlet Defiance. Another is Lavender Glory, a most delicate shade of lavender with just a touch of white in the

Kentucky Bluegrass, Red, Fescues Yield Best Turf

DR. ROBERT W. SCHERY
Director, The Lawn Institute

Whether you savor your out-doors from a patio, or lounge on the soft grass itself, or dedicate the yard to children's athletics, this new dimension to your house must be "decorated." What will the wall-to-wall carpeting be, out-doors?

After all, it is the lawn which frames the shrubs and unifies the landscape. Even the most aristocratic shrubbery is defeated by a thin and scrawny lawn.

Fortunately it is no great task to have fine outdoor carpeting and at no great cost. Modern lawnkeeping has been made sim-ple through inexpensive applica-tors for quickly-applied products.

Any homeowner in his spare time can tend the better lawn grasses as they should be tended.

Cheap seed mixtures of coarse haygrasses can be by-passed in favor of famed Kentucky blue-grass bolstered with Oregon red fescues. Even elegant Highland bentgrass is within the capabili-ties of the average home. The bluegrass-red fescue combination needs no pampering or special upkeep. It yields good-looking, long-lasting, all-purpose turf.

Highland bentgrass benefits from a bit more watering and at-tention, but for those who want a "golf green" lawn the results are worth the effort.

Obviously one can't make coarse haygrasses into the kind of carpet we are talking about.

So first rule, in reseeding, is to avoid at all costs those bargain seed mixtures which promise everything for nothing. When scuffs or bare spots need re-seeding see that bluegrass, fes-cue or Highland bentgrass are not encumbered with much rye-grass. Avoid the coarse field-fescues entirely, for these intro-duce unsightly clumps the second year.

This fescue business may be a little confusing. The fescues of lawn royalty, the peers of Ken-tucky bluegrass, are only of the red fescue species. They may have such variety names as Chew-ing, Illahe, Pennlawn and Ram-ber. The hay fescues, on the other hand are called Kentucky-31 or Alta.

and raked in with no care at all. The growing conditions were just right — soil warm and damp with high temperature. Before the week end was over the seedlings were beginning to pop out of the ground.

The amazing rapidity with which some flower seeds sprout from the ground, grow into plants and produce blossoms, is one of the gardeners greatest thrills. Another is a walk through one's own garden in the early morn-ing, just to see what has happen-ed during the night.

Sometimes, if conditions are right, I can hardly recognize my garden. So many seedlings have sprouted, so many new buds have formed, and so many blossoms have opened into full beauty.

More Economical

There are other reasons for starting from seeds. It is much more economical. Contrary to common notions, with some va-rieties it produces better flowers earlier. Transplanting is likely to have a delaying effect. It also may produce a shock from which a plant never fully recovers.

I have seen two inch plants transplanted at the same time seed of the same variety have been sown. The plants "stand still" during their period of re-covery. The seeds, sprout and move on to the seedling and plant stage without delay and without the necessity of overcoming the shock of being transplanted.

Good Seed Carefully sowed into loose soil is a cure for bare spots and the road to success in new lawn mak-ing. Lawnowners in the northern areas will find their efforts richly rewarded by using Kentucky bluegrass — fine fescue combinations or Highland bentgrass for a luxurious growth or eye-pleasing lawn.

Modern Look For Kitchens

Built-in Look and Organization Save
Space and Work

The easiest way to give your kitchen a modern look is to make it appear "built-in" by adding bright-colored cabinets and continuous counters. Arrange your kitchen in an efficient work triangle and open it up to dining and play areas.

Today the kitchen serves as a multipurpose "family room" and is no longer a single purpose "Food preparation" center. When remodeling your kitchen, it pays to plan carefully so every inch will count. Desks can be built into a 20 or 24 inch space or can be hung on a wall. New laundry equipment fits in a more compact space than ever before.

Do a Double Job
One way to save space in your kitchen is to let each area do more than one job. A pass-through counter can double for an eating area, hobby center, or a place to line up buffet dinners. An extra sink takes little room, yet is handy for soaking jobs at laundry time, for vegetable and fruit washing and flower arranging. Laundries, sewing centers, and handy desk corners away from the main work centers can be as decorative and colorful as the rest of the kitchen.

Kitchens need a central lighting fixture large enough to illuminate the entire ceiling, plus lights above the sink, range, and work tops. Even if you install luminous ceiling fixtures, you still should meet the other requirements, utilizing shielded tubes and bulbs to prevent glare.

In a well-organized kitchen work center, utensils you need the most often are at your fingertips, with each as close as possible to the place where it's used first. Foods, also, are stored according to first use. You can also save many steps by keeping small, inexpensive items such as salt shakers and stirring spoons at all work areas where they are used.

Family Determines Size
The size of your family can help you determine the amount of storage space you will need in your kitchen. If possible, allow approximately six square feet of space on shelves for each person. It's a good idea to make lists of items to be stored and assign cabinet space before you build. Cabinets, as well as most-used foods and utensils, should be arranged for a minimum of stretching and stooping. There is a correct height for your size. Mixing, washing dishes, and rolling pie crust are best done at different counter heights.

Professional Decorator Saves Money

Professional decorating advice can help you save money in furnishing your home by guiding you past ordinary hazards which often plague an amateur. The decorator can tell you what furnishings are the best buys for you considering your particular problems and help coordinate your decorating.

Often, good professional advice is yours at no additional expense, or at a very nominal price. For instance, many department stores have home-planning centers where a trained decorator will help with your decorating problems as a part of the store's customer service.

Most larger stores have a deco-

The Commercial Serving cart pulls out from the counter in this remodeled kitchen. When not in use, it is stored out-of-traffice and is located close to the area where it's most likely to be loaded. Fluorescent fixtures over the counter keep the work tops shadow-free and a handy desk for the housewife is at the left.

Will Go Better

Color Can be Changed On Vinyl Wall Cover

Tired of the color of your vinyl wall coverings? Quality paints provide a simple way to change the wall color to one you like better or to one which will go better with new furnishings.

Successful painting of each of the correct paint system, and the National Paint, Varnish, Varnish Association has worked out an effective way to paint each type. Smooth fabric without design, smooth fabric with design, and textured fabric.

As in any paint job, the first step is proper preparation of the surface. This involves removing dirt, dust, oil, grease and similar stains. A detergent wash will get rid of most of them, but grease, wax, crayon, lipstick marks are best removed with odorless paint thinner. Any repairs should be made before the walls are cleaned. Animal glue or resin adhesives should be used because they are not affected by paint as are pressure, type and water-wetted adhesives. Be sure, of course, that you use only quality primers and paints, because only quality paints have lasting adhesion and hiding power and retain their color brilliance and are wear resistant. To be sure of getting quality products, ask a friend or neighbor who has had a satisfactory job what brand he used or consult your paint dealer.

Here is the proper paint system for each type of vinyl wall covering:
1. Smooth vinyl fabric without design—First brush on a coat of alkyl-based flat paint to act as a primer. After this has dried, apply a final coat of either latex paint or enamel.
2. Smooth Vinyl fabric with design—Use a latex primer-sealer (not an ordinary latex) to prevent the printed design from bleeding through. After this has dried, apply any quality latex or alkyl as a top coat.

Use Sealer
3. Textured vinyl fabric—Use an oil-based primer-sealer as the first coat, followed by any quality alkyl flat as a prime coat. Flat paints are generally used for walls and ceilings because they reflect light without glare. But in kitchens and bathrooms, a semi-gloss or gloss enamel is used for greater resistance to moisture and to withstand the repeated scrubbing required to remove grease deposited by steam.

The painting of flexible vinyl installations such as folding doors or partitions is not recommended because it is difficult to obtain a paint with sufficient flexibility.

Build Patio For Outdoor Enjoyment

Amount You Wish
To Spend on Work

Good home planning needn't stop at the walls of your house. You can plan to live on your lot from boundary to boundary. With a patio as the center of outdoor enjoyment, extending the dimensions and activities of indoor living to the outdoors for any occasion you want around the clock.

When planning a patio, you should first decide the uses your family will make of it. Do you want it for pure beauty, separation of house and garden, lounging, cooking and eating, entertaining, or children's play? Whatever the uses, you then must decide which kind of patio will best fit these family interests as well as the size of your family, your budget, the climate, and the available outdoor area.

When you think of patio flooring, roofing, screening and fencing, privacy, lighting, and plantings, you should keep in mind the basic patio plan.

Locate Patio
Locate your patio so you have a convenient indoor-outdoor relationship. Access from the living-dining area or the kitchen is best. Sliding glass doors allow the best movement ease.

The size of your patio depends both on the uses you plan for it and the money you can invest. You should probably consider a 12-foot width as a minimum. A good yardstick is the size of your living room.

The shape can be rectangular, circular, or free form. For a roof, regular shapes are the easiest to build and the best looking. For paved areas only, free forms are practical and pleasantly informal.

Relaxed Use
Privacy is essential for relaxed use of a patio. Plan to reduce exposure to the street, neighbors, an unpleasant view, or weather, without shutting out the cooling breezes.

Shade is most needed from the glaring afternoon sun. First try to use your house or existing trees for ready-made protection. If you build your shade, save a spot for sunning.

Right Grasses Important to Good Lawn

A lawn is neither a hay field nor crop land. Coarse grasses and high yielders are not wanted. What is wanted are permanent perennials, grasses that are attractively fine-leaved and able to spread into a sod.

Of course proper planting is important, but above all a lawn should be seeded with the right combination of grasses.

There is quite a distinction between good lawn seed and just grass seed. Yet many a homeowner will risk quite a few dollars and painful hours on seedbed preparation, just on a pretty picture on a box labeled grass seed. The same homeowner would not think of purchasing a car or an appliance without acquainting himself with its construction and capabilities. There are a number of factors governing quality for lawn seed. But trade ethics, competition, and government regulations take care of the intricate ones. No seed will reach the store shelf under reliable brand unless it is alive, and unless weed content is at a minimum.

Removing iron stains on concrete surfaces: If the stain is light and covers a considerable area, mop the concrete with a solution of one pound of oxalic acid crystals to one gallon of water. Let the solution stand for two to three hours, scrub with a stiff brush dipped in clear water and rinse. Repeat the process if the stain does not disappear.

For deep stains, dissolve one part sodium citrate crystals in six parts of water. Dip a white cloth in the solution and paste over the stain for 10 to 15 minutes. Then, on horizontal surfaces, sprinkle the stain with a thin layer of sodium hydrosulfite crystals, moisten with water, and cover with a stiff paste made of whitening and water.

Use Paste

On vertical surfaces scoop whitening paste onto a plasterer's trowel, sprinkle with hydrosulfite lightly, and apply to stain. Remove after one hour.

Do not leave longer and repeat the same process with fresh materials if the stain remains. When the surface is clean, rise with water.

Removing oil stains on concrete surfaces: If oil stains are mopped off immediately and covered with fuller's earth, hydrated lime, whitening, or dry portland cement, there should be no stain. If a light stain remains, scrub with gasoline.

Use Paste

Removing smoke stains on brick surfaces: Make a smooth stiff paste of trichloroethylene and powdered talc and apply to the stain with a trowel. If possible cover with a pan or glass to prevent too rapid evaporation. Repeat the operation until the stain disappears. If the stain persists, wash thoroughly, then dissolve two pounds of trisodium phosphate in five quarts of water.

In a separate enamel vessel, make a smooth, stiff paste and stir thoroughly. When the lime settles, draw off the clear liquid, dilute with equal parts of water, add powdered talc, and mix into a stiff paste.

Trowel the paste onto the stain and scrape off when dry. Caution: ventilate if you use trichloroethylene indoors.

Removing mortar stains on brick surfaces: Scrape off chunks of mortar with a putty knife. Soak the surface well with water. Then wash well with either a solution of one part hydrochloric acid to 10 parts of water. Wear rubber gloves and goggles. Rinse the brick surface thoroughly with clear water after the stain is removed, and wash out joints carefully.

Removing paint stains from masonry: Remove fresh paint with a commercial paint remover and wash the surface with turpentine. Scrape off old paint with a putty knife and clean with steel wool. Removing smoke stains on concrete: Scout with powdered pumice or gritty scrubbing powder. Then dissolve two pounds of trisodium phosphate in one gallon of hot water. In a separate enamel vessel, make a smooth, stiff paste of 12 ounces of chlorinated lime in water. Pour the two mixtures (trisodium phosphate and chlorinated lime) into a two-gallon stoneware jar and add water until full.

Stir the solution well, cover, and allow to settle. Saturate a three- or four-layer pad of white flannel with the liquid, paste it over the stain, and cover with a slab of concrete or glass. Make sure that the cloth is pressed tight against the stained surface. Resaturate the cloth as often as necessary. Removing copper stains on of paint over this.

paint: Sand the painted surface thoroughly and clean with turpentine. Apply pure lead-and-oil paint.

Removing rust on iron surfaces: Remove all rust particles with emery paper or steel wool. Then prime with red-lead paint (12 parts red-lead paste, 10 parts linseed oil, one part turpentine, and one part dryer). Apply finish coat of paint over this.

Rewiring Needed

Your using four times as much electricity in your home today as was used 23 years ago. Frequently blown out fuses, flickering lights and slow to work or heat up appliances may indicate that your home is inadequately wired to meet today's increased electricity demands and should be rewired.

Painting of Furniture For Outdoors

New Beauty Can be Applied Without Too Much Trouble

When outdoor furniture isn't baking in the sun or drowning in the rain, it's retired to several months of damp storage. No wonder it looks drab and dingy after a few seasons and desperately needs the beauty and protection provided by a quick coat of durable, quality enamel.

These tough exterior enamels, available in numerous colors, will perk up the saddest looking wood, iron, wicker or aluminum furniture. You'll find that aluminum furniture which has long since lost its sheen gains a handsome new look with a coat of enamel. If you want to keep the natural finish of wood furniture, there are clear exterior varnishes to enhance and protect the wood.

Preparation is very important. First scrub thoroughly, removing dust, dirt and oil with mineral spirits or odorless paint thinner. On previously painted surfaces, sand away and blistered or loose paint. Then roughen glossy areas with sandpaper to provide "tooth" for the new enamel.

On wooden furniture, cracks and rough spots should be sanded smooth. Holes should be filled with a good commercial filler.

Use Sandpaper
On metal furniture, as well as metal fittings on wooden furniture, rust must be thoroughly removed. Use steel wool or sandpaper.

Next, prime any spots of bare metal with a quality rust inhibiting primer, such as zinc chromate.

When selecting your enamel or varnish, be sure to specify a quality product made by a reputable manufacturer. The finish must be able to take a beating from the elements and yet look bright and fresh for a reasonable number of seasons. Only a quality paint assures you of a long-lasting, non-fading finish, in addition to easy application and proper coverage.

Colorwise, remember that blues, blue-greens, blue-lilacs and blue-grays are cooling. The warmer yellows and pinks are cheerful contrasts when limited to smaller usage. Of course, white is not only the freshest summer hue, but the best choice for any metal furniture which readily becomes hot in the sun. White enamel reflects about 84 per cent of the sun's heat, keeping metal surfaces comfortably cool.

You can apply your quality enamel by brush or spray. If you use the brush method, keep your strokes free and smooth, allowing the enamel to "flow" on generously. Don't refill your brush, but cross-stroke. This spreads the coating evenly and catches any excess. If you prefer to spray, which is the best method for wicker furniture, remember to protect the surrounding area with newspaper or drop cloths. Incidentally, if you haven't a spray gun, you can make use of the spray attachment on your vacuum cleaner.

You'll find it more comfortable to place chairs and tables on a bench or larger table and paint at that convenient height. Place them upside down and coat the under surfaces at legs, then put them rightside up to finish.

If you paint outdoors, select a day with little wind, you don't want seeds or dust to blow on the fresh finish. When painting indoors, have adequate ventilation.

Colorful Tile Used To Face Fireplaces

A fireplace — real or artificial — adds warmth and friendliness to a room. If it's properly surfaced, it can also add great beauty. Designers in increasing numbers are specifying fireproof, colorful ceramic tile as surfacing material for hearth, fireplace and mantel top. Ceramic tile now comes in a wide variety of sizes, shapes and patterns, in more than 200 colors.

Position of Porch Depends On Climate

If Cool, Put It On West of House; If Warm, on East

The placement of your family's sun and shade area, aside from the problems posed by the location of your house and lot, depends on the climate in which you live and the interests of your family.

If you live in a hot climate, you may want to locate a deck, terrace, or porch on the east side of your house away from the hot afternoon sun.

If yours is a cool climate, you'll want to be on the west side of the house and you'll want to build with materials which retain the heat.

If you enjoy family cookouts, you'll want to be near the kitchen. If you entertain evenings, you'll want to be away from the children's bedrooms.

Next, to determine what screening to use, decide what you want shelter from in addition to sunlight, wind, rain and insects. You may want to erect a louvered fence to give privacy as well as cut down a breeze. Or, to preserve a view, you may want to insert plate glass in a fence.

New mesh screening takes the edge off breezes, filters sunlight and gives a comfortable feeling of protection without one of enclosure, in addition to keeping out flies and mosquitoes.

Many shelters are partly roofed and partly open for those who like tempered sunlight, and often the terrace extends beyond the shelter into the sunlight.

Many shelters add architectural interest to a house by extending its lines and making it look larger.

Kaukauna Man Builds Ideal Summer Porch

Attractive Combination Fireplace, Grill Feature Makes Outdoor Living Easy

KAUKAUNA — A screened-in porch built to the rear of the home of Mr. and Mrs. Leo Eimmerman, 1116 Lave St., Kaukauna, provides the answer to comfortable outdoor summer living.

Eimmerman, an engineer with the S. J. Baisch and Associates firm, designed the 14 by 14 foot porch for easy living and it provides just that. Utilizing concrete and field stone, he built up the porch about 16 inches above ground level.

After pouring the concrete and at the same time, by giving it individuality.

How to Paint Brick

Only alkali-resistant paints should be used on masonry, and this includes brick, because mortar is alkaline. You have a choice of a number of paints for these surfaces: exterior latex masonry paints, portland cement paint (on previously unpainted or cement-painted surfaces), oil-modified masonry paint, and colorless silicone water repellent coatings. Be sure to follow label instructions carefully for information on surface preparation and application.

Consider Remodeling

If your family has outgrown your house and you're thinking of building on an addition, first consider remodeling what you already have. Consider converting your attic, basement or attached garage. They're already under the roof and the job will be much cheaper.

JFK's Lawn Needs Government Aids

BY UNCLE JACK

This is a friendly memorandum from one of his constituents to President John F. Kennedy, not about the way he is running the country, but about the way he is managing his White House lawn. On a recent trip to Washington and environs, the Beautiful Wife insisted upon a tour through the president's official residence and I traipsed along, more interested in the lawn and the landscaping than in the awesome number and mien of the security guards, the paintings, the richly furnished rooms and offices and the other attractions.

As an old lawn and garden duffer, I confess I was disappointed.

I must suppose that in a government that has millions of employees working under him, the president has the services of some gardeners and garden helpers. This is a tip to him that they are not doing as well as we might expect, from a Wisconsin standard of perspective.

Rich Accents Create Bright Color Plans

Rich accents in the interior of your home help to create bright color schemes when you remodel.

For instance, one family wanted to use blue in their living area. So, when they remodeled, they selected blue as the major background color.

Their decorator suggested incorporating blue into a complementary color scheme, that is, using orange as an accent color. (Orange and blue are opposites on the decorator's color wheel.) In this way, the color scheme combines warm and cool colors with one a check against the other's becoming too dominant.

Eating facilities can be included in the living room, too. A new, low, oval-shaped table serves for eating and also as a coffee and a family conference table.

Murals Add Interest

A wall mural can illustrate the major recreational interest of the family. Murals can be purchased pre-trimmed and pre-pasted. Starting at about $25, they come in 9- to 15-foot sections.

Mural wall coverings show off to best advantage when other furnishings are in solid colors. Give chairs and sofa new slip covers. Use of solid-color fabrics in the slip covers simplifies construction — there are no patterns to match. These colors also make them a unifying factor in the decorating scheme.

A dramatic effect can be added to the room by inserting a colored bulb in the recessed ceiling fixture over the table. The fixture is placed to highlight the furniture grouping.

The lawn is weedy. It is lumpy in spots, and some of the bare sections suggest the lack of a sound fertilizing program.

There is a nice variety of landscape shrubs and ornamental trees, but the pruning leaves something to be desired, although I don't want this to sound like a heckler writing to his congressman.

Nor do I want to make a poor joke out of the president's famous speech theme at the acceptance ceremonies at Los Angeles in the summer of 1960, but let not these gardeners ask what the country can do for them, but what they can do for their country.

This is a national institution. Perhaps a million Americans come to view it each year. If the normal ratio of gardeners in the population holds out, Kennedy may stand to lose some votes.

Washington is fun in the spring. To the garden devotee. It has a lead of several weeks to a month over our Wisconsin climate, and a considerably wider range of plant and landscaping materials available as a consequence. As a tourist guess, the soil is not as naturally fertile as ours—but I'm sure that the U. S. budget could afford a White House soil improvement allotment.

Wall-Hung Furniture

Wall-hung furniture in your child's room is convenient from birth through many birthdays to come. Dressers, desks, bookshelves and blackboards hung on sturdy, adjustable wall brackets can easily be raised as your child grows.

Re-Cement Chimney

A broken or loose chimney cap lets water seep into the mortar joints below. Chip and clean out the old mortar. Then wet the break with water and trowel in fresh cement.

Many Possible Adaptations for Empty Basement

You can convert your basement from a seldom-used area to the most-used room in your home. And in a basement, you have the advantage that the work can be accomplished without disrupting other room to your house.

den or study, a television room, a workshop, or even an apartment.

Home building materials retailers offer a choice of many inexpensive and easy-to-use products to help you make use of your basement and, in effect, add another room to your house.

For basement floors, you have a choice of many attractive resilient materials which can be laid on concrete. For extra quiet, acoustical tile can be used on the ceiling. And there are masonry paints and gypsum, fiberboard, plywood, and numerous wood panels for the walls.

Motivate With Color

Youngsters, like simple, primary colors. A bright, accessible storage unit in your boy's room might entice him to put away his toys and clothes.

Kitchen Can be Made Cheerful by Painting

Despite today's convenience color change whenever it's foods and time-saving appliances, wanted. the average housewife spends many hours in the kitchen. To make daily chores as pleasant as possible, the kitchen should be cheerful as well as efficient. Quality enamel which is available in hundreds of colors, is the most practical means of making it so. Quality enamel provides a beautiful, care-free finish which can withstand scrubbing and retain its original bright color. In addition, this tough coating prevents ever-present moisture caused by cooking and washing from seeping through the walls and eventually causing expensive damage.

Be sure, however, to use only quality enamel, made by a reputable manufacturer whose high grade product is your assurance of thorough hiding power, non-fading color and long-lasting finish. Consult your established, reliable paint dealer for his recommendations, or check with a friend who has finished an enameling job to his full satisfaction.

Colorfully speaking, enamel offers unlimited selection of tints and shades of every hue. Because it can easily be applied by the do-it-yourselfer at a cost of about ten dollars for the entire average size kitchen, quality enamel provides the means to enjoy a refreshing

Hedge Solves All Kinds Of Landscaping Problems

Need an all-purpose plant to solve a landscape problem? Try planting a hedge.

Look over your home grounds. See if you don't have some landscaping job that could be performed to perfection by a purposeful hedge. Some examples:

To make the bounds of property so that it comes to a definite stop instead of merging vaguely with whatever lies next door.

To keep children, dogs, milkmen and other heedless trespassers from blazing trails across the turf.

To form a windscreen against a stiff breeze across the patio.

To provide a high background to show off animals or low flowering shrubs.

To furnish a low foreground planting to separate a flower bed from a walkway or grass area.

To cut down an oversized or poorly proportioned yard.

The hedge does not have to be a privet. As alternatives you can use abelia; the box, holly and bayberry families; a wide variety of conifers — Canada hemlock, American arborvitae, juniper, yew, pine, spruce and red-cedar.

Blocked Gutters Will Cause Paint to Peel

If your gutters were blocked with ice and snow this past winter you may find that paint will be peeling from your house later this spring. Water, prevented from running down the clogged spouts, may have been forced under the roof and into the siding, causing the wood to swell and forcing the paint off. To prove this to yourself, take two pencils.

Paint the end of one with exterior enamel or housepaint, leaving the end of the other bare. Now stand both pencils in a large glass of water and leave them there.

Eventually, the lacquer will peel away from the pencil with the unpainted end as the water causes the wood to swell. This is what happens when water invades house siding.

No Detergent, Tissue Problem in Fox Cities

Sewage, Water Plants Use Methods That Don't Cause Foaming, Clogging Woes

BY REINY WESSING
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

The Fox Cities apparently are escaping the problems some cities are experiencing because of two common household items—detergents and facial tissues.

Detergents foam and suds endlessly at some sewage treatment plants, creating billowy mountains on sludge drying beds.

Water is beginning to suds-up too, particularly in areas where wells are the source of supply. Detergents get into the ground through use of septic tanks.

A new type of facial tissue, with extra strength, is reported to be clogging certain types of screens at sewage treatment plants. The tissues don't disintegrate like ordinary tissues.

Appleton, and Neenah-Menasha, though inadvertently, have protected themselves against these two useful and innocent, yet troublesome, products.

The foaming and sudsing problem doesn't exist because the sewage treatment plants use a method of sewage digestion which forces bacteria to get oxygen from the material in the sewage itself. Air is not pumped into the sewage to promote bacteria growth as is done in some cities.

When air is pumped in, detergents are at their foaming best.

New Tissues
The new wet-strength facial tissues haven't become a problem, either, because the type of screen used at the sewage plants is a bar screen, not a drum screen. Tissues which clog up a drum can get through between the bars, Appleton Director of Public Works Edwin Duszynski and Arnold Sorenson, superintendent of the Neenah-Menasha sewage disposal plant, say.

The vertical bars are about a half inch apart. A drum screen is a cylinder full of holes. The tissues fill up the holes.

William Gallaher, water plant superintendent, says detergents have not become a problem. Appleton's source of water supply is the Fox River.

"When you have pretty fair sized stream like the Fox River, which has a fairly good stream flow, the detergents dumped in by sewage plants are spread very thin and you don't get a big concentration of them," he says.

"Besides," Gallaher continued, "we have to do an extremely thorough job of purification because we use river water that contains municipal and industrial wastes. Also, we get a high concentration of algae from Lake Winnebago."

Heavy Treatment
"By the time we get through treating the water for all of these

Outagamie County Needs New, Modern Facilities for Air Travel

Stripped of Engineering Idioms, Report Backs Facts in 'Nose Count'

BY JAY REED

Post-Crescent Staff Writer

Outagamie County needs new, modern facilities for air travel. Stripped of its charts, drawings and slide-rule idiom, this was the basic conclusion of a voluminous master plan report delivered at mid-week to the board of supervisors in Appleton.

So confident, in fact, are the engineers who made a deeply complex analytical measurement of the county's airport problem that they voiced belief a new Outagamie port could rank within the top one quarter of all airline stations in the country.

The engineering findings concur with preliminary surveys made by the Appleton Chamber of Commerce early in the county's fight for scheduled airline service.

How did the airport development scientists determine this need? They went about it, largely, by the unscientific method of counting noses — those who use the airport facilities available now, those who will begin to use air facilities once they are more adequate in Outagamie County and those who won't ever travel by air.

Transfer Flights

The total passenger volumes forecast for Outagamie County are based on the fact that over 60 per cent of the present volume of passengers at Winnebago Airport originates at Neenah-Menasha, Appleton or locations north of Neenah. After construction of a new Outagamie airport, engineers say, virtually all this traffic will use the new facility and, therefore, the scheduled airline flights would be transferred to the new field.

With the inauguration of better service, the volume of traffic from Appleton will increase by at least 20 per cent above any levels of Fox Valley traffic which could be expected in the future at the present three airports used by residents of Appleton and Neenah-Menasha.

The nose-counting procedure produced many facts, among them the little-publicized truth that the Appleton - Neenah - Menasha complex contains a large undeveloped air travel market. The report has this to say: "The principal reasons for the undeveloped market are the asymmetrical location and development of the airports. Austin-Straubel (Green Bay) with a large number of flights is too far from Appleton and Neenah to be attractive and the same drawbacks apply to Oshkosh to a somewhat lesser extent. The present Outagamie Airport has few schedules due to the lack of a paved cross-wind runway and it is not convenient for Neenah traffic."

Too Inconvenient

In simpler terms this means that many people will not use air travel now because it is too inconvenient. Since the vast majority of people fly to save time,

This Chart Shows Engineers' estimates of scheduled airline traffic at a new Outagamie County Airport through the year 1980. The graph indicates a steady climb to a peak annual boarding rate of 120,000 passengers a year.

3 Youths Injured in Auto Accident Near New London

NEW LONDON — Three rural New London youths are reported in good condition at Community Hospital after being in a one-car accident two miles north of New London on U.S. 45 about 1:15 a.m. Saturday.

All three youths live at route 3, New London. Injured were Dale M. Finger, 19, driver, Patricia Hutchison, 17, a passenger in the front seat, and Wilbur K. Fields, 17, riding in the rear seat.

Fields had slight facial cuts and was released after treatment. Both the driver and Miss Hutchison suffered severe facial cuts and bruises. The girl also had a broken nose.

Finger told Sgt. Lyle McCully, Waupaca County traffic patrolman, that he fell asleep. The car, which was traveling north, entered the right ditch and broke off a telephone pole. The car was demolished.

The three young people were returning home from a party, McCully said.

Green Bay Harbor Open For Seaway, Lakes Ships

Icebreaker Woodbine Smashes Path to Light, Opens Channel

Post-Crescent News Service

GREEN BAY — Green Bay's harbor is now open for the start of the 1962 navigation season. The first Great Lakes oil tanker is expected to dock here Monday and the first ocean-going freighter is expected by next weekend.

The U. S. Coast Guard icebreaker, the Woodbine, smashed a path through about 16 inches of ice cover on Green Bay Saturday. The Woodbine also dropped off a complement of five Coast Guardsmen at the harbor entrance lighthouse near Point Comfort, about 10 miles from the mouth of the Fox River.

The three—two living in the city and one in the Town of Neenah — were arrested Saturday night.

Police Chief Irving Stulp said the men have admitted the break-in and damage, but would not say why they did it. Stulp said they will be charged after he confers Monday with Dist. Atty. Jack Steinhilber.

The damage involved pouring acids on a floor, breaking fire alarm box glasses and other acts of vandalism.

The bay is open water from the mouth of the Fox River out to the lighthouse.

The start of navigation here has been delayed more than two weeks beyond the normal opening date, usually from March 28 to April 4, for two reasons. One was heavy ice conditions on the bay and the other was the delay in the opening of the Great Lakes St. Lawrence Seaway due to a cracked sill at the Eisenhower Lock near Massena, N. Y.

Seaway officials were busy today preparing for the start of the inland waterway's delayed shipping season Monday.

Water was pumped into the Snell Lock late Saturday. It was emptied for inspection after the sill in the Eisenhower lock developed.

Engineers found no damage to the Snell Lock in their precautionary inspection.

Work Completed
Repairs on the Eisenhower Lock first were expected to take two weeks, but the work was completed in half the time. Joseph H. McCann, administrator of the St. Lawrence Seaway Development Corp., said workmen have finished filling the crack with a Woman Found Dead in Home

Winnebago Police Try to Learn Time, Cause of Death

OSHKOSH — The body of Mrs. May Gokey, about 62, of 2831 Harrison St., Oshkosh, was found shortly before noon Saturday in her residence.

Winnebago County Police conducted an investigation of several hours' duration at the home to determine time and cause of death. Up to midnight Saturday, neither had been established.

Police were called by James Mathwig, proprietor of the Vice President Tavern, immediately north of Mrs. Gokey's home. He had gone to the home to secure artesian water from her well for serving with drinks in his tavern, police were told.

Mathwig told police he had not seen Mrs. Gokey for several days, was concerned and decided to investigate. He saw her body through a window and notified police.

Mrs. Gokey lived alone since the death of her husband, Jess Gokey, in 1954. She had no children. The body was taken to Mallery-Seefeld Funeral Home, Oshkosh.

Survivors are three brothers, David, Elmer and Andrew Anderson, all of Neenah, and four sisters, including Miss Gladys Anderson, Neenah.

Woman Reports Car Damaged, Items Taken

Mrs. Florian Heinrich, 139 N. Fair St., told Appleton Police Saturday afternoon the glove compartment of her car was rifled and windshield scratched while the auto was parked in back of the Masonic Temple.

She said a flashlight was missing and articles in the glove compartment strewn on the floor. Replacement cost of the windshield was estimated at $100.

Magic of Easter Fills Hearts on College Avenue

BY JEAN OTTO

Post-Crescent Women's Editor

"'Twas the day before Easter and—"

Two young boys, about 10 years old, stood before a display in a variety store. Their jackets were worn and their shoes were scuffed and muddy, as if they'd just come off a baseball field. They examined the flowers displayed in front of them, silently, thoughtfully, with great care.

"There's one!" the smaller boy exclaimed, reaching for an orchid corsage white in the back. The delicate fringed petals were perfect and creamy white, and lovely purple color spilled from the center. The two held the transparent box, smudging it a little with their fingerprints. Then they told a clerk, "We want this."

From a frayed silk coin purse the boys counted into a box $1.98 in pennies, nickels and dimes. A smile played at their lips as they did so, and the clerk smiled over their heads at other shoppers who watched.

They held their purchase as tenderly and with as much pride as if it had been gold. It was gold of a kind, and was probably even more precious than that to the mother who wore it this morning.

In a drug store down the street a man in work clothes carefully read the messages on Easter cards that said, "To My Wife." When he found the proper one he nodded his head and made his purchase. In another shop, a mother sent three little girls off to look at the toys while she furtively purchased shiny green grass and candy for Easter baskets.

A man with gray hair and bent shoulders strolled down the avenue with a lily held tightly in his arms. A young mother bought a perky straw hat for her daughter, then decided she would make her own last year's bonnet do for herself.

And everywhere there were smiles and a spirit of warmth and friendliness.

Tomorrow was Easter.

Pleasure Boaters—Spring Is Here!

MENASHA — The calendar announced spring a month ago but the season won't arrive "officially" until 8 a.m. Tuesday, when the recreational boating season opens.

At that hour, bridges on the Fox River waterway will be manned for pleasure boaters' use.

Opening of the lower Fox, from the Menasha locks to DePere and Green Bay, is tentatively set for Tuesday, May 1.

The Menasha locks upper gates this week will be painted as a final step in their rebuilding, the Corps of Engineers' winter project. The dredge Winneconne and scows will be taken to Fond du Lac for a dredging project this spring.

Coastguardsmen at the Menasha light attendant station will begin setting navigation aids from Menasha south this week. Their winter's work at the local station was removal and replacement of the buoy boat's engine, which was rebuilt at the coast guard repair shops, and readying other boat equipment and navigation aids.

The portion of the Fox waterway open this week is Lakes Winnebago, Butte des Morts, Winneconne and Poygan and the Wolf River to New London.

Ross Plaine, engineer in charge of the Appleton office of the Army Corps of Engineers said a new Menasha lockmaster will be named soon to succeed the late Harry Wilson, who drowned in January while working on a floodgate at Appleton. His body has not been recovered.

The meeting, open to all members and friends, will start with a 6 p.m. dinner.

These Are Pet Cats, but "Cheetah," on the left, doesn't know it yet. Mrs. Vera Himes, whose home is in San Diego but who spends a lot of time in Appleton, had the South American ocelot shipped by air to Appleton from a Miami zoo as a surprise for her husband.

Surprise to Husband

Woman Will Tame Ocelot for House Pet, Traveling Companion

Mrs. Vera Himes has a surprise for her husband—she bought a South American wildcat on the spur of the moment as a pet. The ocelot, shipped to Appleton by air from a Miami zoo, is a six-week-old kitten. It's a little smaller than a housecat now, but within a year it will be four to four and one half feet long and 18 inches high at the shoulder.

Mrs. Himes' home is in San Diego, Calif., but she works for a booking agency with offices in Appleton, and travels a lot between the two cities.

"I've wanted an ocelot for a long time," she explained. She learned about Cheetah, as she has named the pet, one day, put in a long distance call and had it the next.

No Surprise
Her husband, who works for a missile plant in southern California, doesn't know about it yet, but she doesn't expect him to be surprised. "I've come home with three dogs and an ordinary housecat so far," she said. "Once before I tried to get a lion cub, but I finally decided it would get too big."

The ocelot was one of the first wildcats to be tamed, she said, and was a royal pet of the Aztec Indians. It is buff and black, with markings similar to a tiger's, but more irregular.

"It will be completely safe once it's tame," she said confidently, and will have the freedom of the house.

It isn't tame yet, and spits angrily at humans. This is mostly because it is still frightened, Mrs. Himes said. She has been able to pet it a little, but does not try to pick it up. The cat's incisors have been filed down.

"Cheetah doesn't mind my poolside as much as it does me," Mrs. Himes noted.

Cage in Car
She plans to have a cage installed in her car so that the ocelot can travel with her. She doesn't expect any trouble checking into motels with it, adding that most motels now will accept pets and she has never had any trouble with her other pets.

"We checked an elephant into a motel in Texas this winter," she said. (The agency she works for owns a circus.)

Cheetah already has aroused a lot of interest. "I spend three-quarters of my time showing him to people," Mrs. Himes said.

She doesn't expect complaints from her neighbors in San Diego—"maybe in the Midwest, but not in California," she said. "That's one thing about California—they don't object to any kind of pets in town."

"When I get it tamed well, then I'll think of something else," she said.

Man Pays Fine For Drunkenness

Wesley T. Dutrisac, 422 W. College Ave., was fined $50 Friday afternoon on a charge of drunkenness.

He paid the fine and was released.

Dutrisac was sentenced to 30 days in jail Friday morning by Judge Gustave J. Keller. Later it was discovered the judge had not been told Dutrisac was charged under city ordinance.

Under city law a defendant has a choice of paying the fine or going to jail. Only under state law can a person be sent to jail even though willing to pay his fine.

Judge Keller had refused to accept the fine in the morning, but after the second hearing in the afternoon he accepted the fine.

Meets Monthly

Fox Cities Has Garden Club 'For Men Only'

NEENAH — Ten Fox Cities men who regard themselves as amateurs with an interest in developing attractive home gardens early this year formed the "Men's Garden Club of the Fox Valley."

The club is independent and unaffiliated, with its object being "to promote and foster interest in the development of more attractive home gardens and to stimulate among amateurs the knowledge and practice of gardening by means of lectures, seminars and competition."

Each month the club sends out to members its own official publication of gardening information of timely interest, reprints of gardening information and suggestions for fellow amateurs.

Meetings are held the first Monday of each month and any man actively interested in home gardening and living within 50 miles of Neenah-Menasha is eligible to join. They may contact L. A. Vessel, 536 Chatham Court, Neenah, president of the group.

Officers, in addition to Vessel, are Dr. Karl Weinke, vice president; Charlie Inglis, secretary, and R. T. Shockley, treasurer. Rounding out the initial membership are Leslie Wilson, Hillard Smolinski, Richard Young and Morris Kirchenbecker, all of the Neenah-Menasha area, and Clifford Bauer and Donald Crabb of Appleton.

Demonstrates Planting
Discussion at the organizing meeting in February concerned basement culture of mushrooms and home orchid culture. The March meeting had a lecture and demonstration by Dr. Weinke on "soil preparation, planting of seeds and transplanting of seedlings from flats to plots."

The April meeting's discussion was on the timeliness of dormant spraying, lawn fertilization and garden mulching. Clifford Bauer gave a presentation on the culture of bush species roses, covering the fundamental skills of planting, pruning, summer care and wintering.

For the meeting on May 7 the presentation will be on "Fertilizers—Organic and Inorganic."

An open forum is planned for the June 4 meeting at which the members will discuss what they have done in their gardens up to June 1 and their plans for the balance of the month.

Additional members are being sought so that outside speakers may be obtained for future meetings.

Oshkosh Players' 'Meller-Drammer'

Play Almost Lost in Shuffle of Fast-Flying Promotion Gimmicks

BY DON CASTONIA
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

OSHKOSH—If the Oshkosh Community Players' production of "Love Rides the Rails," May 2, 2 and 4 at the "Grand Old Opry House" (otherwise known as the Grand Theater) is not a success, it will not be for lack of publicity or attention-getting gimmicks.

In fact, the play almost got lost in the shuffle of fast-flying ideas for promoting the old-fashioned melodrama.

Advance publicity is being handled by "The Committee," a group of Oshkosh men who have been behind the scenes of many of Oshkosh's civic projects during the last ten years.

Some of the saner ideas "The Committee" has come up with include a huge banner across High Avenue from the Athearn Hotel to the Grand Theater, which has been renamed "Grand Old Opry House" for the occasion.

Railroad Locomotive
The banner will be put up Monday by the Oshkosh fire department. One side of the banner advertises the play. The other side reads "if you can read this, you are going the wrong way on a one-way street." High Avenue is a one-way street going east.

Members of the Oshkosh Common Council Wednesday night took steps to protect the actors from any vegetable or other objects that might be thrown by members of the audience on the nights the "meller-drama" will run.

On those nights it shall be unlawful to "carry on the person concealed vegetable, mineral or animal objects into the Grand Old Opry House, and it shall be a felony to throw such objects in a horizontal line, a looping parabola arc, drop them vertically, or in any way cause such objects to be transported through the air from the audience section of the theater onto the area back of the footlights commonly referred to as the stage."

The ordinance will be in full force from date of publication. However, city officials are "hereby specifically instructed NOT to publish this ordinance."

Plans also call for "The Committee" to rent the Oshkosh 40 et 8's street-going railroad locomotive to use Friday and Saturday. However, the 40 et 8 isn't sure the engine will start. If it does, finalists in the Miss Oshkosh contest will ride on the engine to help publicize the play.

Not wanting to take any chances on violating the city's anti-noise ordinance, the clapper will be removed from the bell on the engine and two of the girls will carry signs reading "ding" and "dong."

Plans for a train wreck were cancelled when it became evident the wreck might interfere with traffic. However, "The Committee" did decide to ask one of the railroads to move its tracks to run down Oregon Street.

Gay 90's Dress
"The longest week in history" starts today at the Athearn and will run until May 4. Waitresses at the hotel will be costumed in Gay 90's dress for the three days of the play. The manager noted not much decorating would have to be done in the hotel.

"The Committee" even got into the act of supplying props for the play. The script calls for an eight-foot painting of a semi-nude reclining on a bar. None could be found in Oshkosh so a member of "The Committee" painted the picture.

The masterpiece will be displayed, draped, in a local store window until opening day of the play.

Dastardly Villain
One-hundred posters are being distributed proclaiming that "Love Rides the Rails or, Will the Mail Train Run Tonight?" as "being a Meller-Drammer in 3 Acts, complete with ailing widow, innocent daughter, dastardly villain, hero-with-heart-of-gold, overdue mortgage, demon rum and the franchise of the W.V.P.B. & P.R.R."

Meetings of "The Committee" are something to behold. The first hour and a half of the last meeting was spent attempting to decipher the minutes of the previous meeting.

Under a cover of frivolity and exaggerated insults, "The Committee" accomplishes what it sets out to do with very little fanfare.

Holy Name Men Will Sponsor Dinner Social

LITTLE CHUTE — The Holy Name Society of St. John parish will sponsor a public dinner and social at 6:30 p.m. Wednesday at the Grade School auditorium. Sgt. George Elise, of the Outagamie County Traffic Police, will be guest speaker.

After the dinner, a concert will be presented by the Community Band under the direction of Harold Janssen. Community singing, dancing and card playing will round out the evening's activities. Mrs. Ann Hammen will have charge of the dinner.

Colorado Resident Visits Black Creek

BLACK CREEK — Miss Vivian Thorpe, Denver, Col., visited at the Herman Eberhard home.

After spending the recent winter months in Florida, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Kaphingst and Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Piehl have returned to their homes in the village.

Lawrence Anthropologist Spent Childhood Among Past's Ruins

Played in Remains of Persepolis, Explored Zoroastrian Towers

BY MARGUERITE SCHUMANN

The ash-heaps of the past, where archaeologists sift for clues to pre-history, have a particular reality for Suzanne Bessac, primitive art specialist on the Lawrence College anthropology staff.

During a childhood in Iran, Mrs. Bessac and her sister played regularly in the ruins of Persepolis, explored Zoroastrian burial towers, and became as familiar with the tales of long-dead dynasties as American children are with the comics.

Mrs. Bessac was born in Waldheim, Germany, where her father, a bridge designer and hydraulic engineer, was building a dam at the time. Waldheim is the site of a large prison, "so it's like saying I come from Wau-pun," Mrs. Bessac twinkles. Her mother is a pediatrician who has practiced in the various spots on three continents to which the family's wanderings have taken them.

Helped Build Railroad
Leaving Germany in 1934 on the advice of a scholar-uncle who had read "Mein Kampf" (ironically, he did not follow his own advice and was later killed by the Nazis), the family went to Iran, where Suzanne's father helped construct the Trans-Iranian railroad.

Their first home was Shiraz in the south, not far from the historic Persepolis site, which had been built by Darius and Xerxes nearly 500 years before Christ. Persepolis was then being excavated by a party from Smith College, and Suzanne and her sister were frequently taken out to the dig.

Although the Smith scientists zealously guarded all excavated artifacts, the two little German girls delighted in finding pot shards and beads in kingly tombs carved into the rocks, which had long ago been broken into by tomb robbers.

Civilized Comforts

The expedition made its headquarters in a miniature version of the palace of Persepolis, and boasted such civilized comforts as a greenhouse. "I fell through the greenhouse roof one day," Mrs. Bessac recalls happily.

Shiraz itself was old-fashioned Iran — no paved streets, sewers or running water. But it had beauty: "there were too many nightingales to sleep at night," roses climbed everywhere, adults were entertained at moonlight dances and early morning horseback rides, while children delighted in sleeping on the flat roof and playing (by daylight hour) in the room above the big central gate. At night, however, the scorpions claimed it as their kingdom.

In the mid-thirties the family moved to Tehran, where outings were focussed on old Zoroastrian burial towers, named by the children, "Towers of Silence." Historically, Zoroastrians did not place their dead in the ground, but laid them away in towers. The present Iranian dynasty has compelled them to change their practices.

Colonial Life

In Tehran, Mrs. Bessac lived the life of a "typical colonial brat," going to an American Presbyterian mission school and playing in the grounds of the British Embassy. Among their native friends were the children of Teymoortosh, right hand man of the Riza Kahn who founded the present Pahlavi dynasty. The Teymoortosh children soon became semi-orphans when their father was murdered on command of his jealous head of state.

Even through remote Tehran, the currents of World War II swept strongly. The father of one of their playmates turned out to be a famous German spy. Arab Iran, always anti-Semitic, started to persecute Jews in their admiration for the Third Reich. "I are they?"

knew people who would desperately marry to get a passport," Mrs. Bessac says, "and there were Jewish friends of ours who walked back and forth on a bridge between two countries, refused at both borders."

After the war, Suzanne and her sister were sent to school in Oxford, England, for two years while Mrs. Suzanne Bessac, member of the Lawrence College anthropology staff, spent much of her childhood playing among the ruins of ancient cities in Iran. She was born in Germany.

The Golden Years

Retirement Years Can Be New Life

BY THOMAS COLLINS

"I went out to visit a retirement village the other day. I looked at the model home in it. "I wish I had seen it and could have moved into it when I was a bride."

"Eve r ything has been carefully thought out, and it is very nice. You can eat and sleep and sit. But as of now, for me to live there would be like living in luxury and waiting for death. There isn't room for a hobby. I couldn't even put my sewing machine in. And the flowers are already planted. That wouldn't thrill me, because a plant belongs to him who sows the seed."

"Keep it for brides. It wasn't meant for me..."

Her name: Mrs. Dulcie Brown.

Panel Discussions Scheduled for PTA Clintonville Session

CLINTONVILLE — The Longfellow-Junior High PTA will meet at 7:45 p.m. Tuesday in the Junior High School auditorium. Officers and planning board members will be elected during the business session.

Six discussion groups will be formed. Two members from each group will give a resume before the membership. Subjects of the discussion groups will be: How much homework should a child be expected to do? What types of outside activities are available to children in our community? What about further education for your child? What about boy-girl relationship in school and in the home? How can PTA's be made more effective? What about goals for young Americans, and what are they?

Life's Exciting Time

"The very act of waking up in the morning," she says, "can be a great adventure. You can stretch and lie there and laugh inwardly as you realize you can take your own sweet time about it, not get up at all if you don't want to."

"How many times in those years when you were the slave of time did you long for this day... the luxury of lying in bed in the morning with nothing at all that HAS to be done TODAY? And if there is you can always put it off until tomorrow..."

Mrs. Brown says excitement can be had in retirement with very little money, especially if you live in a city. Recreation areas such as parks, zoos and museums are made for you, she explains and best of all is the fairyland of nature that lies at the end of the bus line. "Every flower, bush and stone can mean something to you. And above all the trees and the birds..."

Justice at Work

If you want excitement of another kind, she says, "there never was greater drama on any stage than you can find in the court-rooms of the city. You can sit and watch justice at work as long as you like..."

Then there are the clubs and dances for older people that most cities have. There are picnics, meetings of your church and free lectures all over. You can browse in the library through the books and take trips back through time to any point you like.

their parents awaited a visa to enter the United States.

After two years at Beloit, Suzanne went to the University of California at Berkeley, where she met and married her anthropologist husband, Frank, who was just back from a harrowing 11-month, 3000-mile trip by foot, camel and horseback across Inner Mongolia to Tibet, escaping from Communist armies.

With her marriage, Asiatic cultural influences began to mingle with European, Near Eastern and American. Frank knew many Mongol refugees in this country, among them the Dalai Lama's older brother Thubten Jigme Norbu (author of "Tibet is My Country"), and a Tibetan abbot and spiritual advisor to Mongols in America known simply as the Delowa. Both men were house guests of the Bessacs for varying periods, and the Delowa lived in their attic for much of two years.

When the Bessacs were expecting their second child the Delowa promised to arrange a "very fine reincarnation," and further, that it would be a boy. "I had visions of him grabbing my child and hustling him off to a religious life," Mrs. Bessac relates. "Fortunately, it was a girl. I don't believe the Delowa has ever forgiven her." Even so, the Buddhist Delowa sends Christmas presents to the Bessac children each year.

Personal Contribution

In all areas except determining the sex of babies, the Delowa was a model guest. "He was very easy to incorporate into the family. We used to take him along to visit Frank's folks, and he always insisted that we eat the offerings he set out on his little altar."

Right now, between her teaching and homemaking, Mrs. Bessac is teaching herself to be a potter. "If Frank ever gets to go on another field trip — say to Formosa — I want to apprentice myself to a Chinese potter and really learn the craft."

Suzanne Bessac seems eager to make a personal contribution to the ash-heap of history.

World of Enchantment
"Children are wonderful inspirations as long as you don't stay with them too long. We can bridge the gap between age and youth for a day, and no more... a day at a time with something else in between..."

Now listen to her:

"My back yard is just one more old back yard. But to me it is a world of enchantment. There are orange trees that shower white perfume in the spring and bear golden globes of sunshine in the fall. Out there I drop a tiny little seed in the ground. The sun and the rain caress it and present me with an exquisite flower or luscious blossoms. Where on all this earth can you find greater excitement than this?"

"I plant a different kind of seed to get beautiful red tomatoes. I plant a fig tree and it gives me figs. These aren't just tomatoes and figs to me. They are the way God answers when you ask. 'I can eat them with true thanksgiving, for they are my faith in the perpetuity of life. My mockingbird flies south in the winter but when he sits once more in the orange tree by the back door, and sings in the morning, it will be spring. There are a thousand things to provide excitement, a million thrills yet undiscovered...' (Copyright 1962)

Kennedy-Steel Dispute Cooled, Output Dropped

Blough Had 'Cordial and Useful' Parley With President Tuesday Burl's Champ Again!

BY JACK LEFLER
AP Business News Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—The boiling battle between the government and the steel industry simmered down during the week. But businessmen remained gun-shy.

The armistice began Tuesday night when Roger M. Blough, chairman of U.S. Steel Corp., called on President Kennedy. It was just a week since Blough had made another call to tell him of a $6-a-ton steel price increase.

The only word that came out of the second meeting was that it was "cordial and useful."

Then on Wednesday, Kennedy, who had used the government's biggest torpedoes to force the steel companies to back down on the price increase, displayed a conciliatory attitude.

No ill will

"This administration harbors no ill will against any individual, corporation or segment of the American economy," he told his news conference.

The President indicated there would be no punitive action grout, a thin mixture of mortar. He added the weekend will be needed for the grout to cure.

The first ship to enter the two American locks was expected to be the German freighter, the Transpacific. It was due to transit the Snell chamber Saturday night and tie up at the lower wall of the Eisenhower Lock to await the opening of that chamber.

An estimated 25 to 30 ocean ships will be sent through the two locks on the first day, Monday.

First Freighter

Among them is the Lionne, the first foreign ship scheduled to dock at Green Bay this season. The Lionne, which left Tofte, Norway, with a cargo of pulpwood April 3, was delayed at Montreal, Canada, for the last week after its Atlantic crossing because of the lock damage.

Preliminary figures for 1961 indicate a shipping season total of approximately 3,000,000 tons. The annual report of the Brown County Harbor Commission points out, "if handled by rail, this tonnage would have required the operation of 1,700 average rail road trains, or eight per day during the navigation season."

Direct overseas trade—both import and export—totaled 104,799 tons for 1961. This is a significant gain of 37,431 tons, about 18 percent, over 1960 and a gain of 64,144 tons, more than double the figure for the pre-seaway shipping season of 1958.

Ranks 10th

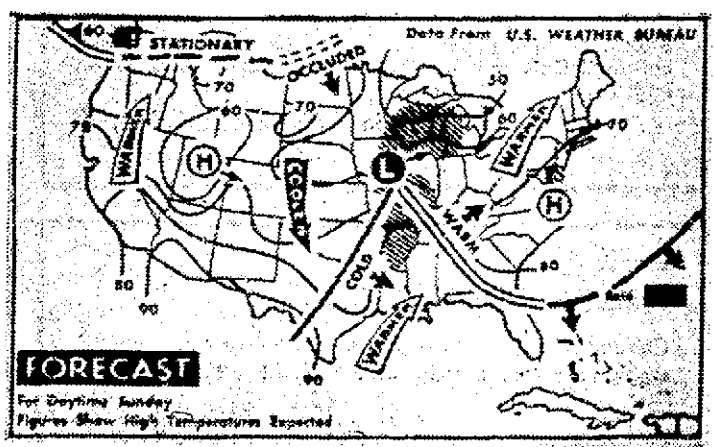

Green Bay, which ranks 10th among the 18 major United States Great Lakes ports, was one of seven ports scoring gains in 1961 in both export and import trade. Six of the 18 ports, including Duluth-Superior, Chicago and Sheboygan registered a drop in overseas tonnage.

A record number of overseas freighters docked here during 1961 to take on and discharge shipments. From mid-April to mid-November a total of 89 ocean-going ships called here. This is six more than the 83 docking here in 1960 and 25 more than called here in pre-seaway 1958.

Commercial navigation opened here last year April 2 with the arrival of five Great Lakes tankers which followed the icebreaker Mackinaw into the harbor. The first foreign ship docking here in 1961 was the Vidhorn, a Swedish vessel which arrived April 21.

The Schmitt Brothers Eleven Inc., whose shared interests include a world-famed barber shop quartet and an investment club, include, from left, seated, Sylvester, the Rev. Henry, Raymond, Bernard and Al, standing, Francis, the Rev. Leo, the Rev. John, Joseph, Paul P. and James. The sons of Anna and Henry Schmitt also have six sisters.

Singing Schmitt Brothers Also Rich Through Stock Club Plan

Family Investment Club

TWO RIVERS (AP) — If the Schmitt Brothers decided to sing in Barber Shop harmony, they could call it, maybe, "A Pretty Dividend Is Like a Melody." Or, "Bless Your Little Heart, Money."

The Schmitt Brothers, who for more than 10 years now have operated what may be the only 11-man quartet in Barber Shop history, have for some three years less than that also operated one of the nation's most unusual investment clubs: the Schmitt Brothers Eleven Inc.

Only four of them sing, of course, in the Schmitt Brothers quartet that has been one of barber-shops' top attractions since it won the 1951 international championship of the Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barber Shop Quartet Singing in America at Toledo. The others manage, promote and, on occasion, cheer.

Purchased Stock

"I remember in May of 1954 when the quartet bought 11 shares of common stock of the Hamilton Mfg. Co., a home-town firm, and arranged so that each share would cover all the brothers," says brother Ray, who managed the group through its first million miles of travel. "It was a fine purchase and provided the inspiration to form the investment corporation six months later."

That was considerably ahead of the investment club boom, which now involves some 500,000 members of 30,000 groups organized in the country during the past few years to pool modest investment funds along with modest investment knowledge for the opportunity to increase both if possible while reducing individual risk.

Reinvest Dividends

Most clubs have a policy to reinvest all dividends received on their portfolios, and a system through which a member leaving the area can withdraw his share. That's not likely to be a problem with the Schmitt corporation.

The investment club's charter limits membership to the 11 sons of Mrs. Anna Schmitt, 77, who still attends at least the annual meetings.

Three of the brothers are Roman Catholic priests—the Revs. Henry J., 55; John P., 41, and Leo J., 43. Ray, 53, is associated with the family firm, Schmitt Lumber Co. So is Joe, 35, the quartet tenor and Jim, 30, the quartet lead. Sylvester, the eldest at 57, is an architect; Bernard J., 50, a lumber wholesaler at Green Bay; Al J., 47, a forest products distributor at Oshkosh; Francis, 46, the quartet bass, operator of dairy stores in Two Rivers and Manitowoc, and Paul R., 33, quartet baritone, a life insurance underwriter.

Family Plan

After the purchase of the Hamilton stock, Ray says, "We decided that if the quartet members could get along so well, why couldn't all the brothers?"

The investment club was incorporated in November of 1954, with its membership limited to the sons of Anna and the late

84th Division Will Train at Ft. Leonard Wood

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Wisconsin's 84th Division, an Army Reserve unit which was reactivated in 1951, will train at Fort Leonard Wood, Mo. this year.

Major Gen. Gilbert W. Embury, the division's commanding general, said Saturday it will be the first time since the division was reactivated that it will not train at Camp McCoy, Wis.

The training period for the division's 3,500 troops will be July 15 to 30. Troops will move by commercial transportation.

The 84th is Wisconsin's largest Army Reserve division. It has units in 35 Wisconsin communities. Three of the division's regiments are headquartered in Milwaukee. The other two are at Sheboygan and Menasha.

Hearing Set on School Attachment

NEW LONDON — There will be a public hearing on the attachment of the Maple Hill School, Joint School District 4, of the towns of Lebanon and Little Wolf, Waupaca County, to the New London Unified School District May 9 at Washington High School.

The hearing will be held by joint school committee of Waupaca, Outagamie and Winnebago counties to consider a petition by the electors in that district to attach the property to the New London district.

No Detergent, Tissue Problem in Fox Cities

Sewage Commission has been receiving reports that the drum screens at the treatment plant are being clogged by facial tissues.

Drum Screens

Drum screens are used by many tanneries and meat packing plants to keep their plant sewers from getting clogged. Some communities require that type of plant to use drum screens to protect the city sewer system and treatment plant.

A Fox Cities sewer cleaning service reports that it is finding accumulations of the so-called wet-strength tissues in sewer laterals, the pipes that

Milk Truck Disabled When Bull Challenges Vehicle's Red Visage

ST. NAZIANZ, Wis. (AP) — A bull saw something red on the highway today, charged full tilt and rammed head-on into a milk truck.

The surprised truck driver, Curtis W. Meyer, 29, said he was traveling approximately 40 miles per hour and didn't have a chance to avoid the impact.

The bull, a large Holstein was being led across Manitowoc County Trunk X, four miles southeast of here, with some helpers, when it bolted. The animal was knocked down but got up and limped away. Authorities said the bull was hurt internally, however, and would have to be destroyed.

The truck was disabled and had to be towed away.

Appleton Will Open Bids Tuesday for Sewage Plant Project

Appleton's board of public works will open bids Tuesday for a $2 million expansion to the sewage treatment plant.

Twenty-three contractors who indicated they wanted to bid on the job have been pre-qualified by the board. The contractors are from all parts of Wisconsin and from five other states.

After the bids are opened Tuesday they will be referred to the director of public works to be tabulated in order to determine the lowest bidder.

It is expected contracts will be let sometime early in May.

The city was ordered by the state to increase primary treatment of sewage and to install secondary treatment facilities to help cut pollution of the Fox River.

Swiss Bill Us for Expenses Incurred in Cuban Operation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Four times a year the mail brings a businesslike balance sheet to the State Department. It comes from the Swiss capital, Bern. The sender is the Federal Political Department, Switzerland's foreign ministry.

The document is a quarterly account of expenses the Swiss incur in connection with protecting U.S. interests in Cuba. Switzerland has represented the United States in Havana since this country broke diplomatic relations with Fidel Castro Jan. 3, 1961.

U.S. officials appreciate the businesslike way the Swiss handle the American taxpayer's money.

The document, they say, is a meticulous accounting of every penny the Swiss have spent during the three-month period.

Bookkeeping, of course, is only one factor—and not the most important one—of the Swiss embassy's activities in Havana on behalf of Uncle Sam. There are many human and economic problems.

Ambassador Emil Stadelhofer, the Swiss envoy in Cuba, has asked reinforcements and Bern has sent six people in addition to his regular personnel—four foreign service officers and two secretaries—to handle American affairs.

The Swiss get no pay for their services but they ask reimbursement for their expenses. How much this amounts to is a diplomatic secret.

Representing other countries became a Swiss tradition in 1914, when World War I broke out in Europe. The Swiss regard it as one of the duties of a truly neutral nation.

H. M. Wriston Proved Most Famous Lawrence Prexy

Multi-Motivated Educator Has Won Great Number of Honors

BY MARGUERITE SCHUMANN

The Lawrence College president with the longest biography in "Who's Who in America" is its eighth head, Henry Merritt Wriston, 1925-37.

It takes 5 1/2 inches of "Who's Who's" miniscule type to suggest the bare biographical bones of one of America's elder statesmen among educators and public servants.

For instance, Wriston is credited with 21 honorary degrees, but that is by no means a complete list. In 1955, when he retired as president of Brown University, there was such a flood of official honors that it was merely noted that in that year he received kudos from "Dartmouth, Brown and others."

The institutions honoring him are remarkable in their diversity—from Ivy League to teacher's college, from foreign university to theological seminary.

Although the bulk of Henry Wriston's days have been spent in college administration, he has resolutely insisted on maintaining a split personality. A part of each day has been spent in a telephone-less office on another floor—away from the hubbub of the institution's nerve center—being an author of works on foreign relations and educational philosophy. At Brown, the split was so complete that he had different secretaries for the different jobs; his literary secretary was Ruth Sandborn, a Lawrence alumna who traveled along to Brown with the Wristons when they left the Lawrence president's house.

Henry Wriston has the happy knack of making everything he writes, even speeches and reports, turn into literature. Several of his ten books are made out of his speeches.

History Sense

Much of his crispness comes from a strong sense of history. Dr. Wriston's original discipline.

Henry Wriston, as anyone both at Lawrence and Brown can tell you, is no "yes" man. It is suspected that he glories in controversy. He is a great champion of unpopular ideas. In a college devoted to things of the mind, he speaks warmly on behalf of craftsmanship, urging collegians to work with their hands. In a society where group enterprise is looked on as a primary virtue,

English Dignity Unruffled Despite Prize Collection of Verbal Goofs

BY RONALD THOMSON

LONDON (AP)—The notice on the door of the city hall in Kent was brief and to the point—"The evening of clairvoyance on Tuesday has been canceled owing to unforeseen circumstances."

hired both became presidents of eastern colleges in later years—Victor Butterfield at Wesleyan and Nathan Pusey at Harvard; he hammered ceaselessly for students to use the library; he organized two intellectual refreshers for alumni—the alumni college at commencement and the alumni reading service; he began a picture rental service for students, believed the first on American campuses.

For the institution's self respect he accumulated a group of historic objects to remind Lawrence College of its roots—the Founder's Chair, the use of the Lawrence family crest as the college's official device. He even brought ivy from the Lawrence family garden in Brookline, Mass., and planted it around Main Hall. (It died.)

He gave honorary degrees to two of Amos Lawrence's grandsons, and broadened the college's honorary degree policy considerably. Where the preponderance were doctorates of divinity in former years, Wriston's awards drew in scientists (with the establishment of the Institute of Paper Chemistry), government officials, practicing artists like Ernestine Schumann-Henck, paper men like Dard Hunter (whose museum is now housed at the Institute), and businessmen like Sewell Avery.

Wriston's inauguration speech at Lawrence foreshadowed many coming events.

Foreshadowed

For instance: "A student does not come to college primarily to learn things, to store an intellectual garret with an assortment of odds and ends. He comes to college to learn how to learn, what to learn, where to learn and why to learn." (The use of the library for independent reading was one of Wriston's main precepts.)

Or: "Many an infant intellectual life which has had a promising birth has died of the rickets within a year or two after leaving college." (Hence the alumni reading program.)

Or: "We have been attempting to educate boys and girls in the mass, wholesale. As well try to feed babies by flooding the nursery with milk." (Witness the tutorial system to provide individual nourishment for the mind.)

After Henry Wriston left Lawrence for the larger arena, he became a man of true eminence. He has sat on national boards for the benefit of both undergraduate and adult education, art, Methodism, world peace, diplomacy (and when these last two failed), war. His ten books have covered the same fields with the exception of art.

Leaving Brown, he headed the American Assembly. A report which he edited for President Eisenhower's commission on national goals, titled "Goals for Americans," has been widely read and discussed in the last two years.

Big, Joint Airport Idea Being Revived

State to Make Survey of Air Patterns in Central Wisconsin

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON—The idea of a big central Wisconsin commercial airport to serve the principal industrial communities of the upper Wisconsin River Valley, knocked about for several years, apparently is being revived in a serious way.

The state department of aeronautics has accepted a petition of the Portage county board, adopted by a unanimous vote of its members, asking for a state-sponsored survey of the existing and potential air traffic patterns in the Stevens Point, Marshfield, Wisconsin Rapids and Wausau communities.

Financing of such studies remains to be worked out, but state board members said they would arrange it somehow even if they are required to ask for help from the county boards of the district, involved and some assistance from the state department of resource development.

Promoted by Business

The idea of a regional airport under joint county sponsorship was promoted several years ago by Valley business spokesmen who argued that more scheduled flights would be possible under such an arrangement than would ever be likely from four separate airports within a relatively small area.

The Portage county board proposed called for a new study for the fixing of a new location, but in previous discussions a site near Junction City in Portage county has been urged.

A spokesman for Marathon county indicated that the Wausau region is interested in the joint airport idea, and regards it as a logical development in the future. The comment came when Wausau representatives won approval for an extension of one of the runways of the present Wausau airport.

Need Runway Now

There is an awareness in that community that a new central airport for scheduled airline use is a practical possibility during the next several years, it was said, but meanwhile the Wausau community needs a better runway.

Frequently passengers and freight at Wausau are delayed because the North Central Airlines planes are unable to take off from the comparatively short existing runway, the state agency was told.

There now are operating airports at Stevens Point and Marshfield served by North Central, and another airport at Wisconsin Rapids serves local industrial and private planes.

Lions Clubs Will Honor Seniors

WEYAUWEGA—The Weyauwega-Fremont Lions Club will honor Union High School seniors Monday evening at a banquet at Na-Green's Hotel.

Musical selections by senior class band members and a speech by a member of the class will be included.

Stevens Point Sets College Day Program For High Schoolers

STEVENS POINT—"College Day," a program for high school students, is planned at Stevens Point State College for Saturday. Visiting students will tour the campus, learn about the college academic program and meet with advisers in their fields of interest.

The students will be welcomed by President William C. Hansen, bear of admission requirements and scholarship opportunities from Dr. Gordon Haferbecker, dean of instruction; of housing, loans and part time work from Orland E. Radke, dean of men.

College students will speak on campus life. Mrs. Elizabeth Pfiffner, dean of women, will preside at the session, scheduled for 9:30 a.m. in the Student Union Lounge.

There will be a music program and small group meetings. A noon luncheon will be served in the College Union. There will be open house at the library, field house, Student Union and campus dormitories from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Selection of Celebrated Seven Started Right Men on Space Job

NASA Team Started on Task of Picking Gemini Shot Astronauts

BY JULES LOH

LANGLEY AIR FORCE BASE, Va. (AP)—The man who trains the astronauts maneuvered the telephone conversation nicely, and politely sidestepped another friend of a friend of a bright young fellow who wants to join America's second group of spacemen.

"It's a matter of don't call us, we'll call you," explained Dr. Robert B. Voas after he hung up. "We know the men we want, and where to get them."

If psychologist Voas and others in the National Aeronautics and Space Administration have the same success in selecting the second group as they did the first—and it's a safe bet they will—few would argue with the method.

Good Find

With each public appearance of any or all of the celebrated seven, wonderment arises anew How did they find such a remarkable group?

Dr. Voas (pronounced voss), the astronauts' training officer and them, also will help choose the second group for the two-man Gemini flights. But picking alone does not turn out an astronaut.

Start with a good piece of steel and you can hone it to a sharp, reliable edge. But it takes both, good steel and a good hone. In this case the hone is the astronaut's conditioning program.

John Glenn and Gus Grissom and Alan Shepard were able to approach their flights with such cold self-confidence, Voas explained, because throughout their training they had learned to cope with literally thousands of malfunctions, however remote. They were supremely confident they could handle anything that might come up.

Imagined Trouble

"A few weeks before Glenn's flight," Voas recalled, "he began to wonder what he would do if the retro package fell off." Thus is the assembly which holds the rockets used to brake the capsule so it will drop back to earth.

The eventuality hadn't been considered because no one had regarded it a possibility. Still, if it caused Glenn anxiety, it had to be resolved.

The Mercury team came up with a zig-zag maneuver which would slow the spacecraft enough to get it out of orbit. Glenn practiced until he had the procedure down cold.

But the basic need was good steel—picking the right men for the job.

Skill Needed

The basic requirement was skill in operating a complicated machine and experience enough to contribute to its design and development. Both are characteristics of test pilots, so the selection team limited its search to graduates of the Navy and Air Force test pilot schools.

Candidates were required to have the equivalent of a bachelor's degree in engineering and 1,500 hours of flying time. Actually, Glenn had 5,000 hours and the others from 2,300 to 3,600. They also had to be less than 5 feet 11 inches tall simply so they could fit in the capsule and they had to be in excellent physical condition.

With its basic requirements, plus recommendations of test pilot school instructors, the selection team whittled its original list of 508 men down to 69 and invited them to an interview. Only then did the candidates learn they were being considered for the Mercury project.

37 Dropped

Of this group, 37 either declined — "mostly because they were engaged in some long-range project they didn't feel they should leave," said Voas — or else failed to demonstrate the qualities the selection team was looking for.

The main one was motivation; they wanted men who would give their all for the right reasons.

Voas said the interviewers also were aware "that there would be quite a bit of contact with the public, and that the men would be representatives of NASA and of their country."

Thus if the men were poised and articulate in addition to their other qualifications, it was bound to help although nothing outweighed technical skill.

Personality

The interviewers were conscious of the need for men who would be at ease in public but they weren't specifically looking for them, partly because a good personality was almost a predictable by-product of the men otherwise qualified.

Essentially the same criteria will determine the second group, with certain exceptions dictated by the specific job they will do — fly in two-man space ships around the earth.

Five to Seven men will be selected for the project late this year. Some may be civilians.

3-Man Trip

A third group of approximately seven will be selected as equipment is developed for the next space step, the 3-man Apollo moon trip.

The Gemini astronauts probably will be close to 30 years old—men of long capability as opposed to men of long experience which were needed for the Mercury project.

Car Found Soon After It Was Reported Stolen

A car owned by Lawrence Below, 1804 S. Bouten St., Appleton, was found near the Fox Valley Sheltered Workshop on Perkins Street about two hours, after he reported it stolen.

The car was taken from an alley just north of College Avenue, between Superior and Division streets, between 9 and 10 p.m. Friday.

Below told police that five packs of cigarettes and six or seven radio tubes were missing after the car was found. The keys were missing.

The mayor of Lincoln said,

"There is no housing shortage in town. This is just a rumor put about by people who have nowhere to live."

A government employment bureau went on record thus: "Until recently the admission of foreign workers was confined to female applicants. This restriction has been relaxed and we have extended our activities accordingly. The term 'girl' now stands for any type of applicant regardless of sex."

Margate came this one: "The council has adopted a new slogan. 'There's life in the Margate air,' which is now being stamped on envelopes containing reminders that annual cemetery fees are due."

A profound mystery occurred in the town of Bath.

"On Saturday," said a local paper, "the Stanley Engineering Co. held its outing to Southsea. Owing to pressure of work none of the staff was able to go. However, a most enjoyable time was had by all."

The church column in another newspaper announced: "The minister intends to preach a series of sermons on the Seven Deadly Sins, omitting lust."

No Violence

The element of violence always adds to the interest.

In the divorce court in London, Justice Karminski ruled that a wife who threw "almost every form of domestic utensil" at her husband was not cruel because on nearly every occasion she missed.

Officialdom is never out of the fray for long.

The mayor of Lincoln said,

To make your visit even more interesting . . . every bedroom suite in our huge stock has been reduced in price. Gala Social Season Ahead for Fox Cities

Easter Marks Beginning of Spring Events Planned for Light-Hearted Fun

BY JEAN OTTO
Post-Crescent Women's Editor

The celebration of Easter signifies the end of the most subdued period of the social season. The calendar, like the season itself, springs to new life as clubs and service groups plan their activities for the loveliest time of the year.

Many events are scheduled during the next few weeks. Some are planned to help particular charities; others are designed simply for fun and friendship.

One of the big events for the women of the Fox Valley is the annual 'Homes in Review' planned by the Genevieve Paulson and Charity Circles of The King's Daughters. Five homes will be visited and the tour will end with a tea at the home of Mrs. LeRoy Stohlman, 1725 S. Connell St.

Style shows take every woman's fancy as warm weather and a change in activity turn her thoughts to a new wardrobe and the changing style scene. One of the most unusual is the cocktail hour fashion show for couples planned by the Silver Cross Circle of The King's Daughters from 6 to 8 p.m. May 15. It will be held at Riverview Country Club. Another fashion preview is planned by the Kaukauna Jaycettes. This too is scheduled May 15 and will be held at the Kaukauna V.F.W. Clubhouse. The show theme is 'Spring Dreams'.

Clothing made by sewing classes at the Little Chute Vocational School classes will be shown in a style preview Monday evening at the Little Chute Village Hall. The Appleton Business and Professional Women have announced their 'Sun and Fun' style show will be held June 13.

'Flea Market on the Agenda'

A Flea Market with seven booths will be given by Benefit Circle of The King's Daughters May 11 at Valley Fair. To be featured are a boutique; flowers and plants; food and cookbooks; toys and children's miscellaneous; pig-in-a-poke; records, books and magazines, and small household appliances, small furniture, dishes, bedding and curtains. A French decor will be carried out.

The Appleton Woman's Club will have its annual Spring Luncheon May 3 at Riverview Country Club. The Junior Woman's Club May Banquet has been set for May 15 at Alex's Manor House. This new organization will receive its charter from the State Junior Director and new officers will be installed at the 7 p.m. event.

Appleton Jaycettes will sponsor a Spring Dance April 27 at Holiday Inn. Also occupying the time of members of the Jaycettes and the Jaycees are plans for the annual Miss Appleton Pageant to be May 5 at Appleton High School. Appleton Memorial Hospital Auxiliary's Spring Guest luncheon has been planned at 1 p.m. Thursday at the Conway Hotel.

Lawyers, doctors and dentists wives of the county will have a luncheon May 29 at Butte des Morts Golf Club. This will be the first such event held in the Fox River Valley. On May 13, Lawyers Wives of Outagamie County will entertain at a reception for Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Diedrich. Board Members will act as hostesses at the event at Worcester Art Center.

Sweet Adelines Plan Mardi Gras

Women of the First English Lutheran Church will be guests at a Mother-Daughter Banquet at 6 p.m. May 8 at the church. The Fox Valley Pan-Hellenic Council has planned its tea for senior high school girls and their mothers April 29 at the Lawrence College Memorial Union Lounge.

A gay and harmonious weekend is being planned for members of Sweet Adelines, Inc., who attend the Lower Great Lakes Region No. 5 Quartet and Chorus Competition May 26 and 27. The main events will take place at Xavier

The centerpiece above combines the flowers of Springtime in a harmonious and interesting arrangement. Pussy willows, daffodils and sweet peas say in their delicate way that winter has gone and the promise of springtime is at hand. Below is a group of flowers beneath a greenhouse roof. The arrangement is composed of azaleas, daffodils and irises. The scene at left is a uniting of the Easter and spring themes that shows the whiteness of the traditional lily, the sparkling clarity of a waterfall and the eternal message of hope.

Springtime and flowers are natural go-togethers. From the first budding crocus that suddenly opens its face to the sun, to the slender stemmed tulip and lacy daffodil; from the magnificence of the peony bloom to the fragility of a budding rose, flowers are enjoyed and appreciated by everyone. They symbolize renewal and rebirth, the shedding of the dark and somber, and the embracing of the light and happy. They are Easter and its meaning in the truest sense.

Good Dating Habits Improve Your Play

BY ALFRED SHEINWOLD

When a sociologist has nothing else to do he writes about the dating habits of the American male—or perhaps of the female. This column has done a tremendous amount of research and has gotten its face slapped 8.3 times (the fraction was a near miss) to get the truth for its readers.

It boils down to this: When an American female says "I'll meet you at the information desk at lead and then keep your date with the king of clubs in dummy. By that time the last two clubs should be good, and you arrive in dummy just in time to cash them.

Double Date
In some hands the principle of keeping a date with a high card may extend to two suits.

You have 11 tricks in high cards and need one additional trick for the slam. Where do you find your twelfth trick?

The heart finesse is a possibility, but a poor one. It's a far better idea to set up one of dummy's clubs as your twelfth trick.

This means that you must make a date with the jack of spades. You want to win a trick with dummy's jack of spades on the third round of trumps and after dummy's clubs have been set up. You must also make a date in clubs. You must not win a club in dummy until the second round of that suit.

Correct Play
The correct play is to win the first diamond with the king and draw just one round of trumps. Now you lead a low club from your hand and play low (or, perhaps, the nine of clubs) from dummy.

East wins and returns the jack of hearts. If you had drawn a second trump, East would have returned a third trump to make you early for your date with the jack of spades.

When the heart is returned you win with the ace. Draw one more trump with the king of spades, and then lead a club to keep your date with dummy's king of clubs.

Ruff Low Club
You can now ruff a low club and lead a trump back to dummy's jack. This draws the last trump and puts you in dummy at a time when the last small club is established. Cash the ace of clubs and the last club to get rid of your two losing hearts.

You will not make the slam if you develop the clubs by cashing the top clubs first and then ruffing a club. This would work if the six missing clubs broke 3-3, but the actual 4-2 break would leave the clubs still unestablished.

You should expect an unequal break in both black suits. That is, the four missing spades should break 3-1, and the six missing clubs should break 4-2. The correct line of play assures the slam against these expected breaks.

Leather Skirts, Dresses, Jackets Appear for Spring

Leather makes fashion news this spring in the flutter of flared skirts, the swing of short jackets and the drape of fluid dresses.

Soft and supple, leather shapes itself to the figure to achieve the feminine look prized this season. Grained, smooth and suede leather apparel is designed for 'round-the-clock wear in city or suburb.

Adding to the ultra-feminine look are prominently stitched seams, tucks and darts, large patch pockets and oversized self-leather buttons. Youthful lines are set off by collarless, narrow shoulder coats that flare as they drop. Princess collars and high lapels are also seen.

For the costume look that makes a day in town a fashion occasion, leading stylists have designed smooth leather boleros, suede leather stoles and grained leather shrugs to accent and en-that make their own mark on the sunny landscape.

In suburbia, informal fashions have gone feminine too. Jackets are broader, swinging out from wide shoulders. Both suede and smooth leather jackets are favored for a trip to the supermarket or a conference at school. Often leather is teamed with other soft fabrics and knits.

five o'clock sharp," she scores 10 points if you get there at 4:30 or if you go to Grand Central when she meant Penn Station. She scores 2 points for every five minutes she keeps you waiting after 5 o'clock, with a special red-point bonus if you're still waiting at 6 o'clock.

At the Bridge Table
Things are different at the bridge table. Punctuality is the courtesy of kings—and of aces. When you have a date with a king or an ace you're supposed to be at the right spot at the right time.

Take a simple example. Dummy has A-5-4-3-2 and you have 8-7-6 of clubs. There are no side entries to the dummy, and you need three club tricks. How do you go about it?

You make a date with the ace of clubs. You will meet the ace of clubs in the dummy on the third round of the suit and not a moment sooner or later.

You lose the first club trick to an opponent, regain the lead somehow, and lose a second club trick to an opponent. Once more you regain the lead, and now it's time to keep your date. You lead your third club to dummy's ace, and by this time the last two clubs in dummy should be good. You arrive in dummy just in time to cash those last two clubs.

It wouldn't do you any good to arrive too early for your date. If you take the first or second club trick with dummy's ace you can set up the club suit but you cannot get back to dummy to cash the last two clubs.

It wouldn't do you any good to arrive too early for your date. If you take the first or second club trick with dummy's ace you can set up the club suit but you cannot get back to dummy to cash the last two clubs.

Works With Kings
The same principle works with kings. Suppose dummy has K-5-4-3-2 of clubs and you have A-7-6. You need four club tricks, with no side entry to dummy.

You make a date with the king of clubs. You will meet the king of clubs in the dummy on the third round of the suit and not a moment sooner or later.

You win the first club trick with the ace and deliberately lose the second club trick. Regain the

To Tip or Not to Tip Question Is How Much

Take a tip on tipping from seasoned travellers who have gone before: The first time you see Paris, or anywhere else where American tourists congregate, travel experts suggest a "Tip Top" travel budget—figured out in advance.

In most foreign countries, under-tipping may mark you strictly from Podunk and you may be treated accordingly. Even worse, if you find smirking head waiters and indifferent porters financially intimidating, over-tipping may cause you to run short of travel funds.

In either case, knowing the tipping rules—including whom to tip, how much and when—also saves embarrassment, often shoe leather. And planning ahead of time for those many small outlays that are part of any trip from a native habitat, prevents an equally large number of annoyances en route.

Authorities differ, of course, but the old rule of 10 to 20 per cent of the bill still holds for how much, when other standards are unknown. Depending upon the place, the circumstances and the amount of service you expect, a conservative 15 per cent will generally do the trick—especially when it's bestowed with a self-assured, knowing manner.

Be Prepared
The trick of being prepared for sudden small expenditures above transportation costs, however, is applying the 15 per cent tipping rule to your whole travel budget. If your trip out of the country, for instance, is going to cost you roughly around $800—and you won't go far on that, if you go by boat—better allow at least $120 or 15 per cent of that amount for tipping.

Although most hotels and restaurants on the Continent add a service charge of 10 to 15 per cent of the total to your bill and, theoretically, you should not have to do any more tipping, in practice there are always extras and you should tip the porter for carrying your bags, for example, about 40 cents worth of the local currency. The doorman who calls for a taxi expects about 15 cents on tips at the hairdresser's or worth, and so does anyone else for the hatchback girl back home!

OSC Best Dressed Coed Excited About June Trip to New York

BY JIM GREINER
 "My family is going to have quite a summer this year," said Miss Linda Lee Clark. Miss Clark is the 18-year-old OSC freshman who has been chosen one of the "Ten Best Dressed College Girls in America" in a GLAMOUR Magazine contest. She explained that her 21-year-old sister, Bonnie, will be married June 2 and will honeymoon in Mexico, and that her 16-year-old brother, Bill, will spend the summer away from home as a winner of a Johnson Wax contest. He will study in New England and Mexico.

"I think it will be a little lonely for my parents," Miss Clark said. Her father is employed at the Chain Belt Co., Milwaukee, and her mother works at J. C. Penney Co. in Milwaukee.

Miss Clark calls Milwaukee her hometown, although she was born in Waukesha and lived in that nearby city until the summer of 1960, when the Clark family moved to their present home in Milwaukee, at 4004 52nd St.

As one of the Top Ten in the country, Miss Clark will fly to New York April 25 and spend three days there being photographed among the famous sights of that city for the August issue of GLAMOUR. Final arrangements for this trip are still being made, according to Miss Clark.

The first two weeks of June, Miss Clark and the other nine winners will be guests of GLAMOUR, "wined, dined, and gifted at a dizzy pace," according to press releases sent out by GLAMOUR.

Will See New York
 During their two week stay in New York, as guests of the magazine, the ten will take part in a glamorous fashion show at Carnegie Hall, at which time they will be introduced to over 1,000 members of the fashion industry. They will also be shown the many interest points of the city.

Miss Clark was notified of her selection as one of the Top Ten by a telegram from the editor-in-chief of GLAMOUR, Kathleen Ashton Casey, which she received last Monday.

Miss Clark says she was working in the Reeve Memorial Union Cafeteria Monday night, when her room-mate, Rosemary Ehlinger, Wabino, and another girl in Radford Hall Women's Dorm, brought the telegram to her.

Looking at the condition of the telegram, one could see that Miss Clark was being very truthful when she said that she was "very excited and I couldn't seem to get it open."

Tuesday evening, Miss Clark received a call from Jackie Connors of GLAMOUR, at which time preliminary arrangements for her trip to New York April 25 were made. Miss Clark will fly from Milwaukee, leaving at 1:30 p.m., and will be met in New York by a representative of GLAMOUR.

"I'm really looking forward to this first trip," Miss Clark said. "This will be the first time that I have ever been in an airplane."

Designs Clothes Too
 Miss Clark has traveled little in her life, concentrating on events and occasions near her home. She has developed quite an interest in making and designing clothes. In fact, one of the dresses she posed in for the pictures to be entered in the national contest was her own design. Three pictures of Miss Clark were entered in the contest, one an on-campus outfit, one an off-campus daytime outfit, and one a party dress. The pictures were taken by the executive editor of the ADVANCE, OSC newspaper, Robert Sievert of Beaver Dam.

Graduating from Pulaski High School, Milwaukee, in 1961, Miss Clark enrolled in the lower Elementary Division of the college. She plans to go into first or second grade teaching after graduation. She hopes to find a position either in Wisconsin, or "in some place nice and warm."

Plans Indefinite
 Her summer plans hinge on an interview Miss Clark is having with a representative of Marshall-Fields department store in Milwaukee this weekend. Her name was recommended to the store by Mrs. Ruth Nelson, OSC dean of women, for a position on the store's College Board.

This is a year of firsts for Miss Clark; the first time to New York, the first time in airplane, win the 'Best Dressed' award. She is a and the first time working before a fashion camera.

Assisting Miss Clark in posing, and makeup and dressing was Mrs. Geraldine Robinson, wife of Dr. Roy Robinson, OSC professor of psychology. Mrs. Robinson was formerly associated with a commercial fashion modeling agency.

"Even if I would not have been fortunate enough to be selected a national winner, I would have gained a lot of knowledge about fashion," Miss Clark said.

She was chosen OSC's representative in the contest by a panel of ten students and one faculty member of OSC. Notification was received about three weeks ago that she was selected as one of the 22 semi-finalists in the national contest, from whom the ten final winners were selected.

Not Superstitious
 "I almost didn't enter the contest," Miss Clark said. "On the night of the first local judging, I was combing my hair and dropping a mirror. It broke. I had almost changed my mind. Then I thought, 'If I'm going to have bad luck, so what?' and I entered the local judging. I am sure glad now that I didn't let the broken mirror change my mind."

A reception is planned for her by the co-sponsors of the OSC portion of the contest, Student Government Legislature and the ADVANCE, on May 9 in the Reeve Memorial Union Lounge. It will be open to students, faculty members, and the press.

"I just can't wait to see New York," Miss Clark said. "It sounds so big and so fabulous."

She added that "everyone here is talking about my trip, but it's hard to realize that I'm actually going. I imagine that I won't either, until I'm really there and enjoying the two weeks."

Miss Linda Clark is shown here in Clark; the first time to New York, the first time in airplane, win the 'Best Dressed' award. She is a and the first time working before a fashion camera.

Choose Diamonds With Care

With more than four out of every five brides getting a diamond engagement ring these days, a great many young people are apt to be thinking about this purchase during these next few weeks and since there probably will never be a more important diamond in the girl's life, the ring should be chosen with considerable care.

When you buy something about which you have no technical knowledge, be sure to buy it from someone on whom you can rely. In this instance, the answer, of course, is a reliable jeweler.

If you are thinking of buying, or even eyeing a diamond, here are some important pointers about these beautiful gems which you should know. The Council recommends that you be guided by what it calls the "4 C's," that is color, clarity, cut and carat.

Colors Range
 "Color" in a diamond is a delicate thing; a faint shade or tone can make a world of difference. Diamonds have been found in varying colors, from colorless to white to deep yellow, brown, blue and even black. The finest commercial diamonds, so far as color is concerned, resemble a crystal clear drop of water.

"Clarity" refers to a diamond's freedom from imperfections such as spots of carbon, internal cracks or tiny bubbles. Nothing in nature is perfect and a diamond is a product of nature. The smaller the flaws in a diamond and the fewer there are, the greater the value. For commercial purposes a diamond which shows no flaws to an expert eye under a 10-power jeweler's magnifying glass may be advertised legally as "perfect" or "flawless."

Cut Refers to Shape
 "Cut" refers to the shape of the diamond and the process by which it is changed from the rough to the faceted stone. Regardless of how clear or large a diamond may be, until it is cut and polished, it has very little beauty. In fact, the full measure of its beauty, meaning its fire and brilliance, is attained only by the proper cutting.

"Carat," the fourth "C," is the acceptable standard of weight for diamonds. The carat is divided into 100 points. Thus when a girl says her diamond is one quarter carat she means 5 points.

Keep in mind there are more small diamonds in nature than large ones, and, as with everything else, rarity creates value. Thus, a two carat diamond may cost three times as much as a one carat stone which is otherwise equal in all respects.

Oven Frying

Oven frying is actually baking at a very high temperature for a short time. It is recommended for tender meats such as fish and chicken. To fry fish, for instance, dip the fillets in salted evaporated milk and roll in cornflake, or bread crumbs. Place in a single layer on a well-greased cookie sheet and drizzle with melted butter. Bake in an oven preheated to 500 degrees for 10 to 12 minutes until fish flakes easily when tested with a fork.

Select Air Conditioner In Spring

Families who buy room air conditioners before summer heat and humidity set in will be ahead on several counts:

They'll get the exact unit they want and they can have it installed at their convenience. It will be ready to provide quick comfort when the first hot day arrives — sometimes early in spring.

An electric room air conditioner should be chosen with care because it is a fine, rugged appliance that provides a permanent solution to the problem of summer comfort.

Take Your Pick
 Off-season shopping enables families to escape the pressure of buying during a summer heat wave. They avoid the temptation of buying a model that's not quite right for their particular cooling problem — just because it's available.

There's such a great variety of room air conditions on the market today — with a wide range of cooling capacities and special features—that a family will have no problem meeting their particular cooling needs. If a model isn't in stock, pre-season shopping allows the dealer plenty of time to order it from the supplier.

Buy Btu's
 The first step in selecting a room air conditioner is to determine the needed cooling capacity. To do this, a home owner provides his appliance dealer with a few facts: the size, location, and use of the area to be cooled; number of windows and which direction they face, and whether electric circuits are 115, 208, or 230 volts.

With this information, a dealer can find the cooling capacity needed in terms of Btu's. Because the Btu method is the most accurate way of rating cooling capacity, it has replaced "horsepower" and "ton" designations.

New Floor

Resilient floor coverings such as Kentile solid vinyl can be installed directly over old tile floors if the original tiles are tight and level.

Cut Down on Pipe Odors
Wives with pipe-smoking hus- bands can cut down on foul-pipe odor by leaving a box of tissues next to hubby's easy chair. When he's finished with a bowl- ful, ask him to knock out the ashes and press about three-quar- ters of a tissue into the bowl, then turn the tissue inside it. The tis- sue will absorb the tars in the bowl that usually are missed by a pipe cleaner. Odor is reduced by removing the tars from the heat retained by the bowl.

If you wish to tint white flow- ers, try standing their stems in food coloring or a commercial floral dye.

Your Problems

Girl Wants to Keep Ambitious Boyfriend 'Down on the Farm'

BY ANN LANDERS
DEAR ANN LANDERS: Three years ago my boy friend was just a farm boy working after school and on Saturdays as an assistant janitor in the City Hall. Floyd started college with $400 he had saved. He goes to school from 7-30 until 4.30. Then he goes to work from 4.30 till 8 p.m. His Saturday job pays him $14.

building a future. You should be pleased and proud of the guy. Floyd sounds like a young man who knows where he's going and is willing to paddle his own canoe to get there. If you don't appreciate him, turn him loose. There are plenty of girls who would love to have him.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Last evening our 27-year-old son announced to his father and me that he is going to the hospital to have his ears operated on. I told him I had no idea there was anything wrong with his hearing. He informed me rather matter-of-factly that his hearing is ex- cellent. He is having the tendons behind his ears severed so his ears will lie down flat next to his head.

I am sure his girl friend put him up to this nonsense because he was never a vain person. Al- though the children used to tease him about his ears when he was young, he always took it good-naturedly. Please say something in your column about this. If he saw in print how foolish it is, he'd give up the idea. —GL. D.

Dear GL. D.: The advice is for you. Mother, not for him. Please keep your nose out of your 27-year-old son's ears.

The operation is a simple one and the results could make an enormous difference in his general outlook. Merely be- cause people take teasing "good-naturedly" is not proof that it doesn't bother them.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am 16, a junior in high school, and a real washout. No fellow has ever asked me out a second time. There must be something wrong with me.

When I'm getting dressed for a date I'm all excited and can think of a million things to talk about. The minute I'm alone with a guy I freeze right up and wish I were home.

My girl friends keep asking how come Pat, Herb or Dick never called back. I lie and say they did call but I didn't like the creeps well enough to accept another date.

Please, Ann, how can I develop an interesting personality and not bore a guy to death? I feel like a great big nothing. —Flopsville

Dear Flopsville: I have yet to meet a fellow who was bored when a girl fastener her large eyes on him and asked ques- tions about himself. This for- mula is older than the hills and the direct route to social se- curity.

It may take as many as three questions before the guy will unwind the story of his

Vocational School Sets Courses

Gourmet foods and patio and outdoor cookery courses will be offered at the Appleton Vocational and Adult School, Homemaking Division. Mrs. Robert Rusch is the instructor.

The five week gourmet food course will begin at 7 p.m. April 30. Instruction will consist of food finesse, curtain raisers for lunch- eons or dinners, connoisseur soup repertoire, preparation of sauces, vegetables, meats, breads and desserts.

The patio and outdoor cookery course will begin at 7 p.m. May 1. The five week course will in- clude study of equipment, kind- ing a fire, cooking with broil- ers, roasters, griddles and grills, and preparation of drinks, appetizers, soups, meats, sauces and salads. The course is open to men and women.

Registration may be made at the Appleton Vocational and Adult School office.

If you can get a fellow to talk about himself, he'll think you are the most interesting person in the world.

Does almost everyone have a good time but you? If so, send for Ann Landers' booklet, "How To Be Well-Liked," enclosing with your request 20 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope. (Copyright 1962)

Encourage Youngsters To Help You

Summer is a'comin in, and it's time to put away the family's winter clothes and reorganize closets and bureau drawers.

You can encourage your chil- dren to be neat by showing them how to clean their drawers and arrange their clothes in them.

First clean the empty drawers with a damp sponge and dry them with a clean, white cloth. Let the children choose their fa- vorite color drawer lining and cut it to fit each drawer. Children are inclined to be more orderly if they take part in this activity.

It is a good idea to keep un- derclothes together in one draw- er and overclothes in another. Arrange shorts, undershirts, socks, and pajamas in one draw- er; shirts, sweaters, and jackets in another.

Organize Drawers
Use the top drawer for mit- tens, gloves, ties, handkerchiefs, caps, jewelry, and an extra sup- ply of shoelaces. You'll find it easier to teach children to put away their clothes if each piece of clothing has a place assigned to it.

If you have a hall closet for outerwear, give each child a place for his rain gear, jacket, coat and cap. If possible, give each child a shelf for his own schoolbooks, small outdoor toys and other personal possessions.

Replace old shelf coverings with new easy-to-clean coverings. Mar- valon adhesive coverings, for ex- ample, are plastic-coated and can be wiped clean with a damp cloth or paper towel, or scrubbed if necessary.

A Backdrop for the Bed and cantonniere treatment at the windows give this room the illusion of height it needs to accommodate the distinctive furnishings. The monotony of color is relieved by the backdrop designed of deep, medium and light olive yarns. Bed and benches are antique-finished white.

Designing Woman

Treatment Gives Illusion of Height

Distinctive furnishings planned for this room demand more height than the 8 foot high ceiling provides, so interior designer Hay- good Lasseter, A.I.D., made the ceiling look higher. He quite lit- erally lifted the style of the room to an impressive level with a fool- the-eye treatment for the win- dows, and a backdrop for the bed.

Ordinary windows, low on the wall and untrimmed, are given shades, and more of it that is smart cantonniere style framing stitched on crosswise. Black-out with the horizontal high at the fabric lines the shades to shut out ceiling line rather than at the strong morning sun, and the window treatment finishes with sheer daron curtains.

Desk Chosen Instead
The back drop relieves the mo- notonous plainness of the walls, and dramatizes the bed while it pushes the ceiling upward with a lighted cornice at the highest pos- sible level. Mr. Lasseter designed it of narrow wood slats in the wall off-white, woven with yarns in the shades of deep, medium and light olive which echo fabric and carpet colors. The bed and benches are antique-finished white. Space a nightstand might occupy is better used for a desk, placed close enough to be reach- ed from the bed. A tray table also provides novel bedside conven- ience.

Function, Texture, Color Make Delight of Home Carpeting

Function, beauty, texture and color come to the fore for spring '62 to give the homemaker the most for her carpet and rug dollar. And, it's a happy surprise to learn that it costs no more to carpet a home today than it did ten years ago. For the same price per square yard as that of eight years ago, the homemaker can find a carpet or rug designed for today's family needs and preferences. And in terms of service, carpet continues to offer extra dividends in value. Soft floor coverings have undergone vast changes in style, but their functional value remains the same—silencing the noise in today's busy homes, providing comfort and warmth underfoot and easy maintenance as well.

Faster and more efficient methods of production, which have largely been responsible for the better values currently offered in carpets and rugs, have at the same time accounted for a further emphasis on style.

Color Choices

Color, for example—comes in just about any shade you want. The old "gray, green or rose" limit is a thing of the past, and it's a rare carpet line today that doesn't offer a choice of at least seven or eight different colors. Some carpetings come in as many as two dozen colors.

Among the newest high-fashion colors are such rich tones as deep purple and henna. Dramatic shades now brighten the palette, and in some lines formerly muted tones have been boldly deepened.

If you like light, bright colors, you'll find them in abundance—many of them in "color blends." (Some of this color blending is even done electronically, as one example of new production methods.) Here, too, is an example of practicality without sacrificing style, resulting in better value for the consumer.

Loop and Pile

If you like pale green, for instance, but feel that the light color would show soil too easily in a heavy-traffic spot, look for this color in a blend. Several shades of green might be combined in a carpet which gives a solid-color effect at first glance, but is actually far more practical in appearance retention. The same method is used for dozens of different combinations.

Much of the current interest in new carpet and rug styles lies in the combination of color with texture. The textured pile of a carpet, in fact, often results in a unique tone or shading which could not be achieved by the use of color alone. Multi-level pile, for example, creates a color effect of its own, by the play of light on the pile. The same is true of "rough-smooth" textures when looped pile is combined with cut pile.

The texture range in new styles also includes those with a heavy, handcrafted look, swirling loop designs, bulky curled loops, striated effects and long, shaggy yarns for both rugs and carpets.

These new stylings are being woven, tufted or knitted in several different types of fiber and fiber blends. Although wool is still the leading fiber for carpets and rugs—used for nearly two-thirds of American carpets and rugs during the past year—man-made fibers make important contributions to production and style.

Ways to Finish Old Furniture Innumerable

Lacquer, Shellac, Paint, Plastic, Oil Can Be Used

BY ROGER C. WHITMAN

There are so many ways to finish furniture that complete books have been devoted to this one subject. They range from A to Z—antiquing to zebra-stripping.

But every one is perfectly possible for any do-it-yourselfer who is willing to take time and care. And most certainly you can count on a real saving.

One of the most widely-used finishes of all is two or three thin coats of water-clear varnish applied over the properly stained and sealed wood.

But there are many other finishes. They can employ lacquer, shellac, paint, enamel, or just plain oil and polish. They can call for the use of decals, masking tape or your innate skill with the stripping brush.

"Antiquing," takes some time but gives a very nice effect, especially for turn-of-the-century pieces with carvings and curlicues. On a base of flat paint, usually white, you add any decorations, or gold strips or monograms, etc. Then a couple of thin coats of flat varnish.

When dry, you wipe on the "antique" brownish overtone, doing it with a saturated cloth. Almost immediately you wipe this off again, using a circular motion. What remains is an interesting off-white effect, with most of it collecting in the corners and carved areas. The final step is protecting your work with two more thin coats of flat varnish.

There's another type of finish somewhat along these lines, most often used in open-grained woods. It's a two-toned effect, like a black table top with the grain showing up white, called "African" or "silver fox" by some people. It's easy to do.

You stain the table black, being careful to apply it thin, so it won't fill up the pores. When dry, give it a sealing coat of thinned shellac. Then rub on white paste filler over the whole table top, and immediately wipe it off again across the grain, using a coarse cloth. This wipes all the white off, except what's caught in the grain.

The blond effects, running from honey color to silvery gray or other light tints, start by bleaching the bare wood. The color is achieved through wiping on the stain of the desired shade, sealing this when dry and finishing with clear spraying lacquer.

Masking tape can be used to great advantage for putting designs on enameled furniture.

One caution: When painting any furniture apt to be chewed by the young fry, be meticulously careful to use paint containing absolutely no lead. Examine the label, and if in doubt, ask the dealer.

Some months ago, the deep-gloss Oriental lacquer effect was described in some detail, where the effect of the finish is so deep it looks almost three-dimensional. In brief, this is achieved by putting on 10 or more thin coats of clear lacquer over a base coat of colored lacquer. This takes a good deal of time, because you sand each coat lightly before putting on the next, but the hand-some results are well worth the effort. And the more coats of the clear, the richer the luster.

Another "conversation piece" finish could also be summarized again. This is the "decoupage" treatment. It consists of shellacking a table top, or the top of a chest, and while the shellac is still wet, smoothing on sheets of old newspapers, or magazine covers, or sheet music, or any picture, for that matter. Then this novel covering is given another coat of shellac, followed by ten thin coats of clear varnish.

Then there are the handsome and durable plastic laminates. These laminates are applied with special cement, which is widely available. You can also get it in strips for edging.

Many Young Pairs Buy Home Early Instead of Renting

Thousands of today's young couples are breaking with the old pattern of starting wedded life in rented quarters by buying a home on or soon after marriage.

Federal Housing Administration figures show that in the second quarter of 1961 more than 14 per cent of the buyers of new homes who used FHA-insured mortgage financing were under 25 years old, and that an additional 26 per cent of them were between 25 and 29 years of age. Similar percentages are shown with respect to the age of buyers of existing homes under FHA financing.

House of the Week

Owner's Family Can Live in Kitchen

BY JULES LOH

How many times have you said this yourself: "I don't know why we even have a living room, everybody always winds up in the kitchen."

It seems to be a universal trait of Americans. Whether at a party, or a get-together with the neighbors, or just in the course of every day, there always seems to be a congregation in the kitchen.

The only trouble is, most kitchens nowadays can't handle the crowd. Somewhere during the past generation of home building — probably as a result of the headlong rush for "efficiency" — the American kitchen shrank.

Architect Rudolph A. Matern set out to restore it to its rightful place of prominence in this up-to-date one-level home. It is design J-16 in the House of the Week series.

The kitchen in this house contains 216 square feet — as large as many living rooms. With all its size, however, its U-shaped work area will save the housewife multitudes of steps. There is plenty of counter space, and an abundance of cabinets — nearly 33 linear feet of them.

Another striking feature of this house is the outdoor living room which connects the garage and the main house and is partially covered by the roof. From the front it looks like part of the main house and adds length to the exterior view. From the inside, too, this 170-square-foot outdoor area serves to enlarge the living room both visually and physically. The server bar should not be overlooked as an aid to outdoor dining and entertaining.

All the bedrooms are of good size, with more than enough closet space — if that's possible.

J-16

A three-bedroom one-story house with basement, two baths, large kitchen and breakfast area, living room with fireplace, dining room, large foyer, attached garage and outdoor living room connecting garage and main house.

House contains 1,478 square feet of living area, not counting single car garage and 170-square-foot outdoor living room, in overall dimensions of 29' 3" deep by 78' 1" wide. Garage adds 13' 8" and outdoor living room 10' to overall length. Main house is 54' 5" wide.

There are six closets in the master bedroom, three in the second bedroom and two in the third. Note how the bank of closets serves as a sound buffer between bedrooms two and three.

For all of its commodious rooms, the house still is well within the medium-size category. There are 1,478 square feet of living area, not counting the garage and outdoor living room, in over-all dimensions of 29' 3" deep by 78' 1" wide.

Rarely do you think of the basement steps as something glamorous, but take a look at these. A glass planter bay extends from the ceiling to three steps below the floor level, creating a balcony effect for the kitchen breakfast area. The net result is that the kitchen becomes as attractive as it is functional.

Convenient Burners

The planter bay also allows plenty of natural light on the stairway and into the kitchen, especially since it is side-by-side with the triple windows over the sink. The combination also makes for excellent supervision of the backyard.

One other feature of the kitchen deserves mention — the two-burner unit on the counter nearest the breakfast table. It lets you keep the coffee hot, or the soup, without getting up from the table.

The main bathroom of this home is situated ideally, convenient both to the bedroom wing and the kitchen. It has double lavatories plus a second vanity on the opposite wall. The bathroom adjoining the master bedroom also has a large vanity and a stall shower.

The formal living area is well-ordered and attractive. The main entry is covered, with side lights on each side of the front door, and the foyer is large and private. The fireplace is a design feature of both the living room and foyer, with vertically stacked brick and an adjoining planter.

A large bow window adds interest in the living room and assures plenty of daylight, along with the sliding glass door to the outdoor room. The window is excellent too, not only for brightness but also for furniture arrangement.

The exterior of this house has clean, low lines and a fresh, modern look. Almost the entire front is faced with vertically stacked maintenance brick which accents the horizontal lines emphasized in the planter boxes.

Architect Translates Ideas Into Fitting, Workable Plans

If you are remodeling or building a new home, an architect can help translate your ideas into workable plans by making suggestions which match the needs, interests and desires of your family.

The first job of an architect is understanding what you have in mind for your home. He will help you select a lot, or, if you already have one, he will examine it for orientation, grade, breeze and excavation conditions. If you plan to buy or remodel an older house, he will evaluate it for you.

Next, the architect will develop rough sketches of your house showing overall character, room sizes and arrangement. He'll discuss the sketches with you to make sure they include all that's necessary and omit all that's not necessary.

Picks Contractor

There will be no doubt about extending your thoughts were included. After bids are submitted by contractors you and the architect have selected, he will help you choose the builder who will give the most performance for the lowest price.

During construction, the architect examines progress to see that the specifications and drawings are followed exactly. This assures that materials are of the quality recommended, and are used as recommended. He keeps records to see that the contractor is paid, and when the house is completed, all guarantees are filed to be sure you have what you paid for.

The architect's fee is determined at the start, written into a contract signed by you and the architect. For consultation on special projects, or for criticism of your existing plans, the fee usually depends on the time consumed.

For the design and construction supervision of a new home, there are three standard methods of paying an architect: 1. A percentage of the total cost of the home, usually 7 to 10 per cent; 2. An agreed-on fixed sum, or 3. A straight salary plus expenses.

New Toilets Save Water

Modern water closets are designed to save water in flushing, a fact of particular importance and interest to homeowners in areas where water must be conserved.

Home Can Look Like New One By Restyling

Plan Carefully Before Proceeding With Any Changes

You can have a new-looking home — without buying a new home — if you plan carefully and restyle your present home.

Check the sun first before you remodel. Its movements help determine the best location for rooms, position for windows and size of eaves.

For example, in many street-oriented houses, the stair hall is on the south side where it blocks out the sun. Solution? Cut in a new window — and a new entry hall. Then you can take down the partition in the stair hall and let the sun into the living room. At the same time, you can add closets in the entry hall, right where they are most needed.

If you add a wing, make sure it's not overbearing or out of proportion. If it is, turn it into the main house and use the old house as a wing.

Many old houses have double parlors which can be converted into living rooms once the dividing arch and fretwork are removed. If the room is proportionately large, high ceilings may be satisfactory. If you object to their height, you can lower them at little more than the cost of replastering (which the ceilings probably need, anyway).

Painting the entire exterior of your house in a solid color will bring a conglomeration of wood, stone, stucco and brick into unity at a low cost.

Give Exterior of Home New Look Through Resurfacing

It is possible to give the exterior of an old house a sparkling new lease on life and to increase its value through techniques of resurfacing which have been proven for many years.

Aging and weathering of exteriors often occur even though a house remains structurally sound. This soundness can be retained by covering the house with a portland cement masonry coating, while at the same time creating a brand new facing. Cost for this process is comparatively low. The new face also retains and in many cases increases real estate values.

Stucco work is a popular technique used for revitalizing homes. A solid masonry membrane is created consisting of three coats of portland cement plaster mechanically bonded to each other and to the surface of the building. The resurfacing is achieved by the use of self-furring metal lath, which is the base for the first coat of portland cement plaster. Usually, the lath, which also acts as a reinforcement, is nailed directly to the surface being refinished. Metal lath makes it possible to use the technique over a variety of materials such as wood siding, brick, cinder block and concrete, which results in a new exterior with exciting natural color.

Total thickness of stucco plaster is usually 3/4 in. The finished surface is durable, water-resistant, vermin-proof, noncombustible and often prevents infiltration of air by covering cracks and joints. It also eliminates many costly maintenance problems.

Help Create New Rooms

Wall Coverings Offer Series of Colors, Designs

Wall coverings are offered in an almost endless variety of colors, materials and designs. You can create "new rooms" in your home with new wall coverings and a little planning.

Here are facts about wall covering materials, production methods, uses and proper care which will be helpful to you in planning new wall covering for your home.

Machine printed or roll-printed wallpaper is made on high-speed roller presses, similar to those which print magazines and newspapers. Specially coated paper is run through the rollers, one roller for each color.

Sometimes the roller gives the paper an embossed or textured surface. Because it is mass produced, some machine-printed papers are less expensive.

Use Stencil Screen-printed paper is made by using a type of stencil known as a milk-screen. Coated paper is laid out on long tables, then a screen is placed on one end of the paper and the desired pigment forced through patterned openings in the screen with a squeegee. The screen is moved ahead and the process repeated.

There's a separate screen for each color, so a floral pattern with seven beautiful colors takes about seven times as long to print as a geometric pattern in only one color. Obviously it's a slower, more expensive process than machine printing, but you're assured of a limited edition.

Prepasted paper has adhesive on the back, so all you do is cut off a strip of the proper length, dip it in water and stick it to the wall. The adhesive is slow-setting, so an amateur has plenty of time to straighten the seams and smooth out the air bubbles. It's quick and easier to hang.

Removing old paper is easier and faster if you rent a steamer. In one day you can strip off the wallpaper in an entire room, even if there are several layers.

Lot Harder It's a lot harder to take off paper which has been coated with paint. You will need to break the paint surface with a wire brush so the steam can penetrate to the paper.

If you are hiring a paperhanger, you can save money by removing the old paper yourself; then let him prepare the surface for new paper.

A paperhanger can quote you a price before the work starts, and he can also tell you how much paper you'll need. If he is hanging a heavy grass cloth or a fine mural, the rate runs higher. He also must charge for his time in preparing the wall surface—filling cracks and applying sizing.

If you choose one of the more unusual wall coverings, it may not be in stock and could require several days to obtain from a regional warehouse. If you wait to choose a paper until the day before the paperhanger comes, you may be disappointed.

New Strength Synthetics give wallpaper new strength and scubbability. Many papers have an acrylic protected surface. Others are not really paper but are nonwoven cotton and rayon fibers impregnated with a vinyl face. But most of them are hung in regulation wallpaper fashion. If your youngsters scrape their toys against the wall in the entry and stairway, then look for the heavy-duty plastic coverings originally developed for public buildings. Some are almost one-eighth inch thick with attractive texture and coloring. These heavy coverings should be hung by a professional.

Hi-fi stereo fans will like wall covering that's about one-fourth inch thick and controls both sound and temperature. It comes in rolls or tiles with a washable surface-colored and patterned-like wallpaper.

To help keep wallpaper clean, put clear plastic guards around light switches, and tiny plastic or felt spacers at the corners on the back of framed pictures. This spares you a telltale dust outline if you want to change their arrangement or leave the wall bare at a later time.

A kitchen ventilator (turned on before you start cooking, not after) will hold down smoky and greasy films on the walls. Keep the sources of heat (furnace, radiators, heat registers) clean so dust won't recirculate or settle on walls. Filters help keep dust from recirculating.

For nonwashable wallpapers, use a doughy cleaner to lift off dust and dirt. Your local hardware, paint or wall covering supply store has assortments of different kinds to suit your needs.

Put Plants on Tile

Windowsills, countertops and other level surfaces, if covered with a waterproof and scratch-proof material such as ceramic tile, serve beautifully as settings for plant pots and boxes.

Odd Bodies Built For Truck Chassis

Pierce Auto Body Works Produces Special Units Big Firms Don't Make

BY TOM TORIUS
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

The naked chassis of trucks pull into one end of a low-slung plant in Appleton. A week later the trucks pull out of the other end. They carry odd bodies.

It is the business of Pierce Auto Body Works Inc. to make these odd bodies. They are special bodies to do special jobs for industry. Because they are special, the large truck manufacturers can't afford to make them. Pierce can.

A Pierce Auto Body Works order might be a request from the city of Los Angeles for a huge fire engine with an 85-foot snorkel unit. The snorkel is a tower operated by a hydraulic mechanism that lifts a fireman in a platform to the high stories of burning buildings. That truck wouldn't emerge from the plant for four weeks. Douglas Ogilvie, president and general manager, feels sure snorkels will replace high ladders.

Every Inch Specified

Another order might be from Detroit Edison for a large utility body with innumerable compartments, cabinets and drawers. Detroit Edison would give specifications for every square inch of the body. Or, a bakery might ask for a number of van bodies. Or, from a telephone company could come an order for a utility body with a hydraulic derrick for setting telephone poles.

The buyer furnishes the truck and delivers it to the Pierce Auto Body Works plant at 315 S. Pierce Ave. The naked chassis probably sits on a lot for a while. There are 75 or 100 such chassis on a Pierce lot right now. Pierce usually has a backlog of orders and booth. A phosphotized paint is used, so that the finish is ionized when washed with water, making a rust resistant shield.

More Standard Units

Ogilvie is trying to steer Pierce Auto Body Works toward more standard products and away from the special, exacting and time consuming single orders. The company already makes 15 standard utility bodies designed to fit most of the needs of most of its utility customers. Pierce turns out about everything that goes through the plant is special order.

Semi-Production Line

When the chassis gets into the plant, some of the 85 Pierce employees go to work on it. If the order is for one of Pierce's standard units, the body is built on a semi-production line basis. The order is filled with a number of similar orders and from five to 30 of the component body parts are made in one production run.

As the parts are cut from flat steel, they are wheeled to the line where welders work with the steel and blueprints. Much of the welding is still done by hand, but Pierce tries to do more and more spot welding which human inaccuracy is at a minimum.

When the welding is done, equipment must be installed. Often hydraulic and electrical equipment is called for. Much of this equipment, like the snorkel units, come to Pierce "knocked down." Workers have to assemble and install it. A maze of such equipment is mounted on the fire engine bodies.

Then, the units go to a spray

From the Window of this truck body, Elmer Arnoldussen, route 1, Kaukauna, a welder, looks like this. The truck body is one of the many units Pierce Auto Body Works, Inc., Appleton, turns out. Utility bodies three of these steel units a week. It still makes some special utility bodies, but the standard units make up the biggest part of the company's production.

Four standard tankers and four standard pumpers are made in the fire apparatus division. Pierce also makes a standard rescue unit.

Corps of Distributors

Many specialized van bodies for bakeries, beverage firms remain in production. Pierce makes many other types of delivery vans and stake and platform truck bodies, too.

A number of standard and special utility trailers are made. And, Pierce produces side panels that can be attached to the sides of a pickup truck box to make a utility truck. The company has four engineers working on product design.

These products are sold all over the country through distributors. Pierce has distributors in Los Angeles; Birmingham, Ala.; Columbus Ohio, and Amarillo, Texas. Some products are sold by distributors under other brand names.

Distributed only within a 100-mile radius of Appleton are the products of Pierce's truck dealer equipment department: hoists, winches, dump bodies and the like.

Pierce still does some truck body repairs, the service that make up the major part of Pierce's business, but the company also produces bodies for fire engines, vans, dump trucks and many other special trucks.

gave the business its start.

Because Pierce workers recently elected the Teamsters Union as their bargaining agent and made a contract to reduce the work week over the next five years, eight or 10 men have been added and a second shift will be started soon.

Growth of the company has closely paralleled the growth of the trucking industry and probably will continue to act in that manner, Ogilvie says. The industry and Pierce grew gradually until World War II, when it leveled off because materials became scarce. After the war, the industry grew fast and so did Pierce.

"If we can continue to retain a good percentage of the market, we have great potential," Ogilvie says.

Since the war, the physical plant has had an addition about every two years.

New Plant a 'Dream'

Ogilvie looks toward the "snorkel" business with great hope. He also wants to take over where FWD Corp., Clintonville, left off recently. FWD discontinued making its fire engine bodies. It had body repairs, the service that Ogilvie wants to go after that share.

"But we don't have the facilities now to take over that business," Ogilvie said.

Ogilvie showed an architect's drawing of a new plant. "That's our dream," he said. "But we probably wouldn't locate it in Appleton. You have to be in central location with easy access to the east, west, north and south. We are now out of the easily accessible competitive area." He explained that shipping costs from Appleton to Pierce's major market were higher—higher than those of its competitors.

Built for Ford

Dudley H. Pierce started the business in 1913 as an auto body repair shop. He incorporated it in 1917, naming it Auto Body Works, Inc. In that same year the firm began to make truck bodies for Ford Motor Co.

About 1925 Ford began to build its own truck bodies and Pierce began its specialized operations. The company's stock is still closely held, most of it by Mrs. Eugene L. Pierce who lives at 625 W. Prospect Ave. in Appleton. Ogilvie came to the company from Kimberly Clark Corp. engineering department in 1949.

tion, then a progressive company rather than a public corporation, in 1890 purchased the mill to get closer to the source of raw materials. The knowledge that the Chicago and North Western Railway Co. was planning a line from Quinnesec into Niagara may have influenced the purchase. The line was completed in 1895.

At this time little Niagara had only a few slab or log houses built adjacent to a cedar swamp and the kids went to school in the garret of the Louis Carle cabin which stood across the rutted road from where the present Kimlark Inn now stands.

As the years moved on, new citizens came — many of them Polish coal miners from Pennsylvania; and Niagara became trilingual with the main languages the Canadian style French, the patois of the Pennsylvania Poles and of the Yankee English. The French remained together, mainly on the community's west side. This sector was, for years, called "Frenchtown," a title which has now all but vanished.

Well Planned

The Kimberly-Clark mill executives, either by instinct or company policy, took a deep interest in the community. Its collective "brains" were at the disposal of the community's pioneers, and it shows. The well-planned streets, and the rapid progress made by Niagara have few equals in Wisconsin. Some advances were accomplished through paternal persuasion, gentle and judicious. Other strides were made because of the very presence of qualified, knowledgeable engineers with cosmopolitan backgrounds.

Nevertheless, Niagara became an incorporated village in 1914 when the population stood at something over 1,200 people. Then, as early as 1917, Niagara installed a municipal water and sewerage system and, from mill-power, there were electric lights and electric power in many homes when, nearby, gas and kerosene were the illuminants.

By 1923 Niagara got around to building a community swimming pool, long before the days when they were common. As usual, advancement or development in the village must be tagged, "as a result of help from Kimberly - Clark and volunteer labor."

Nerve Center

The presence of the "Q Mill" in Niagara has had a profound effect on the community. Plant engineers help to solve technical problems, and the village has a Community House beyond what it could normally expect to have, plus an excellent hotel, The Kimlark Inn.

The Community House, the nerve center of the village is also a recreational mecca. Built by Kimberly-Clark, and maintained by the corporation, it contains the village library, the village hall, the police headquarters at a token rental of $100 per month, plus the Post Office, bowling alleys, a lunch room and, not long ago, a gymnasium. It is, among other things, a gathering place for teen-agers and village fathers say that this fact has been dominant in the fact that the police problems are scant, indeed.

Too, the plan here pays a whopping total of 22 per cent of the village budget by taxes while villagers pay $36.40 per thousand dollars for ambitious projects which few other like-sized communities can afford — a new swimming pool, an active school system and a full-fledged vocational school.

Village President, 39-year old Charles Kuder is, like almost everyone else in Niagara, an employee of Kimberly - Clark. He is a son of an early settler here, Chester Kuder. Chester and his wife, Emma, came here at a time when Niagara was new. He was imported to play baseball on the community's team in the days when baseball here was a major enterprise. An outstanding star, he worked at the plant and played baseball, a sort of a dual job.

His son, now in his eighth year as village president, is a bustling and devout son of Niagara. He avers that hard times have never visited his village. Even at the height of the great depression, Niagarans were working with some regularity — the worst being when some of the departmental employees had been cut down to a 3-day work week.

"I am really proud of this village," he said. "The people are co-operative and when we really need something, they just pitch in and do it by voluntary labor. The ski jump was built by volunteer labor and so was the ski tow; and both are nearly self-supporting."

Plant Skill

Easy access to the ingenuity and skill of plant engineers has aided the community greatly. Kuder agrees; and he pointed out that the presence of the mill has been of monumental value to the community. There are few villages of this size — its population is 2,083 — which can afford so ambitious a project as its new $175,000 swimming pool and its many advantages. Kuder also pointed out that the corporation makes no effort, either quietly or openly, to influence village matters; and he averred that when one points to Niagara's fortuitous situation, it must be applied to "Kimberly - Clark and volunteers."

It is probable, however, that security may have lulled Niagarans into some measure of complacency. In a recent election, for example, there were only 546 votes cast from a potential of 1,104. And, in a recent village budget hearing, only one citizen attended.

Nevertheless, Niagara has much more than its share of recreational facilities, for it has two baseball fields and three parks; plus an active recreational program and plenty of nearby lakes, hunting grounds, skiing facilities, organized baseball, a superb basketball team supported by enthusiastic fans, a full-fledged community interest in a community television tower, and plain, downright tidiness in the appearance of the village.

The streets, for example, are named for Niagara's war dead — Sherman, Cardin, Tutus, Goodraue and Cowie; and all are neat, well placed and broad enough to justify Niagara's comparative youth. Its official age is only 48 years.

Community wide, too, are stimulating enterprises. One recent one, sparked by the Henry Creton American Legion Post, will bring a foreign exchange student to Niagara, a scholar who will really be supported by the entire village.

Scattered Shops

If there is a weakness in the structural geography of Niagara, it is in the scattered business districts which are so far-flung as to make shopping piecemeal if not difficult. A result is that about 50 per cent of the money earned at the paper mill is spent not in Niagara establishments, but in the shopping district of nearby Iron Mountain.

Of nearly 1,000 plant employees at Kimberly-Clark here, some 380 commute from such Michigan communities as Norway, Kingsford and Iron Mountain. Despite the influence of "out-of-towners," Niagara maintains an interesting unity of purpose.

A former Chicagoan, Albert Kahat, who arrived here in 1929, said this: "Niagara has been wonderful to us. The people here do anything and everything to help each other, and

Niagara's Growth Has Been Orderly

Menominee River Village Bases Its Strength on Kimberly-Clark Security

BY CHARLES HOUSE-

NIAGARA — There is rare, unusual beauty here in this far-northern community of Marinette County; and there is an easy serenity here, too, and it is natural that there should be both. The mother of the village is a tumbling waterfall, for here it was spawned; and the father of the village is an enlightened corporation with a parental fixation.

There are not many villages like Niagara; not anywhere. Its streets are broad and neat, its income is adequate, its homes are tidy and well-kept, its people bask in security and its extensive know-how is borrowed from its dad.

It is a new village—new enough to have modern ideas, for it was not really created until about the turn of the century although its history goes back a few years before.

At its front door flows the beautiful, though polluted, Menominee River with tall granite cliffs on the Michigan side, forming a magnificent backdrop. The drive along the route here is generally called "scenic gorge" and it is not misnamed. Natives can scan the shores of Michigan (for here the river forms the Wisconsin-Michigan boundary) and often are rewarded with sightings of deer.

Much of the community lives high above the business district on a rocky escarpment which provides many a beautiful view, but almost everywhere, Niagara is prettier than a village has a right to be. Its beauty is a fortuitous accident.

Lumberman

Niagara has come to be because a cruising lumberman, John Frambach—better known here as John Stoveken — observed the cascading waterfalls from which the village has linson, lives in Niagara to this day. She is the village clerk.

There was hardly a thought that a lovely village would grow here near the waterfall which is locally known as Quinnesec Falls, but two years after the mill was erected, Stoveken found himself the proprietor of the mill, a lumber camp, a blacksmith shop and a store. This was the business.

Ferried Products

The nearest railroad point was at Quinnesec, Mich. The mill products had to be ferried across the river above the falls and from there hauled by horse and wagon to the railroad. The village of Quinnesec grew, too, until a fire nearly leveled the community and many of its former citizens, French-Canadians, moved to the burgeoning community of Niagara.

To this day the mill, now grown huge, is often called "the Q Mills". The Kimberly-Clark Corpora-

Famed Folk Singer Set For Appleton Concert

The Famed Folk Singer Josh White will appear Friday night at the Lawrence College Memorial Chapel. The concert is sponsored by the Lawrence Student Executive Committee.

Josh White's Art Has Won High Praise

Today, 30 years after he cut one of the first phonograph records in America, Josh White is universally acclaimed the greatest folk singer of our time.

He will appear at the Lawrence Memorial Chapel at 8:15 p.m. Friday under the sponsorship of the Lawrence Student Executive Committee. He comes to Appleton directly from New York and immediately after the Friday date he will return to Boston for an extended engagement.

White's voice has a liquid quality that is as intimate as a caress. His accompanying guitar is sensuous and brilliant. But the essence of Josh White's appeal is something deeper—the true artist's understanding of the dignity, the humility, and the pride of human beings and the presentation of his insights through symbols.

He served a long, tough apprenticeship learning the meaning of life and of death and how to interpret them through song.

Poor Preacher

He was born to a young Negro preacher and his wife in Greenville, S. C., and christened Joshua Daniel White in honor of the biblical warriors.

His family was poor and his father in ill health, so little Josh at the age of seven got his first job leading blind Negro singers from one street corner to another. Before he was 9, he had seen two lynchings. He saw the South and met the characters and heard the stories out of which he was to compose his own songs.

Learned Guitar

These blind men were wonderful guitarists with a technique totally unlike anything heard today. Josh watched their deft fingers day after day, and when his musician of the moment was asleep or otherwise occupied, he would sneak away with the guitar to practice what he had observed.

When he was 11, Josh played second guitar on a record with Blind Joe Taggart in Chicago. Three years later when he returned to his family's home, a record scout found him and offered him $100 to go to New York for a recording session.

Josh got some radio jobs in New York and sang in church concerts. It was at a church concert that he met his wife-to-be, Carol Carr. His future looked good and they made plans for an early wedding.

Then he cut his right hand on a milk bottle, cut it so severely that the doctors wanted to amputate three fingers. This was a tragedy, because his guitar technique brought into play all the wouldn't consent to the amputation.

He took a job operating an elevator and slowly nursed his nearly paralyzed hand back to health. After four years, he landed a part in a Broadway show, "John Henry," and the critics applauded his art.

Engagements followed quickly in Greenwich Village and smart east side supper clubs. Josh won a following of intellectuals, because in his terrifying ballads of the Black South he gave musical expression to the fear, squalor, and desperation which have found a literary outlet in the work of William Faulkner, Erskine Caldwell, and Tennessee Williams.

"One Meatball"

With "One Meatball" he made world famous the little man who had only 15 cents to spend for dinner and got no bread with one meatball.

President Franklin D. Roosevelt heard Josh's record album, "Southern Exposure," became curious about Josh, and invited him to the White House to sing the songs from the album for him and Mrs. Roosevelt. Josh soon became a close friend of both President and Mrs. Roosevelt and was invited back to the White House to sing for them many times.

In 1950, Mrs. Roosevelt took Josh as her protegee on a concert tour of Europe.

When he returned to the States, Josh made three movies: "The Walking Hills," "All That Money Can Buy," and "Crimson Cantilly." He played on Broadway in "Lower Depths" and "How Long Till Summer."

His scholarly research into the origin and development of many folk songs was rewarded with an honorary doctor of folk lore degree to a dark, turbulent Russia that died convulsively many years ago.

Egg Emerges Triumphant In K-C Test

Plant Employees Devise Designs in Easter Competition

BY RANDY HAASE

Post-Crescent Staff Writer

NEENAH — Folks do lots of things with eggs. They fry 'em, boil 'em, scramble 'em. They even shirr 'em devil 'em and make omelets out of them. They are used in pies and cakes in hundreds of ways. Eggs are a bartender's nightmare in shakes, fizzes and nogs, not to mention the old Tom and Jerry itself. Eggs are even thrown at people.

All in all, despite Humpty Dumpty, the egg is a fairly flexible item.

Adding to the egg's imposing list of credits is its contribution to the arts—particularly at this Easter season when eggs are boiled, colored and decorated in many fancy ways. By adding clay, paint, ribbon, buttons or whatever else may be handy, people turn creative to decorate eggs or designs in the oval shape.

Not the least of these people are some of the employees at the main office of Kimberly - Clark Corp. In advance of Easter the K-Cers may be found spending their at-home leisure designing and decorating eggs for entry in the six-week contest sponsored annually by the cafeteria through its manager, Mrs. Elizabeth Farrell.

Secrets

Some of the employees started their designs and ideas months ago but kept them secret until they brought the finished eggs to the office for entry in the contest.

Nor do the Kimberly-Clark employees forget their own products and promotion ideas. Last year's first winner was an egg transformed into Kimberly-Clark's famous "Sneezy." Some of the entries were dressed with Kleenex tissues. All the creative entries draw considerable attention and the contest has become fun for everyone, even "egg-heads."

Intricately Decorated Easter Eggs nestled in their nest serve as the impetus for the Kimberly-Clark Corporation's annual egg decorating contest. The eggs are decorated by Mrs. Elizabeth Farrell, Neenah cafeteria director and director of the contest. One of this year's prize winners was the 6-egg centipede devised by William Schmitz.

Taken to Hospital

After the entries are judged and displayed, they are taken to The-Clark Memorial Hospital for distribution to youngsters who are patients there.

First place winner this year was Janet Dorschner who brought in a tree trimmed with eggs. There were flowers and designs inside the open eggshells hanging on the tree. Evelyn Reitz received an award for a bunny in front of a house with a thatched roof. Robert Currie got a prize for the best designed single egg—it resembled an ear of corn in a green husk. The most unusual design was by William Schmitz—a 6-egg centipede.

The cafeteria also is displaying the art work of Appleton Gallery of Art artists, including some work by Jeanette Chartre, main office cashier. Two other feminine employees, Dorothy Ducat and Marie Dupont, displayed pieces of driftwood which they had collected, polished and finished for home decor.

Humorist Sees Nothing Funny in Age's Apathy

Crank, By Robert Paul Smith.

Norton, $2.50.

Smith has inserted in the front of his book a definition of "crank" as a noun whose basic meaning is "something twisted, something used to twist." And he identifies himself as the Crank who is jolly well fed up with the sort of world with which virtually everyone puts up. He is mad at them for putting up with it.

In fact, "Fed Up" might just as well have been the title of this collection of chronological, personal notes that form a running commentary on the things that happened to him and the world, and indirectly to you and me, during much of 1961.

He tells you that he started to write some essays on "the accepted immoralities of our time," clearly stated reasons for that the angry emphasis being on the word "accepted."

But then he wanders off into the deadly sins, among other things, and irately concludes that the one called Apathy is not half so much a sin as Apathy, which he judges to be the curse of our time.

He is very much in favor of that kind of anger which is a "really noble virtue, a deep, burning, perpetual underground furnace of implacable, unappeasable, inextinguishable rage at the unkindness of man to man, at the shame of poverty, at the open-mouthed bigot, the tormentor of the innocent, at all the featherless bipeds of the world who nurture malice."

No doubt Smith is best known for his "Where Did You Go?" "Out." "What Did You Do?" "Nothing." The humor in that book was nostalgic and affectionate. In this one it is peevish, with clearly stated reasons for that the angry emphasis being on the word "accepted."

But then he wanders off into the deadly sins, among other things, and irately concludes that

Igor Stravinsky

Becoming Octogenarian Fails To Slow Composer's Energies

BY BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "Work is my whole life. Other men rest; I never do. I work, I travel, I eat and I work. That is all I am interested in.

Igor Stravinsky, the composer, had come out of his workshop impatiently to pose for some photographs. He was a small man—a featherweight 5 feet 4, with thin strings of hair starting well back on his bullet-shaped head.

He walked uneasily with a cane because of a lame leg, but his carriage was erect and his manner as brisk as a Marine drill sergeant's. He was appalled at prospects of a fuss over his upcoming 80th birthday, the reason for the photographs.

"I detest birthdays," he said in his dissonant voice. "When mine comes (June 18), I expect to be in an airplane far away.

"Some artists like publicity. I hate it. Some artists like applause. It holds no interest for me. All that matters is my work."

No Pictures

He posed in his living room with works of art given him by Picasso and other associates, but he refused to allow the camera in his place of work.

"That is sacred," he said. "I want no intrusion of publicity there."

He continued talking as he posed. When the name of a noted music critic was mentioned, he snapped:

"An ignorant man. He doesn't know an A from a B, A sharp from A flat. It is too bad that there are no standards for music critics in America. In England and in Germany, it is different."

He left the room as abruptly as he arrived. "I must return to my work," he announced. "There is so much to do." And then he was gone.

Igor Stravinsky lives with his handsome wife Vera and a cat named Celeste in a white stucco house two blocks north of the Sunset Strip. Although he has lived in what he calls "hideous but lively" Los Angeles since 1940, he is not a part of it.

Few Friends

He sees only a few friends—intellectuals like Aldous Huxley and Christopher Isherwood. Otherwise, he leads the life of a recluse. He composes every day of his life when he is not traveling.

Hating publicity, he no longer permits formal interviews. I submitted three written questions to him, and his answers were characteristic.

Q. Do you have any regard for jazz?

A. See "Conversations with Stravinsky." (One of four books of conversation between the composer and his Boswell, Robert Craft.) The passage referred to: Jazz is "another world. I don't follow it, but I respect it. It can be an art of very touching dignity, as it is in the New Orleans jazz funerals. At its rare best, it is certainly the best musical entertainment in the United States."

Q. What composers of the 20th Century are most likely to survive?

A. Stravinsky. Schoenberg. Berg, Weber, Debussy and a few others.

Q. What do you feel is the state of musical criticism in the U. S.?

A. Lov.

Stravinsky has been carrying on a vendetta with the critics most of his life. Recently he fired off a blistering letter to Albert Goldberg of the Los Angeles Times. In his latest book, "Expositions and Developments," he takes on others.

The composer noted with fine Russian irony that his stately "Mass" had been played as a memorial to a deceased New York Times critic (Olin Downes) who had hated it.

Stravinsky suggested that other critics keep notes in their pockets saying, "Whatever happens, don't play Stravinsky."

Only time will tell which is correct: Stravinsky's opinion of Stravinsky or that of his critics. Either way, he is likely to remain a celebrated figure.

He has always been at the storm center of controversy, speaking his own mind and composing to his own dictates. His music has caused riots and ovations. His body of work—100 pieces ranging from operas to brief pieces—has influenced all modern music, from symphonies down to and including bebop.

He is one of the few remaining links to the greatness of music's past. He saw Tchaikovsky at a concert at the age of 11, two weeks before the older composer died.

He studied under Rimsky-Korsakov. His comrades in Paris days were Ravel and Debussy ("He spoke in a low, quiet voice, and the ends of his phrases were often inaudible—which was to the good, as they sometimes contained hidden stings and verbal booby traps.")

New Works

The other greats are gone, but Stravinsky remains, still working at a furious pace. He is now composing a dramatic work for television, "Noah and the Flood," which is to be presented June 14 on CBS. He has accepted another commission by the government of Israel for a choral work in Hebrew about Abraham and Isaac.

Another recent work will first be heard at the Seattle fair, and Stravinsky will be conducting in appearances from Hollywood Bowl to Haifa. Such appearances earn him many times more than composing. His most popular, early works—"Firebird," "Petrouchka" and "Rite of Spring"—might have made him a millionaire, but they were unprotected by copyright because Russia and the United States did not sign the Berne convention.

Stravinsky may also return to Russia this year on a visit. An American citizen since 1945, he left Russia for the last time in 1914 and has since feuded with both the Czar and the Soviets.

Though gone from his homeland almost half a century, he still speaks Russian at home. France provided his fame, and America has been proud to claim him as a citizen (he was recently honored at a White House reception).

But Stravinsky remains wedded to a dark, turbulent Russia that died convulsively many years ago.

Johnny Podres Hurls 4-1 Win Over Braves

Tommy Davis and Howard Spearhead Dodger Success; Bob Hendley Takes Loss

MILWAUKEE (AP)—Los Angeles southpaw Johnny Podres hurled his first complete game in 11 starts since last August as the Dodgers defeated the Milwaukee Braves 4-1 Saturday with a nine-hit attack led by Tommy Davis and Frank Howard.

Athletics Drop White Sox Out Of AL Lead

Lumpe's 2-Run Homer Snaps Tie, Keys 9-6 Win

CHICAGO (AP)—Jerry Lumpe's two-run homer in the seventh cracked a 6-6 tie and helped the Kansas City A's to a 9-6 victory over the Chicago White Sox, tumbling the Pale Hose out of the American League lead Saturday.

The A's 12-hit attack also included a two-run homer in the third by Norm Siebern, who Friday night eluded a three-run homer in a 7-4 A's triumph over the Sox.

Chicago's Early Wynn, 42, making his first start since last July 22, lasted four innings and left trailing 4-1.

The White Sox, who fell behind the New York Yankees in the league race, wasted a five-run outburst in the sixth which tied the score at 6-6 and chased rookie starter John Wyatt.

Lumpe drove in three A's runs, also doubling across Bobby Del Greco in a three-run Kansas City third capped by Siebern's two-run homer.

Del Greco, who also slammed a two-bagger just before Lumpe's game-deciding homer in the seventh, made two sensational diving catches in center field.

One of Del Greco's great catches came in the fifth, with Sox runners on third and second, on a smash by Al Smith, who hit a solo homer in the second.

The victory went to the third and last Kansas City pitcher, Dave Wickersham, who finally put out the fire in the five-run Sox sixth.

Don Osinski spelled the faltering Wyatt in the uprising and, with the sacks loaded, was raked for a base-clearing double by Joe Cunningham. Wickersham came in after Osinski also yielded a single to Floyd Robinson which tied the score at 6-6.

The loser was Eddie Fisher, third of six Sox hurlers.

Yankees Win On Home Run By Blanchard

Tribe's New York Jinx Continues As Ford, Arroyo Hurl 6-Hitter

NEW YORK (AP)—John Blanchard's three-run homer and Whitey Ford's six-hit pitching gave the New York Yankees a 3-1 victory over Cleveland Saturday, the 19th straight game the Indians have lost at Yankee Stadium since May 12, 1960.

Blanchard hit his homer into the lower stands in right field off Barry Latman in the first inning after Bobby Richardson and Mickey Mantle had walked.

Gene Green smashed a 420-foot homer into the left field bleachers in the fifth inning. It was the 14th blow hit into those seats in the history of Yankee Stadium.

Ford, a 25-game winner in 1961, won his first of the season after two no-decision starts. The Yanks won both of those games for relief pitchers.

Manager Mel McGaha, striving desperately to break the Indians' long stadium losing string in their first appearance of the year, used five pitchers. Each time the pitcher was scheduled to bat he sent up a pinch hitter. Frank Funk, Jim Grant, Bob Allen and Jim Perry followed Latman, the loser. Grant was making his first appearance of the season on a week-end pass from the Army. He is stationed at Ft. Belvoir, Va.

A crowd of 21,455 turned out for the Yanks' second home game in bright, warm sunshine. Although the Indians got to Ford for a hit in each of the first six innings, Green's homer provided the only score.

Luis Arroyo came on to pitch the ninth inning after Ford had allowed six hits in the first eight. Little Luis, who helped out Ford so many times last year, mowed down the Indians in order in the ninth.

Phillies Hand Houston First Home Defeat

HOUSTON (AP)—The Houston Colts, bewildered by Cal McLish's breaking stuff, lost their first ever before their home fans and their third straight to the Philadelphia Phillies Saturday night, 3-1.

The Colts, who swept their opening series from the Chicago Cubs, couldn't damage the 37-year-old right-hander until they managed their only run in the seventh. McLish, who gave up six hits through 7 1-3 innings, got relief help from Jack Baldschun.

Baldschun had to choke off a Houston threat in the ninth to preserve it. Jim Pendleton's leadoff single and a two-out single by Bob Lillis had the tying run on first base before Baldschun got Merritt Renew on a strikeout.

Breaks String
It preserved McLish's first National League victory since Aug. 14, 1960, when he was with Cincinnati. McLish was in the American League last season, and had lost eight straight.

A triple by Tony Gonzalez, singles by Roy Sievers and Wes Covington and a sacrifice fly by Clay Dalrymple gave the Phillies two runs in the fourth off starter and loser Ken Johnson.

They got another in the seventh on a double by Dalrymple, a wild pitch and an infield out.

The Colts' only run came in the bottom of the inning on Jim Pendleton's double and a run-scoring single by Joe Amalfitano.

Johnny Temple Drives in All 3 Runs; Osteen Takes Loss

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rookie Art Quirk and reliever West Stock of Baltimore put together a seven-hit shutout Saturday as the Orioles handed the Washington Senators their fifth straight defeat 3-0.

Johnny Temple drove in the game's only runs with a single in the third and a double in the seventh.

Quirk, making his first major league start, retired because of a finger blister after 5 1-3 innings. Stock permitted a base runner each inning, but nobody got as far as second base.

Claude Osteen was the loser. The Orioles scored their first run in the fourth inning on a walk to Earl Robinson, a sacrifice and Temple's single.

They added two in the seventh. Osteen's last inning, after two were out and Gus Triandos was on first with a walk. Stock also walked, and Temple's double to center scored both runners.

The Senators left seven on base in the first four innings, and in three straight innings starting with the sixth were cut down by double plays.

Hemauer Hurls 1-Hitter, Gives Zephyrs Split

Manitowoc Takes Opener of Twin Bill, 16-3

MANITOWOC — Menasha St. Mary High School's Louis Hemauer pitched a sterling 1-hitter in the nightcap Saturday to give his team a 3-2 win and an even break in a doubleheader with Manitowoc.

The Ships blasted the Zephyrs, 16-3, in the opener of the Fox Valley Baseball Conference twin bill. The only hit off the right-handed Hemauer in the 7-inning game was a run-scoring single by Bill Buchholz in the fourth frame. In every inning but the 2-run fourth, Hemauer retired the side in order as he struck out 10 and didn't walk a man.

Bill Duebner, the loser, also pitched an excellent game, allowing but two hits, striking out nine and walking four. His teammates committed five errors in the third inning, which led to all the Zephyrs' runs.

Hemauer was safe on an infield error to open the third, and Dave Birling singled. When third baseman John Guse threw the ball away on John Timm's grounder, two runs scored. Timm also scored when three more errors were committed on the same play.

The Ships got two of the runs back in the fourth when Dale Lehman was safe on an error and scored on Buchholz' clean hit. Buchholz later scored on a passed ball.

Buchholz pitched a 3-hitter in the opener, striking out 11 and walking one. He also socked a double and two singles.

John Lallensack hit a 3-run homer off loser Gene Patzner in the first. Patzner went the distance, allowing 11 hits, striking out eight. Manty scored in each of the six innings it batted.

The Ships now have a 3-2 league record, while the Zephyrs are 1-2.

Texas Southern Sweeps Relays

Rice Vaulters Tops Uelses in Special Kansas Track Event

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP)—Texas Southern University's marvelous runners completed a sweep of the six college division baton races at the Kansas Relays with a record shattering victory in the mile relay Saturday.

The versatile Negro speedsters from Houston lowered the meet's mile relay mark to 3:11 flat, six-tenths of a second faster than the standard they set in qualifying Friday.

John Uelses, ex-Marine now living in Washington, D.C., and the only man in history ever to clear 16 feet in the pole vault, cleared 15-1 1/2, then missed at 15-6 1/4. Henry Wadsworth, a Marine at West Point, also made 15-1 1/4 in the special competition.

Fred Hansen of Rice, kept most of the crowd of 15,000 hanging around late, however, as he vaulted to a relays record of 15-6 1/4, in the university-college event, best in the nation this spring by a collegian.

The Texans started with a record 3:19.8 in the sprint medley Friday. Then Saturday they settled for the mile relay record and four other relay successes as strong crosswinds gusting up to 60 miles per hour slowed the runners.

Missouri stole a bit of Texas Southern thunder by running the fastest 2-mile relay race of the season to lower the meet mark to 7:24.2. Jerry McCadden, Greg Felster, Bill Rawson and Jim Baker were the runners.

Phil Mulkey, 29-year-old schoolmaster from Birmingham, Ala., won his sixth decathlon championship, fifth in a row, with a record 7,460 points.

Vikings Drop Doubleheader To Beloit '9'

Bucs Rally in Nightcap; Kuplic Strikes Out 15

The Lawrence College Vikings collected only 12 hits in 14 innings Saturday and dropped a pair of Midwest Conference baseball games to Beloit, 6-2 and 10-3, at Goodland Field.

Coach Don Boya's Vikes held a 3-0 fifth inning lead in the nightcap until the roof caved in upon them. The Bucs gained momentum from Jim Kuplic's inning-opening triple and slammed five runs across before they were through. They went on to add a single tally in the sixth and four more in the seventh.

A first-inning double by Pete Thomas and a second inning triple by Bob Mueller chased around the three Viking runs. Each time, however, the Vikes left two runners stranded in scoring position.

Strikes Out 15

Kuplic gave Lawrence six hits in the nightcap but fanned 15 during the 7-inning span. Steve Gilboy took the pitching loss for the Vikes, even though Lawrence turned in a pair of double plays.

During the 7-inning opener, Lawrence kept close until the sixth. A quartet of first-inning runs sent Beloit off to a quick start. Lawrence retaliated with two in the fourth, but the pair of runs by the visiting Bucs in the sixth clinched it.

A couple of sophomores, Mueller and Dennis Walsh, sparkled for Lawrence. Mueller, making his first pitching start, survived the rocky first inning and gave up only three earned runs. Walsh slashed out three straight singles during his first college start.

In the second game, Mueller and Walt Krueger each had two hits for the Vikes. Kuplic had three straight hits to pace the Bucs.

Villanova's Rolando Cruz grabbed the pole vault in a meet record 15 feet, breaking Don Bragg's 14-2 set in 1955, and Doug Keer got off a toss of 213-1 to win the javelin throw.

Gary Gubner of New York University won the shotput with a 62-2 toss and broke the meet record of 57-8 set by Ken Bantum of Manhattan in 1956. It marked the second straight week the 255-pound Gubner has gone over 62 feet—a feat accomplished by only half a dozen shotputters in history.

Ed Kohler of Fordham flipped the discus 165-5 to break the meet record of 164-10 set by Al Santis of Maryland State in 1960. Gubner was second with 157-9.

Villanova won the team championship with 50 points.

Oshkosh State's Trackmen Win Quadrangular by a Quarter Point

Stevens Point Second; Lawrence Corps Four Events, Finishes in Third Place

BY DON LEMKE

Post-Crescent Staff Writer

Wisconsin State College of Oshkosh stormed from behind in the late events Saturday afternoon, capped it with a victory in the relay and nipped Stevens Point by one-quarter of a point in the quadrangular track meet on sticky Whiting Field.

Host Lawrence won four firsts in individual events but finished third with 33 1/2 points. Oshkosh, with 40 1/2 points, finished second, and 60 1/2 to 60 1/2 for the Pointers. Ripon was a distant fourth with 9 1/2 points.

Coach Gene Davis' Vikings were most impressive in the running events, especially the distances. Capt. Bill Stout won his specialty 2-mile with a time of 10 minutes and 28 seconds. He also finished second in the mile race to teammate Reed Williams.

Williams, a junior, was one of four double winners during the murky afternoon. Williams nipped Stout in the mile with a swift 4:35 clocking and then won the half mile in 2:02.7.

Other double winners during the 3-hour afternoon were Dave Muinde, exchange student from Africa, in the 440 and the broad jump for Oshkosh; Weideman of Oshkosh in both hurdles; and Schrodner, of Stevens Point, in the discus and javelin.

Dave Brainard, the Vikes' sophomore sprinter, had a good day. He nipped Muinde in the 100 and finished a close second in the 220. The other Lawrence points were tallied by Ken Beinar, second and Dave Peterson, fourth, in the javelin; Dan Brink, second in the

NOTES and NOTIONS

Don't you long for the good old days when you could judge a season by its sports? It's getting to be pretty confusing, to say the least, when the basketball season runs to April 18, the hockey season until at least April 22, the football season into early January and the baseball season until almost mid-October. I'm not sure there's any solution to this overlapping other than a little common sense — since there's no such thing as an organized professional athletic federation. Of course, when everyone gets a domed stadium, such as Houston is now working on, all remaining semblance of seasonal boundaries can be erased, since the weather will no longer be a sports factor. Actually, it's pretty hard to justify the endless playoffs in pro basketball and hockey. In effect, the NBA eliminates only three of its nine teams during its exhausting 80-games-per-club regular season schedule. In the baseball and football world series only two teams are left to battle it out for the top prize. The Stanley Cup playoffs have almost dwarfed the season-long championship race in hockey importance. Either they should be streamlined (with fewer than four of the six teams qualifying) or the regular schedule shortened.

In a recent speech, Vince Lombardi came up with a new — and significant — variation on the familiar "it's how you play the game" theme. Lombardi said, "while winning isn't everything, trying to win is."

If last Saturday's opening telecast is a true indicator, the Braves' new network baseball series will prove a welcome addition to state sports programming. The commentary was well done — with Ernie Johnson showing the potential of a good color man — and the camera work excellent. For the fans who couldn't stay with the game all the way because of the lateness of the hour, it's good news that none of the remaining 14 games will run that long. The next game (at Houston, April 28) is slated for an 8 p.m. (CST) start. For most fans, the Braves' contests provide something the regular weekend national TV games lack — a personal, "home team" flavor (something akin to Green Bay Packer telecasts). Last weekend, for instance, it was difficult for most to get very excited about the Pirates-Mets series. It took the need for a new source of revenue — brought on by dwindling home attendance — to end the Braves' 9-year TV holdout, but the club has finally bowed to progress. In the long run, the sure-to-develop new interest may even be reflected at the County stadium turnstiles.

Menasha's Jerry Krueger, a freshman at the University of Wisconsin, scored the first 1962 hole-in-1 at Madison's Golfland. He sank a 7-iron tee shot on a 140-yard hole.

"Zorro" Versailles, one of the top Goodland Field favorites during the Foxes' 4-year stint in the Three-I League, is also very large with Minnesota fans. Despite his mid-season shenanigans of 1961 (going AWOL), Versailles is rated the most popular Twins player. "Zorro" is also classed as the fastest on his team, the same honor Jake Wood holds fifth Detroit's Tigers. Wood, of course, was Versailles' keystone buddy here in 1959.

Baltimore's Steve Barber probably is the American League's first "Sunday pitcher" since the days of Ted Lyons. The reasons are far from similar, however. In Barber's case, the weekly stint is dictated by military duty. In Lyons' case (around 1940), it was because the fortyish Ted needed about six days of rest, and this was one way of insuring a good crowd during some of the White Sox' leaner days.

The Green Bay Packers will have to wait until after the college baseball season to learn whether Gale Weidner will try to earn a spot on the champions' 1962 roster. Colorado quarterback Weidner, who was drafted tenth by the Packers, led the Big 8 Conference in passing for three years. Weidner has two other career interests — medicine and pro baseball. He batted .386 last season and was an All-American baseball nominee. Weidner, however, is said to feel a pro grid career would better fit into his medical school plans than baseball. Denver, of the AFL, also holds draft rights to the 6-foot-1, 190-pound athlete.

The Manitowoc-Kimberly regional basketball tournament drew the most paying spectators in WIAA's 1962 basketball series. The total for the three nights of play in Manitowoc and two nights in Kimberly was 9,325. The Neenah-Berlin meet placed eighth among the 21 regionals with 6,803. Oshkosh ranked fifth among the eight sectional tourney sites with a 2-night draw of 5,319.

Admiral's Voyage Wins as Sunrise County Is Disqualified

NEW YORK (AP) — Admiral's sunny 70-degree weather to watch Voyage was declared the winner of the $91,850 Wood Memorial at Aqueduct Saturday after finishing in a sensational dead heat with Sunrise County and then having his favored rival disqualified.

Sunrise County was placed second for interfering with the Admiral on the first turn and again during their torrid home stretch duel.

It was the first dead heat and the second disqualification in 38 runnings of the famous 1 1/4-mile race, which leads up to the Kentucky Derby May 5. In 1956 Head Man was the winner after Ace was disqualified.

For Sunrise County, owned by Townsend B. Martin, it was the second disqualification this year. In the $100,000 Flamingo at Hialeah on March 3, the colt bore out in the stretch and was disqualified for bothering Ridan, who had finished third. Prego, the second place finisher, was declared the winner, with Ridan second and Sunrise County third.

OSC '9' Splits Twin Bill With Platteville

Titans' Lehman Hurls 5-Hitter In Nightcap

OSHKOSH — The Oshkosh State College Titans split a doubleheader with Platteville here Saturday afternoon, dropping the opener, 3-2, but winning the nightcap, 8-6.

In the first game, Platteville initiated the scoring with a pair of runs in the second frame on a single by Greg Regalia and back-to-back doubles by Bob Meyers and Ken Shoppe.

The deciding tally came in the fifth inning when Lyle Kowitz singled, moved to second on a balk, and scored on Zoellich's 1-bagger. Oshkosh bounced back with two runs in the bottom of the frame on singles by Bob Felda and Gene Alexander, spliced between a pair of Platteville miscues.

Allows 9 Hits

Losing hurler Alexander allowed nine hits while Oshkosh garnered only six safeties off winning pitcher, Gary Schlem.

A 6-run second inning provided the impetus to enable the Titans to break even for the day.

An error, four walks, a wild pitch and a pair of 2-run triples by Don Lehman and Ken Huebner highlighted the big second frame for the winners.

Dick Wirtz' second triple of the day produced an insurance marker for Oshkosh in the fifth inning. Lehman pitched a 5-hitter for the Titans in gaining the victory. Harry Brennan got two of Oshkosh's six safeties off loser Dan Robata.

1912 Champion Red Sox are Honored at Fenway Park

BOSTON (AP) — Nine survivors of the 1912 world champion Boston Red Sox, first occupants of Fenway Park, were honored Saturday at the 50th anniversary of the Jersey Street ball field.

American League publicist Joe McKenney, representing President Joe Cronin, made presentations to the man who performed for the third of Boston's seven league titles.

Pitchers Smokey Joe Wood, Hugh Biedent and Ray Collins; catcher Bill Carrigan; outfielders Harry Hooper and Duffy Lewis; second baseman Steve Yerkes; third baseman Larry Gardner and reserve outfielder Olaf Henriksen were the former stars on hand.

Fenway Park was opened April 20, 1912 when the Sox went 11 in a row before defeating the New York Highlanders, now the Yankees, 7-6.

Boston Mayor John F. Fitzgerald, President Kennedy's grandfather, threw out the first ball. With the President unable to attend, 9-year-old Tommy O'Brien did the honors Saturday. The latter is the grandson of the Sox starting pitcher of 1912, Buck O'Brien.

Love for Golf Recalled

CHICAGO (AP) — Amos Alonzo Stagg will have to admit to 100 on his birthday Aug. 16 — something he seldom had to do on a golf course.

His love for golf has resulted in a special game being played in his honor by Sam Snead May 2 at Las Vegas. If the nation's golfers beat Snead's score-based on handicap — they will receive a "century of physical fitness" medalion.

Wherever they play, the golfers will be given a "donor envelope" in which to place a birthday gift for Stagg, who retired from football coaching in 1960 after 70 straight years.

The money will be used to help build a living memorial — the Amos Alonzo Stagg Center of Physical Fitness on the University of the Pacific campus in Stockton, Calif., where Stagg and his wife, Stella, have made their home for 30 years.

Steadfast Simon Pure Stagg, the golfer, is well known to Chick Evans, the steadfast Simon pure who was one of the game's greats, winning one of his eight Western Amateurs, the Western Open, the National Open and National Amateur all in the same year, 1916.

Chick, still active in tournaments at the age of 72, made a frequent threesome with Stagg and B. L. Taylor, a Chicago Tribune columnist, back in those yesteryears when Stagg helped form, and served as first president, of the famed Olympia Fields Country Club.

Here are some things Chick remembers about Stagg:

"When I was 18 I won my first major championship, the 1909

Neenah Tops Raiders In M-E League Opener

Fran Goetz Hurls 2-Hitter in 6-1 Abbreviated Game

NEENAH — Neenah surprised Two Rivers, 6-1, in a ram-abbreviated Mid-Eastern Conference game here Saturday afternoon. The contest was called after 5 1/2 innings.

The Rockets, in opening conference play with a victory, scored four times in the second inning and twice in the third.

Neenah's Fran Goetz limited the Raiders to two hits, one in each of the first two innings. The junior righthander struck out four, walked three and hit one.

The Rockets made nine hits off Phil Rehauer, who had five strikeouts and hit one batter. He didn't walk anyone.

The winners got strong support from the bottom part of the order. Don Perry, who hits seventh, had two singles and a double and Ed Began, the eighth hitter, collected two singles. Goetz also had a pair.

Goetz led off the second with a hit. Mike Jones sacrificed but was safe on an error by the pitcher, Goetz scoring. Perry singled home Jones, Began's hit brought home Perry and the latter tallied on an infield out.

Singles by Goetz and Began, Perry's double and a sacrifice produced the final two runs in the third. Larry Tesch led off the fifth with a double but Rehauer fanned the next three hitters.

Bob Donchek doubled home Norm Schroeder, who had walked, in the second for the Raiders' lone run. Jim Schroeder's first inning single was Two Rivers' other hit. The losers went up and down in order in the final two innings.

technique that was amazing. It was simply this — look at the hole, instead of the ball, when putting.

"Stagg and B.L.T. began putting rings around me and finally I started using the same system. In friendly matches I just couldn't miss. I must have stroked a million putts by looking at the hole. But in tournament play, for some inexplicable reason, it just didn't work much of the time. I four-putted a lot of greens. The hardest shot in golf is looking at the hole on the fourth putt.

"Finally, I gave it up. I never did get to be a good putter. I think the whole thing balled me up.

"Stagg — I can see him now, carrying his bag under his arm, walking around the course, his face a mask of concentration, very seldom did he hire a caddy. And when he did, he never tipped them a nickel. Didn't believe in it.

"But I'll bet that caddy learned a lot listening to Stagg expound on stainless character!

"They say Stagg never swore. I'm probably the only man ever to refute this. One day while we were playing in our usual threesome, B.L.T. got lodged in a deep trap. He whacked and whacked at the ball and nothing came out of the sand except curses.

"Stagg could stand no more. He walked over the trap and peered down. 'Bert (he always called B.L.T. Bert), he said, 'Why don't you try to get out without swearing?' B.L.T. said he was willing to do anything, even that. He closed his mouth and took another whack, and so help me, the ball came out and rolled into the cup!

"Stagg turned to me and plainly said: 'I'll be damned!'"

Trautman Orders All Minor League Players To Show Hustle

Says He Receives Optimistic Reports On 1962 Prospects

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Minor league chief George M. Trautman ordered all players Saturday to show plenty of hustle, and to present a neat and natty appearance during the 1962 campaign.

In a letter sent to every player, manager, coach and club official, the veteran red-haired czar of the minors said he "would be inclined to impose penalties" on non-conformists.

"The fan in the grandstand pays your salary," Trautman told the baseball men. "Your first responsibility is to see he gets his money's worth.

"Before each game as you get ready to go on the field, remember, you are on stage. You have a role to perform, just as if you were a paid performer in the theater.

"Are you clean shaven? Are your shoes shined? Is your uniform neat and clean? Do you wear it as a soldier ready for inspection? You should, you must, if you are going to give the customers the first rate performance they have a right to expect."

Run Too Long

Trautman told the players of reports that games have a tendency to run too long and to drag at times, and said much of the delay could be traced to lack of hustle.

"Hustle should be one of the most important words in your vocabulary," he said. "If you expect to excel in baseball and move to the top, you must hustle at all times. Many a young man lacking exceptional talent in some phases of baseball has made it to the majors because his watchword was hustle.

"It is not the intention of this office to impose penalties for failure of players to follow these basic concepts. These are not official regulations, and it should not be necessary to make them such. But I would be inclined to impose penalties against any persons for wilful failure to conform."

Trautman, who returned recently from a Southern training camp tour, said he had received optimistic reports from all leagues on advance ticket sales and general interest among fans.

"I think all our leagues are in sound, stable positions for the new season," he said. "Reports indicate a genuine revival in baseball at our level. If we get a fair break in the weather, I think we can count on good attendance in just about every section.

"And from what I saw in the training camps, we certainly have an outstanding crop of young players being developed through out baseball."

Robyn Johnson Shines Again

Sets AAU Meet Record of 2:37.2 In '250' Freestyle

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Sixteen-year-old Robyn Johnson stepped up her time shattering show at the AAU National Women's Indoor Swimming Championships Saturday, setting her third record.

The tall youngster from Arlington, Va., raced the 250-yard freestyle in 2 minutes, 37.2 seconds, to erase Chris Von Salta's meet mark of 2:38.4.

Robyn's time failed to crack the American record of 2:36.1 by Miss Von Salta, or the 2:35 by Terri Stickle of San Mateo, Calif., which awaits official recognition.

Swimmers competed in bright sunshine in the 25-yard outdoor pool of the Arden Hills Tennis and Swimming Club. Although the meet is designated indoor, officials pointed out it is primarily a short course event, frequently held out of doors.

Third Meet Mark

Saturday's performance in the preliminaries, in which six swimmers qualify for the final, gave Robyn her third meet mark including an American record in Friday's 500-yard freestyle. Only a high school sophomore, she is proving herself America's fastest woman swimmer.

Donna de Varona, 14, of Lafayette, Calif., also swam into position for a third championship, pacing qualifiers in the 100-yard backstroke with 1:03.5, just one-half off the American record.

Miss De Varona, an Olympic veteran who will be 15 Thursday earlier won the 200-yard backstroke and broke her own American record with 2:18.9 in the 200-yard individual medley.

Future of Boxing Could Conceivably Be on a Tightrope

Paret Tragedy Triggers Most Intense Criticism Ever Levelled

BY JIM HACKLEMAN

NEW YORK (AP)—Four weeks ago, before the eyes of millions, Benny Paret suffered a savage beating at the hands of Emile Griffith in their welterweight title fight at Madison Square Garden.

Ten days later, without ever having regained consciousness, the 25-year-old Cuban died of brain injuries suffered in the bout.

The Paret tragedy triggered a crescendo of harsh criticism of boxing—perhaps the most intense criticism ever leveled against the much-maligned sport.

From all over the globe words of condemnation came, from Japan, Sweden, Cuba, England, Australia, Puerto Rico. Boxing was castigated as "legalized murder," "revolting," "sadistic," and "criminal."

Gov. Edmund Brown of California called boxing "dirty, rotten and brutalizing" and said he would like to see it abolished. Richard M. Nixon said it ought to be "cleaned up or kicked out."

The Vatican labeled prizefighting "objectively immoral," and the Jesuit magazine America said it was a violation of "natural justice," which "unleashes the beast in the boxer and the sadist in the spectator."

Editorially Blasted

Newspapers all over the world have editorially blasted boxing and there has been an outcry for the abolishment of the sport by legislators here and abroad. Several governmental investigations are planned, or being called for.

So far, the sound and fury has signified little—but the future of boxing could be on a tightrope.

Actually, ring deaths are not rare, averaging about a dozen a year in pro and amateur bouts over the past 15 years. Why should one more fatality set off such a widespread furor?

For one thing, the man killed was a champion and his death occurred in a championship fight. And more importantly, it happened on nationwide television with the cameras zeroed in on the brutal climax as Griffith hammered the helpless Paret with a succession of more than 20 blows to the head. After Referee Ruby Goldstein stopped the bout, the final moments were rerun in slow motion tape, magnifying the savagery of Griffith's attack and the horrible punishment absorbed by Paret.

Criticism is not new to boxing. Throughout its long history it has been the black sheep of the family of sports. Boxing has had its great heroes, its respected champions. During the last years of the several weekly television shows, it was one of the most popular of entertainments. But it never has been really accepted as a whole-some profession.

And boxing is vulnerable to attack. Even its stoutest advocates must concede the validity of most charges brought against it.

By its very nature, boxing is a primitive business. Beating the other guy is the name of the game and beating him into submission, into senselessness, is the ultimate achievement. Blood and injuries are common by-products of boxing. And all too often ex-prize fighters suffer from the occupational disability that makes them worthless, pitiful hulks—punch drunk.

Boxing has its true fans, but it also appeals to a baser type, the spectator who enjoys not the sport but the punishment. The frantic-eyed, cruel-smiling men and the strident-voiced women yelling for more at ringside are Hollywood stereotypes—but they also are true-to-life, a part of every fight crowd.

Another of boxing's drawbacks is the criminal element that always has been a part of the game, in varying degrees—the racketeers, gamblers, fixers and strong-arm men. Prizefighting history is dotted with scandals of thrown fights, betting coups, managers and promoters muscled in on by hoodlums, and boxers fleeced out of earnings by unscrupulous handlers.

In view of its record, is boxing worth saving? A great many people think it is—people in or close to boxing, and its legion of fans.

Purest Form

To a fan, boxing is the purest form of athletic competition—man against man, alone in a ring. It is a sport that takes the utmost in condition and stamina, strength and skill, courage and determination. Blood and injury, even death, are risks in boxing—just as they are in many other sports.

The boxing fan acknowledges the poverty and uselessness some fighters find at the end of their careers. But they also point out the successes boxing has created—the Dempseys, Tunneys and Pattersons—and the refuge boxing has afforded the minorities in this country—first the Irish, then the Jews and Italians, and currently the Negroes and Latin Americans. Prizefighting has been the only escape for many otherwise underprivileged, the springboard to fortune and acclaim.

The boxing fan also acknowledges that criminality has been, and is, an inner evil of the sport. But he thinks the unwholesome element can be eradicated through stricter, more uniform supervision, perhaps on the federal level.

A boxing fan will concede that there are sadists at ringside, but counters with the argument that that also are drawn to hockey games, automobile races, and any other competition where the element of risk is great.

As the detractors blast and the defenders fire back in the debate over boxing's future, what will be the end result of the Paret tragedy?

Will it be one extreme—total abolishment? Or will it be something in the middle, something on the order of federal or international control, with a code for strict policing and added physical safeguards?

Or will it be the other extreme—no action at all?

The First Steps in the construction of a racer for the Fox Cities soap box derby July 15 are made by young engineers Hank Horner, at left, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Horner, and Larry Noack, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Noack. Fifty-two boys have already signed up for the derby. May 1 is the deadline for entries.

Entry Deadline May 1

52 Boys Already Signed Up for First Fox Cities Soap Box Derby

Half a hundred Fox Cities boys are busy building a dream.

That dream is victory in the silver anniversary All-American Soap Box Derby in Akron, Ohio, Aug. 4. But first, they are aiming for the first all-Fox Cities derby July 15. Deadline for entries is May 1, with 52 contestants already signed up for the race.

The local winner will receive a $500 savings bond, and will have the chance to compete for the $30,000 in college scholarships awarded to the first nine place winners in the national derby. The national champion will receive a $7,500 scholarship.

The Fox Cities soap box derby is being sponsored by the Appleton Jaycees and Gibson Chevrolet Co. John Ayers is chairman, and Jack Horner publicity chairman.

Boys 11 through 15 years of age are eligible for the contest. Design and construction are the main concerns now for the young engineers. They must follow a rigid set of rules in building their racers, and must do all the work themselves. Parents and friends can offer advice and suggestions, but each boy and parent will be asked to certify that the car was built entirely by the boy himself in accordance with official rules.

Each contestant is sponsored by a Fox Cities business. The sponsor buys the wheels, axle rods, steering system, a helmet and T-shirt. The sponsor's name will be painted on the side of the car. The boy himself may not spend more than $20 for all other materials needed for the vehicle.

The skill involved in constructing the racer is to get the weight as near the maximum 250 pounds (including the weight of the driver) as possible. The vehicle may not exceed 80 inches in length or 28 inches in height, and must have a road clearance of at least three inches. It may be any color of the rainbow.

Stringent safety regulations govern the construction. The racers built by Fox Cities contestants will be inspected several times during the building period. Officials will disqualify any car which may endanger the driver, other drivers or spectators, any car which was not built in accordance with the rules and any driver who shows poor sportsmanship.

On July 13 the youngsters will show off the finished racers in a parade down College Avenue. A banquet is scheduled for July 14 and the big day itself is July 15.

The race will be run on a system of elimination by heats of two boys each. Boys from 13 to 15 will race in Class A, and those from 11 to 12 in Class B, with the final winners in each class competing against each other for the Fox Cities championship. There are no age divisions in Akron.

The race will be held at County Trunks E and E.E. Each boy will be allowed one free pass down the hill the morning of the derby. The Jaycees will pay expenses for the champ and his parents to go to Akron. The car will be shipped by the sponsors.

More than a million youngsters have built and raced their little coasting cars in soap box derby contests throughout the United States and in several foreign countries since the start of the program in 1934. The 1961 national champion was Richard Dawson from Wichita, Kan.

Buddy Edelen Sets American Record For 10-Mile Run

HURLINGHAM, England (AP)—Buddy Edelen, a 24-year-old schoolmaster from Sioux Falls, S.D., ran the fastest 10 miles ever for an American Saturday, winning the British Amateur Athletics Association title with a time of 48 minutes, 31.8 seconds.

Edelen, now teaching in London, pulled away from British runners Melvin Batty and Gerry North at the 9-mile mark and finished 40 yards ahead of Batty. North was a close third. The listed American record is 50:51.6, held by Johnny Kelley of Groton, Conn. Basil Heatley of Britain holds the world mark of 47:47.

Boston Hands Tigers' Lary 4-3 Setback

Scores All Its Runs in Third; Schwall Gains Win

BOSTON (AP)—Boston enjoyed a rare four run outburst against Detroit's Frank Lary and held on for a 4-3 victory Saturday in celebration of Fenway Park's 50th anniversary.

The Red Sox landed on tough Tiger Lary for all their runs and five of their eight hits in the third inning. Right-hander Don Schwall shook off his sophomore "slump", surviving a two-run homer by Al Kaline in the fourth and a solo belt by Norm Cash in the eighth. Rookie Dick Radatz, the 6-foot-6, 240-pounder, used his lightning fast ball to slam the door on the Tigers in ninth inning relief for the Sox.

Schwall, 1961 American League rookie of the year, was not at peak form for his first triumph of the season against two setbacks. But he was typically cool under fire, stranding four Detroit runners in scoring position. Chuck Schilling's second hit of the season, and a Schwall sacrifice bunt touched off the Red Sox uprising with solo runs coming on Ed Bressoud's single, a Carl Yastrzemski double off the top of the left field wall, then singles by Jim Pagliaroni and Frank Malzone.

Joe Garagiola Picks Cards to Win Pennant

'I don't Believe in Age,' Says Former Big League Catcher

BY JACK CLARY

NEW YORK (AP)—"The St. Louis Cardinals should win the National League pennant this year."

It was stated simply, yet it came across cold. And it sounded almost foreign coming from a man whose ability to make a person laugh exceeds the baseball record book's analysis of his 10-year major league career as a catcher.

Yet Joe Garagiola couldn't joke about the Cards' chances for their first pennant since 1946. Even the potential specter of age that hangs over the club failed to change his opinion.

"Age? I don't believe in age," he said. "And my biggest argument is based on four guys—Spahn, Minoza, Musial and Glenn. And you can throw in a man named Kennedy too," he added, listing President Kennedy along with Warren Spahn, Minnie Minoza, Stan Musial, and astronaut John Glenn.

Young For Job

"You could even say that Kennedy is young for his job," Garagiola added quickly before hurrying off to his weekend NBC game of the week assignment.

"But age has nothing to do with the Cardinals this year," he went on. "The club has depth, something that will overcome the uncertainties of a 162-game schedule and any problems that aging ball players create."

"Why, the Cards haven't even given their top pitcher of last year, Ray Sadecki, two turns yet and still they've gotten off to a flying start. Just the other night one of their so-called question marks, Ernie Broglio, came on in relief on a night that was really too cold for baseball, and gave only five hits to the Phils in 8-13 innings. He is a question mark no longer."

"The Cards have this pitching, and like any other club in the league, are going to need every bit of it to win games, even against the new teams."

"In fact," he digressed, "no one is going to beat the New York team with second line pitching. A pitcher will have to go with its top pitchers for that club has players that will murder anything else in the hitting bracket. And they have a few pitchers that won't prove to be patsies for anyone."

What makes St. Louis the threat to replace Cincinnati as the NL champ, or stave off the power-packed threat of San Francisco, Los Angeles or Milwaukee?

Three Pitchers

"First of all," he replied, "they have three good, young pitchers in (Larry) Jackson, (Ray) Washburn and Sadecki, to go along with Broglio and Curt Simmons. Secondly they have speed on the bases—not the kind that will lead the league in stolen bases, but enough so that runners can score from first base, or move from first to third on a hit. The Cards haven't had this kind of speed since 1942."

There isn't a club in the league that doesn't have a question-mark somewhere in its lineup, and Garagiola was quick to point out where St. Louis might run into trouble.

"Julio Gotay is the pivotal man for the team. If he can field his position adequately and hit .260, then the team will be solid. But he needs experience afield and at bat."

"But even with Gotay as a question mark, you can't fault the hitting order now that Minoza is in there. The team has a line-up that an opposing pitcher can't pitch around. Pitchers just can't let up when they have to face Musial, Minoza, Boyer, Gene Oliver and Bill White. There are no holes there."

"With this balance, and with the speed, it's up to Gotay to hold up his end. If he makes it, then the Cards can win."

"And that's no joke," baseball's humorist added, smiling.

Browns Trade Ed Nutting For Douglas

CLEVELAND (AP)—The Cleveland Browns traded tackle Ed Nutting to the Dallas Cowboys Saturday for Merrill Douglas, a fullback-halfback.

Nutting spent most of last season—his first year in the National Football League—on the injured reserve list. He was injured in the Browns' fourth game.

Douglas, 26, is a four-year veteran who played three seasons with the Chicago Bears before going to Dallas last summer. He is a 6-foot, 205-pounder.

Coach Paul Brown of Cleveland said the move was made to strengthen his backfield reserves.

One of the most well organized, supervised and best carried out teen-age bowling programs in the Fox Cities area is the one sponsored by the Kaukauna Recreation Department.

The league completed play recently and the closing event for the season was a party and awards program at the Youth Center.

Teen-agers financed the party themselves by contributing 10 cents at each bowling date. The "pot" went for hot dogs, hamburgers and all the trimmings. The top three teams in the league were awarded plaques and emblems while others received certificates.

Championship team was the Lucky Levens, with the Screamin' Demons a close second.

Best single game in the season was a 240 line by Ed Lutzow. The league rolled only 2-game matches and the top two-game series was 424 by Lee Anderson. Barbara Krueger paced the girls with a 210 game and Joy Piepenberg had a 393 two-game set.

Top season average among the boys was Rich Nagel's 156 and Ann Seif paced the girls with a 122 mark. Ranking second for the boys was Ted Eiting with 149 and Steve Hilgenberg followed with a 146.

White Sox Scout Once Managed Detroit Tigers

MILWAUKEE (AP)—Bill Norman, 51, a scout for the Chicago White Sox and former manager of the Detroit Tigers, died at St. Luke's Hospital Saturday after suffering a heart attack.

The hospital said Norman, who had complained of not feeling well, was given an electrocardiogram when a physician diagnosed his condition as a heart difficulty. Norman had trouble breathing and died within a few minutes after the test was completed.

Norman's scouting assignment with the White Sox brought him to Milwaukee frequently during home stands of the Milwaukee Braves. Part of last season he managed a White Sox affiliate, the San Diego, Calif., club.

He managed the Detroit American League club from June 10, 1956, to May 2, 1959.

An outfielder, Norman spent most of his playing career in the minor leagues. He was with the Chicago White Sox part of the seasons of 1931 and 1932. From 1942 to 1945 he was a member of the old Milwaukee Brewers of the American Association and in 1946 he played with Toronto of the International League. He held numerous minor league managing assignments before going to the Tigers.

State Patrol Commander Sees Unified Force — in the Future

Traffic Police Head Declares Plan Is Only Cure of Problems

BY JOHN WYNGAARD
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

MADISON — This state will one day have a unified force of state-employed patrolmen, professionally trained and well-paid, to provide the depth of highway law enforcement that the cause of public safety requires.

Wyngaard

But that goal may not be reached until after his time, concludes Lawrence E. Beier, director of the enforcement division of the State Motor Vehicle Department and head of the State Traffic Patrol of 250 officers and men that was established seven years ago with the idea that it would be considerably expanded later.

When the patrol was created, the blueprint before the legislature assumed an ultimate manpower of 600, and the absorption of the rural highway patrols operated by the county sheriffs and county highway committees.

The 57-year-old officer says he is as sure as he ever was that a strong and centrally directed patrol "is the only answer" to the pressing problem of highway accidents and fatalities.

But he acknowledged realistically that there is no evident disposition thus far in the legislature or among the state-house politicians generally to write the laws required for the attainment of the objective.

He is hopeful about ultimate success, as he puts it, but he is not optimistic about early action.

Beier has been a law enforcement officer, mostly in highway work, for 24 years, having started as a member of the Portage County patrol at Stevens Point. Under the state retirement rules, he will be obliged to retire in three years, at the age of 60, unless he is given a special dispensation by his department. Police employees of state and local governments are covered under separate pension rules, requiring higher contributions during their working careers, in return for earlier retirement rights.

Early Member

Beier joined the infant State Patrol staff 19 years ago, when it numbered about 40 men. He became its chief in 1954, when it had grown slowly to about 70. It was in 1955 that Gov. Walter J. Kohler, after considerable effort in a reluctant legislature, managed the creation of the 250 man force after expert testimony that the state should work toward a constabulary of at least 600 under central state command.

"It's the only answer to our problem," he says today, noting that the Wisconsin system of fragmented enforcement machinery is one of the only survivors of its kind in the country. Even the state of California, which hesitated for years between a divided state - local system of rural highway law enforcement and a central state patrol, has now turned toward the state - directed system, he explained to a questioning visitor.

But Beier knows that the historical development of law enforcement in Wisconsin, as well as the apprehensive attitudes of local law enforcement officials, is involved in the Wisconsin legislature's hesitation about completing the state enforcement plan that was begun in 1955.

Met Challenge

"The counties started providing rural highway patrol service many years ago because it was needed, and the state was not responding. The state government felt it didn't have the money. The counties met the challenge. Now it is difficult to persuade them that there should be a unified effort, under state government direction, and that traffic control and highway safety are not bounded by municipal lines, but are general in nature and require broader enforcement efforts," he observes.

"But I believe there is a gradually increasing understanding that we need a central effort toward this common goal," he added.

On the face of it, there is little in the recent Wisconsin political record to encourage Beier's hope for a consolidation of forces. The 1961 legislature only after protracted and bitter quarrelling consented to amend the laws to permit Beier's men to make arrests for criminal activities observed in the course of their duties, while patrolling the highways. His department's proposal for a small additional allotment of men in the last budget request was generally ignored. The two most recent governors of the state were sympathetic to the patrol, but did little in a public way to show it.

"But I am hoping that the next Beier, right, a veteran of nearly a quarter of a century of county and state highway law enforcement work, is the director of the enforcement division of the State Motor Vehicle Department and chief of the State Traffic patrol. legislature will take action," the patrol commander repeats.

One factor that may provide a boost to Beier's hopes is the rapid completion of the new super-highways under the U.S. government's Interstate highway building program. About 150 Wisconsin miles of that system are now open to travel and are being patrolled on a 24 hour basis by state officers. Ultimately there will be 450 miles. Unless additional manpower is authorized, Beier says, the Interstate system will divert virtually all of his patrolmen from the rest of the 11,000 miles of rural state highway in Wisconsin. Today about 10 per cent of those miles are regularly patrolled. Patrol segments are chosen on the basis of their known hazards, as shown by the records of accidents and losses of lives and property.

Public Relations

Legislators and other politicians sometimes complain privately about what they call the "public relations" of the state patrol and its men. Beier is aware of the fact, and worries about it while he puzzles about it.

He is obviously proud of the quality of his officers and the kind of recruits attracted to the patrol service. The training program for new men is intensive. They spend 16 weeks in a training academy before they are assigned a "beat" and then work for six months, on probation, under the supervision of a veteran officer. Recruiting standards are high. They are so rigorous, in fact, that Beier admits he is considering some revisions, if the bureau of personnel will approve them.

There is a trend in the country for a steadily higher standard of quality in police work, which ultimately will bring about truly professional quality in police forces everywhere, Beier believes. One day police recruits will come from college graduating classes, "although that may be beyond my time too," he smiles.

Beier is anxious to assure questioners that he understands the problems of the county police, who represent the most formidable obstacle to the development of his own program.

"I understand their feelings. After all, I was one of them. But we can't make our goal with a split enforcement program," he insists.

Hot Rod Takes Shape Near New London

Karl Korth Has Spent 3 Years on Fast, Cut-Down Job

BY JOHN SAWALL
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

NEW LONDON — After three years of work, Karl Korth, route 2, New London, is still a year and one-half away from completing a hot-rod he is building.

The car is being built from parts of 17 American cars and is expected to cost $5,000 when completed. Korth has invested over $2,800 in his custom built car so far.

Work started when Korth was attending a body and fender course at Appleton Vocational School. He bought a 1931 Chevrolet coupe and proceeded to tear it apart. He lowered the roof 4 1/2 inches, channeled the body over the frame 7 1/2 inches and with a special front axle, which is 2 1/2 inches lower than a regular axle, he was able to lower the car until it was only 50 inches high and still have a 6 1/2-inch road clearance.

'57 Power Plant

The power plant, a 1957 Thunderbird engine, has been modified with a full race camshaft and an aluminum flywheel. Korth also installed a special clutch. While still at vocational school, he said, he spent five weeks polishing the inside of the engine.

The body and chassis of the car is built around a 1946 Ford car frame that was shortened nine inches, giving the car an overall length of 144 inches and a wheelbase of 107 inches.

A truck transmission and a special Columbia two-speed differential were used. A 40-amp electrical system was installed. Both the speedometer and tachometer are operated electrically and the car has electric fuel pumps.

Chrome Parts

Korth, who is now employed at a body shop in New London, said this summer he is planning to have all exposed parts of the engine chromed as well as parts of the chassis. All metal parts on the inside of the car also will be chromed, he said. The upholstery will be all white leather.

After the car is completed he wants to take it to Union Grove and test it on a drag strip and then to Daytona Beach, Fla., for a test on the sand beaches.

He has complied with all state motor vehicle requirements and has a title and license for the car, making it possible for him to operate the car on the highways.

Rough Ride

Performance on the highway is excellent, he said, but because of stiff springs the ride is a little rough. He has not tried it out for speed, he said, but at 65 miles

Parents' Prayers Answered

Sight Restored to Young Girl After Two Years of Blindness

SHERWOOD, Tenn. (AP) — "It was a miracle," said The Rev. Joseph Huske. "I know it."

That was his explanation of how 4-year-old Margaret Jackson suddenly found vision after three months of blindness in this Cumberland Valley town about 75 miles southeast of Nashville.

Doctors who handled the case were unavailable for comment. But Margaret could see again and laugh with the other children, her brown eyes sparkling, her pug nose full of tiny wrinkles.

The story came to light recently when a Nashville Tennessee staff writer, Rudy Abramson, learned of Margaret's recovery. He came to Sherwood to interview Margaret and Father Huske.

The little girl became ill and went blind two years ago. She was taken to Vanderbilt Hospital in Nashville and examined for weeks. Several doctors thought the blindness was caused by lead poisoning. Few gave her parents, Johnny and Charlotte Jackson, any hope she would ever see again.

Returned to Sherwood

In time she returned to Sherwood and to the Epiphany Episcopal Mission where her father, a self-taught electrician, carpenter and mason, worked with Father Huske.

"Almost every time I went into the church, Johnny or Charlotte would be there," Father Huske said. "Sometimes both of them would be there with Margaret saying their prayers."

The Jacksons were still praying the following October when the leaves on the mountains around Sherwood started turning. Then one night Margaret became ill again, showing the same symptoms she had just before she lost her sight.

The girl was rushed to Vanderbilt Hospital a second time. But she was feeling better when she arrived and the doctors could find nothing wrong.

Struck Matches

Back home once more, Johnny started to light a cigarette and Margaret grabbed for the match. The cigarette was forgotten. Johnny threw his arms around his small daughter and then began striking more matches.

"Every time, she would reach for them," he said. "After that, her sight gradually came back. Her left eye is a little weak now, but she doesn't even need glasses."

The three Jacksons have left Sherwood. Johnny was called into the Army and his wife and daughter recently went to join him at Ft. Polk, La.

But Margaret's "miracle" will never be forgotten by people in these parts.

Easter Message

There is a Jewish legend that, when Moses threw his wand into the Red Sea, the waters did not immediately roll back to provide a safe, dry escape for the Chosen People from the soldiers of the Pharaoh close behind in pursuit. Not until the first man had jumped into the sea, secure in his belief in the promised miracle, did the waves recede and the way open up.

The story of Easter, cornerstone of the Christian faith, is mainly that of the resurrection, the promise that there is no death in the total sense. But the weakness in most of us is that we do not transmit this belief, so easy to acknowledge on a bright spring day, into the conduct of our lives. If we do not live by bread alone, it follows that we must point ourselves more fully at a gathering of the spirit.

Was Wisconsin Short Changed?

It has always seemed curious to us, to use a moderate word, that when the United States government planned the huge Interstate highway system a few years ago and levied taxes against all road users to finance it, Wisconsin was allotted an unusually stingy proportion of the mileage.

Now the Wisconsin state highway department in a public statement, perhaps belatedly, has come to the same conclusion and demands that there be organized a representative commission of stature to appeal to the Congress for remedial action.

It may be conceded that in a true system of inter-regional roads, the ordinary measures of vehicle registration, population, tax payments, and the others, are not literally relevant. To provide transport routes across some of the plains and mountain states of the West, it is apparent, a somewhat below normal allocation to some of the other states will be required.

But even making allowances for such factors, the Wisconsin allocations have been strangely small. They are especially glaring when put against the allocations for other states bounding Wisconsin, and some of the Eastern states which are considerably smaller than Wisconsin in area, as well as in other legitimately relevant factors.

There is no real assurance that this

History of Book Banning

An exhibit at Beloit College of various books and publications that have been banned at different times in history makes an interesting and sometimes amusing study. The fears and prejudices of mankind apparently have not changed except as to target. It may now seem childish to us to ban a Hemingway novel because it correctly describes an Italian troop retreat, or Shakespeare's "King Lear" because George III was on the throne in his mad phase. But a study of some of the efforts to proscribe books in the United States during the last year shows some equally foolish attempts. And the wild-eyed rantings of the more vocal of the book banners confuse the issue so that an intelligent choice of reading material, particularly at the high school level, becomes difficult.

The American Book Publishers Council, understandably sensitive on the issue of book banning, now publishes a freedom-to-read bulletin, a successor to its censorship bulletin and stressing, we suppose, the more positive aspect of the problem. Its most recent issue indicates that the efforts during the last year were concentrated on school libraries and school texts.

There are two primary targets at this level. One is the so-called socialistic or even communistic texts, particularly in the field of the social sciences with the watchdogs generally members of the more ultra of conservative groups. The other target is novels, generally well recognized as having literary merit, but with details of sex some critics think too strong for teenage consumption. Both aims have merit; it is possible that some of the history texts overemphasized the economic problems of the world at a time when most of the nation was also overemphasizing them. Obviously school libraries cannot use the same measures of tolerance of off-beat themes or graphic descriptions which libraries for adults must follow. But unfortunately the wild-eyed show little discrimination.

Some of the examples cited by American book publishers are little short of ridiculous. The withdrawing of the Tarzan books because somebody claimed Tarzan and Jane were not married may now be considered only a hoax presumably perpetrated to discourage the silly side of book censorship. But a fifth grade student in California was told to take home his copy of The Wizard of Oz because a teacher thought the author had Communist sympathies. Southern school boards still are keeping the child's story of the black and the white rabbit out of the hands of inno-

As we celebrate Easter every year with our new clothes, our flowered hats, our colored eggs as symbolic of new life, it is relatively easy to believe in a life after death with the spring's evidence of rebirth all around us. But it is over the rest of the year that our believing—and living our belief—counts as well.

Walt Whitman wrote:

*I say no man has ever yet been half devout enough,
None has ever yet adored or worship'd half enough,
None has begun to think how divine he himself is, and how certain the future is.*

Easter tells us of the certainty of the future. But it is up to each man himself to determine how great is the miracle.

belated complaint from the state road administration will have any effect. Already the anticipated costs of the Interstate highways are outrunning the anticipated revenues, with the result that completion of the system as it is now set down on the U.S. bureau of public roads maps is being deferred by some years.

But it may be useful to note what might have happened here, had the Wisconsin interests been a little more articulate when the decisions were being made half a dozen years ago.

The state highway department now says that an Interstate system route, designed to toll road standards, should have been authorized between Milwaukee, through the Fox Valley, to Marinette.

Generally that route would follow the route of U.S. Highway 41, which is now being improved in annual segments through the normal financing procedures of the state highway department. The process is a slow one, however, because of state budget limitations. At the pace which is now being followed, there will be some worn-out sections of the highway before the final segments are built. With an Interstate allotment to cover that route, involving 90 per cent federal financing, the reconstruction could have been completed many years earlier.

cent youngsters who might accept integration. Another fairy story, which showed animals being created in a factory, has been criticized because it thus "denies the existence of God." One must quickly wonder what the critics would have done if the true methods of animal reproduction were shown.

The old New England practice of bundling so shocked one teacher that he tore four pages discussing the practice from a social science book and the school board threw out the entire volume on the grounds that anything with "a sex angle" should be avoided. How is biology taught in that high school? Another vociferous critic raised holy Ned about a history of the world's philosophers because it included Plato and everyone knows he spoke of free love and communal living and "this is one reason we have so many sex maniacs walking around." Some teachers have been criticized for not teaching enough about the horrors of Communism. Others have been suspended for using the works of George Orwell which rather dreadfully describes the terrors.

The ridiculous aspects of such censorship tend to hide the very real fact that textbooks and books which are available in school libraries and therefore receive a tacit approval must be carefully chosen. The alleged literary merit of Tropic of Cancer or Lady Chatterley's Lover probably does not make up for the emphasis upon portrayals of sex. While we think such books should be available for adults in public libraries, they do not contribute anything meritorious at the high school level. On the other hand opposition to such books as The Scarlet Letter, Catcher in the Rye or Tess of the D'Urbervilles indicates that the banner has read very little and is in fact searching for prurient passages as much as any youngster.

History and theories of government are controversial subjects. It is important that only one side of an event is not given in social science courses. And parents who protest that a novel deals with sex seem to forget that life does too.

Books in schools should be chosen for their literary or instructional merit by people who know and understand the youngsters who will read them. The critics who are blinded by the fear of Communism or shocked by bundling only add to the confusion. Unfortunately, the loudest complaints seem to come from those whose reading level cannot be much above the third grade and others whose approach to both sex and society is warped and stunted.

Feels That Concrete Culverts Should be Given Consideration

Editor, Post-Crescent:

This is my first reply to an article in the editorial section of your paper, but I feel a reply is necessary to an article concerning bids received by Outagamie County Highway Dept. I am sure that Mr. Clarence Bronson, as capable a man that he is, will give due consideration to the bid by Appleton Concrete Products, insofar as culverts are concerned. Actually the bids did specify steel, and I imagine by coincidence (pause) the steel culvert bids all quote the same price.

According to Mr. Koepke, of Appleton Concrete Products, concrete is stronger insofar as culverts are concerned, although a few cents a foot more costlier, and I would imagine concrete culverts last longer than steel. If the cost of laying concrete culverts is within reason compared to steel culverts, then I am all for concrete and hoping that Outagamie County converts to concrete culverts.

For one thing it will awaken the steel monopoly group, that they will have to be competitive in the future, and that bids will be treated as bids on their individual quotation.

It does seem that once a product is specified and the policy has been the same for many years, an over confidence exists and these over confident groups feel they are in the driver's seat. Let's all submit the same price naturally one of us will get the

Views About Airport and Road Work

Editor, Post-Crescent:

As a reader of the Post-Crescent and the views of everyone that I am acquainted with on the airport issue our opinion is that an airport is not needed at this time. The amount of air travel in this area does not require an airport. It only takes a short time to go to Green Bay or Oshkosh.

I'm sure there are many more important projects in our county that could be taken care of and let the airport go until it is really needed.

I have been following with great interest Mr. Fisher's articles in the Post-Crescent. The figures he has mentioned look very impressive. What I fail to understand is how you can save all that money. A private contractor is in the business to make a profit and his men are paid much higher wages than those received by the county men.

In the winter with the snow removal problem as this past winter, many extra hours are needed and it takes experienced men to run these graders and snow plows.

I had the occasion to drive on County Trunk A and found it to be one of the better roads to ride on in our county. I spotted one crack which isn't too bad.

I'm glad the steel crisis has been averted because, with the Federal government spending one hundred billion dollars this year, it wouldn't do for the steel companies to replace obsolete or worn out machinery. That would cause inflation.

Or are we in the position of having the same situation exist here as existed in the nation some months ago, such as the large national electrical contractor farce. In that particular instance the bids were rigged and we the taxpayer paid through the nose so to speak.

But as I said before Mr. Bronson has always been quite capable in his task as Road Commissioner of Outagamie County, and I feel he will weigh the facts insofar as cost and practicability are concerned. In addition we have a very outstanding capable firm such as Appleton Concrete Products, which is locally owned, employs local help and is paying local taxes. It has always had Appleton first in its mind, so I say let's do business locally, if at all possible. Give a sincere competitive firm our support, and not to a steel monopoly group.

It may have taken the JFK administration 15 months to get started, but, once it got into action, it certainly made up for lost time.

And the boys definitely put an end to that right-wing nonsense about their being Fabian Socialists. The Fabians, who took their name from the Roman general whose easy-does-it tactics confounded Hannibal, were gradualists; but the New Frontiersmen had their running pants and shoes on and were loath to put off until tomorrow what could be done today.

The transformation of the Republic into the monolithic state was accomplished with supersonic speed and pinpoint precision, almost before you could say "Karl Marx." The point of no return came so fast, in fact, that I got the eerie feeling I was slipped the same kind of Mickie Finn they gave Rip van Winkle. All I recall, with any certainty, was that I had a nightcap one evening in April, 1962, and when I woke up it was the middle of 1984, the year Orwell said it would happen. How they got the stuff into my Sanka I'll never know.

Two Deaths

It might have been easier for me if, on arising, I hadn't taken my customary morning stroll through the village churchyard. But I was all shook up — I trust the phrase isn't old-hat now; it was all the vogue in 1962 — when I came across those two tombstones that first told me that the Constitution and

Observations About Income Tax Revision

BY JOHN WYNGAARD

MADISON — The idea is "penetrating the body politic" that the 1961 tax revision act brought about a substantial boost in the personal income tax rates.

Wage earners whose assessments in earlier years were nominal are now discovering, to their dismay in many instances, that the wage deductions in the new income tax withholding law are a good deal higher than they expected on the basis of their previous taxpaying experience.

Some Republican candidates for state office, apparently believing that they can exploit the situation to their own profit, are solicitously complaining that the rate revisions had the effect of putting the greatest impact upon the lower and middle income brackets. One candidate recently characterized that decision as a "brutal" one.

NO SURPRISE

Whatever the merits of the decision to raise the rates and to revise the progressively table, there should have been no surprise involved.

Throughout the tax revision debate extending over nearly two years it was perfectly plain, for anybody who was interested, that one of the goals was to stabilize the income tax schedule.

There was a theoretical basis for the decision as well as a practical one.

Economists of all shades of political persuasion had for years advocated the idea of making the rate schedule more reliable by increasing the levies upon the lower brackets where the old schedules were so slight as to be insignificant. This was called "broadening the base," which became one of the bromides of the tax revision deliberation over many months. One of the considerations, besides increasing revenues, was to make the productivity more reliable. The first few thousands of income are yielded to almost everybody, in good times and bad, and thus the fluctuations involved in the more steeply graduated schedule could be avoided.

But there was a practical consideration also, and especially since the Democratic state administration was not prepared to accept the general sales tax which was the only practicable alternative under the financial situation that confronted it.

To realize through higher rates upon the upper bracket earners the $50,000,000 or so that was involved in the rate revision would have made Wisconsin notorious in the country and would have been the most important deterrent to the economic expansion drive of that state that could have been devised. It is significant that such an alternative was never seriously considered, even by the most liberal of the members of the legislature and the most liberal of the factions of the Democratic party organization.

HOW IT WAS DONE

Nevertheless, a frontal proposal to raise the rates in the lower and middle income brackets of income taxpayers to a substantially higher degree than the upper brackets could never have been approved through the ordinary methods.

Time after time during the last 20 years such a plan had been advanced, fearfully, desperately without the slightest response in the legislature. Once a popular Republican governor, during his political honeymoon period, turned up with such a plan before his Republican legislative caucus, and got such a cold response that he abandoned the proposition forthwith and returned with a surtax.

The difference this year was that the income tax revision was combined with a withholding plan. Withholding promised to make tax payments easier, for those who noticed what was going on, and now that they have discovered it, it is too late to do anything about it.

We Look at Tragedy For Five Reasons, Says Psychiatrist

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J. (AP) — When hordes of sightseers flocked to the New Jersey shore after it was devastated by a late winter storm, a psychiatrist said they mostly were prompted by normal, healthy curiosity.

Most of them had one of five reasons, he said:

1. A need to identify themselves as part of the stricken populace.
2. A desire to see for themselves what they had seen and heard on television and radio and what they had read in newspapers.
3. An eagerness to tell others they had seen the storm damage.
4. A wish to feel more keenly a sense of gratification that they had not sustained a loss themselves.
5. An urge to sympathize with and to help those who had been hurt.

Beauty Parade by Day Change Made for TV

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J. (AP) —Plans are being studied to make the annual Miss America Pageant parade down the Boardwalk here a color television spectacular in another year or two, pageant president Albert A. Marks Jr. has announced.

When this happens, Marks said, the parade, now held at night, will be in the daytime.

Ryskind

Free Enterprise had both passed on.

You'll, perhaps, regard it as sheer sentimentality that I broke down and cried: a grown man doesn't weep for even the most beloved of comrades after a score of years. But you must remember that I was still, like Rip of yore, going by the old calendar, and the bulldog edition of the morning paper I had purchased — I thought — the night before gave me no clue to the time-lag. True, my beard seemed a little heavier than usual, but that often happens in the spring of the year, and I am one of those unfortunates who can get a 5 o'clock shadow even after a 4-o'clock shave.

No Obituary

So, though my old friends had been in obviously failing health for some time, the news of their death hit me with full force. After I recovered my composure, I turned the pages of the paper to the obituary column but found no record of their passing there.

It was the other pages of the daily that gave me the clue, in their recital of the lethal blows delivered by the Establishment, blows from which my idols never fully recovered. Technically, I suppose, the bout could have gone another round, but it is questionable whether either of my friends could have answered the bell. In all, the seconds were fully justified in throwing in the sponge.

The Constitution, just a shadow of its former sturdy self, had gone down for a count of six (6 to 2, that is) when the Supreme Court's decision in the Tennessee case whittled away the rights of the states to set up the qualifications for voters and to decide their internal boundary lines. Frankfurter and Harlan screamed "foul," but that claim was laughed off.

The ink was hardly dry on that one when a federal court ruling ordered Alabama to reapportion by July 16 or have the court itself draw up a plan. That was hardly the province of the court, but the Establishment had found the law ineffectual and saw no reason to waste time correcting it legally when a little subverting would achieve the desired result. What we're after is the greatest good for the greatest number who will vote right, literate or not. If they vote right, they're literate.

That took care of the Constitution, and then Free Enterprise was a silted duck. When U.S. Steel raised its prices to meet the costs of the new contract, the President declared nuclear war. After all, this wasn't the Russians.

I hadn't noticed that the public, which had sat quietly while the administration was piling up a $13-billion deficit, was especially worried over the rise. But then my finger isn't on the public pulse the way the President's is.

Indignant at the corporation's attempt to continue on a profit basis, he pulled out all the stops. Anti-trust suits, senatorial investigations, threats of loss of government contract — the works. Even calling in the FBI to wake up a newspaperman in the middle of the night, which is just about as far as you can go.

So long, old friends! I shall mourn you sincerely but secretly — after all, a fellow has to take care of himself. I'll try to adapt to the New Order as best I can, because I certainly don't want the FBI to come banging on my door at 3 a.m. As soon as I shave, I'm going to get me a 1984 morning paper and find out who the current President is, Teddy or Caroline. Deprivations Mark the Life of Average Russian Citizens

AP Correspondent Answers Common Questions After Long Duty With Soviets

What's life in the Soviet Union like? Associated Press correspondent Stanley Johnson herewith presents some enlightening answers to questions he was asked, most frequently during a recent home leave after 3½ years in the Soviet Union. From Russian TV to Soviet relations with China, they afford vivid glimpses of everyday Russia.

BY STANLEY JOHNSON
NEW YORK (AP) — Every one wants to unwrap the enigma around the riddle that is Russia. The result is a spate of questions asked of anyone who has spent some time in the Soviet Union. The questions cover personal and political issues and here is a sampling of some that have been asked me.

Q. Do you think there will be a war?
A. No. The Russians are just as scared of us as we are of them. The "balance of terror" is not a very pleasant phrase nor a pleasant way of life — but it has kept the peace so far and, I think, will continue to do so.

No Shelters

Q. Do they have air raid or fallout shelters in Russia?
A. Every now and again someone claims to have information that they exist. The immediate question is: What good are shelters if they are kept secret from the people who are supposed to take shelter in them? None of the military experts at any western embassy in Moscow has been able to detect a single shelter.

Q. What are the commercials like on Russian television?

A. There aren't any. The communist government owns the TV stations and also screen than any American network would allow. They also help Soviet policy by keeping the people's fear of Germany alive.

Q. In that connection, why do the Russians carry on about Germany as they do? Why all the trouble about Berlin?

A. The fundamental reason is that they have been brutally invaded twice in the lifetime of Russian adults. After that it's a question of politics. After World War II, the Kremlin figured all Germany and probably France and Italy would fall easily to communism. This didn't happen, primarily owing to the success of such American policies as the Marshall Plan. But the Soviet leaders will never give up. Berlin, as Premier Khrushchev has said, is a "craw in my throat." Its brilliant capitalist prosperity contrasts with the miserable poverty of East Germany and most of the rest of the communist empire; it is also the seat of some mighty effective anti-communist agencies.

Moreover, fear — and even hatred — of Germany is one emotion the Kremlin hierarchy sincerely shares with the Russian people and the peoples of such countries as Poland and Czechoslovakia. Being anti-German is the political equivalent in eastern Europe of being against sin in the United States: No body can dispute your position. The red Chinese enter into this too. Khrushchev can always point out that, although he may be playing footsie with non-communist, but anti-western, parties in newly independent countries he is firm and tough about Germany. The Chinese think he is too soft.

China-Russia

Q. That brings up the question about relations between Red China and the Soviet Union: Are they having a serious quarrel? Is Russia afraid of China?

A. The question is basically ideological, but has strong overtones of power politics. Fundamentally, the force of the communist bloc lies in its ideology — otherwise, the red revolution would have been just one of many which have swept this or that country throughout history. But Marxism-Leninism gives easy answers to hard questions for people who would rather not be bothered thinking. Such an ideology demands one guiding center — and Peiping is now disputing Moscow's right to be it. Just as the Roman Catholic religion cannot have more than one pope, the communists cannot have more than one interpreter of faith.

But as for being afraid of Red China? No. The removal of Soviet technicians, the refusal of atomic aid, the cutbacks in economic assistance — all these things show not a current fear, but a Soviet Union trying to put itself in a position where it will never have to be afraid. China is a teeming, over-populated pick up the phone and call the grocer. Only in this case the grocer is 1,000 miles away in Helsinki. He puts the meat, fruit, vegetables, cream etc., on the train and you pick it up at the Moscow station next morning. There are no customs or other problems.

Q. What's the night life like in Moscow?

A. What's it like on the moon? The only "night life" in Russia is in a handful of restaurants, all of which close at 11:30 p.m. There are no dance floors and, where there's some kind of orchestra, guests dance between the tables.

To drink there are vodka, Soviet cognac and Soviet champagne. The latter two are not bad provided you have never tasted cognac or champagne.

Most of the music consists of American tunes of the '20s or early '30s with some new pieces copied by note from the Voice of America.

The customers are gregarious: The stags flock round asking your date to dance. This is especially true of army officers in town on leave. Many a tourist has considered it one of her biggest and most unexpected thrills to dance with an Air Force colonel or a Navy commander.

There is vast demand for space in the seven or eight "first class" restaurants in Moscow. There's always room for a foreigner but a Russian has to be well-dressed, well-heeled and well-connected to make it.

Easy Driving

Q. What's it like to drive a car in Russia?

A. It is easy if you can forget about such decadent capitalist luxuries as service stations, high octane gas, and lubrication, not to mention motels.

They scarcely exist and for a very good reason — few customers. There are no more than 50,000 private cars in the whole Soviet Union. That is a generous estimate based on the fact Moscow has 23,000.

These cars belong to top government, industrial and intellectual figures and are almost all chauffeur-driven. It always amazes one's Russian friends that Americans can and do drive themselves.

The cars cost anywhere from $2,000 to $8,000 and waiting lists are years long. The overwhelming majority of cars seen on the street are assigned to various government bureaus and to enterprises and then used by officials and executives "on business." This latter phrase is interpreted in Russia more loosely than the Bureau of Internal Revenue would stand for here.

Moscow has two stations selling gas of a doubtful 98 octane and a handful more with 70. There are no attendants — you put the gas in yourself, wipe your own windshield and put air in your own tires. Then you take your money inside to the cashier, generally a girl in a padded coat. She watches through the window to make sure you don't take any more gas than you pay for.

Obviously there is no such thing as an oil change or a grease job. Foreigners have such things done at the American or British embassies: Russian private drivers make deals with "friends" who work in government garages.

There's not enough traffic in Moscow to cause parking trouble or traffic congestion. It's easy to drive across the city of seven million in 20 or 25 minutes.

When I drove from Poland on the main highway to Soviet Russia, I found a gas station at the border and a sign which set the tone for the trip: "next gas station 170 miles."

Truck traffic along the road is fairly heavy but passenger cars are few and far between.

There are a lot of uninsurable hazards. For instance, we lost the "V" off the front of our car, both outside mirrors and the top of the aerial. What anyone wants with such "souvenirs" is beyond me. The car is currently being repainted: The finish was wrecked by youngsters scratching "peace and friendship," "America OK", and similar slogans on it.

Popular Americans

Q. What is the Russian attitude toward the United States?

A. The Soviet anti-American campaign, domestically at least, has been a flop. Until an American proves himself personally objectionable, all he has to do to be popular is to be American. Russians love Americans and it is probably the last place left in the world where the people think our streets are paved with gold.

Q. How do you get theater tickets?

A. The same way you do in New York. Know somebody, ask far in advance or buy from the speculators who flock around the entrances. It's awfully hard to get tickets to the Bolshoi, for instance, because the government frequently preempts performances for official entertaining, everyone visiting the city wants to go and a good half of the seats are reserved for special guests.

These special guests, who pay for their tickets, are workers or whole factory sections who have exceeded their norms, outstanding farm workers, government and Communist Party officials from out of town and outstanding students — especially of music and dancing.

Between the acts they circle round the lobby in a procession almost as formalized as the ballet itself, looking at one another and criticizing. They're usually not criticizing the performance though; The comment is about each other's clothes.

Headquarters in Wisconsin

Midwest Protected by Strong Air Arm System

TRUAX FIELD — In the never-ending vigil of the North American Air Defense Command (NORAD) to protect the continent from aerospace attack, guidance for defending America's Midwest industrial heartland comes from 30th NORAD Region headquarters at Truax Field.

Some 52 million people in the heart of the United States depend on the 30th Region for aerospace defense. Regional boundaries run roughly north to Hudson Bay, south to Little Rock, east to Erie, Penn., and west to Minneapolis.

All or parts of 16 states, including more than a half-million square miles in the United States, and a large part of southern Canada are involved in this complex. The command provides aerospace defense for numerous industrial and population centers like Chicago, Milwaukee, Detroit, Minneapolis, Davenport, Duluth, Indianapolis, Cleveland, Dayton, Toledo, Cincinnati, Columbus, Youngstown, St. Louis, Little Rock, Memphis, and Nashville.

Air Force Maj. Gen. Donald R. Hutchinson directs aerospace defenses for this large area from his command Post at Truax Field.

Also at this nerve center of Midwest defense is his vice commander, Air Com. Maurice Lipton of the Royal Canadian Air Force, spotlighting the international nature of the continental defense.

Defense Force

Air Force, Army, and Royal Canadian Air Force units, as well as Army and Air National Guard elements, make significant contributions to Gen. Hutchinson's aerospace defense forces. Among the weapons that stand alert to sweep hostile bombers from Midwestern skies are the supersonic manned interceptors of the Air Force like the F-102 "Delta Dagger," the F-101B "Voodoo," the F-106 "Delta Dart," and the Bomarc B guided missile, capable of streaking out 400 miles to destroy invading aircraft.

Also of high importance in the aerospace defense strategy of the Region are the powerful, accurate Nike missile units, ringing the great population and industrial centers of the area. The nuclear-capable NIKES, teaming with interceptors of the Air Force and Air National Guard, can destroy an entire fleet of enemy bombers seeking to attack key cities.

To manage this wide-scale job of aerospace defense, the 30th NORAD Region is sub-divided into four sectors, each named for a principal city within its bounds. These are called the Chicago, Detroit, Duluth and Sault Ste Marie NORAD Sectors. The program of 30th NORAD Region, Maj. Hardcastle's team of specialists works around the clock to "keep the 676th on the air."

Radar returns flowing from the 676th and other squadrons of the Sault Ste Marie NORAD Sector to the direction center enable the sector commander, Col. Richard W. DaVania, and his battle staff to decide on what action to take in case of unknown aircraft.

To carry out its aerospace mission in the 30th NORAD Region, the Sault Ste. Marie NORAD Sector Battle Staff may use a variety of manned and unmanned weapons. These include the far-ranging Bomarc B missile and supersonic F-101B and F-106 nuclear-capable interceptors.

Men and weapons of the 30th NORAD Region constantly take part in continent-wide exercises to perfect the roles they would play in the event of emergency. NORAD officials regard this preparation as the highest example of team-work among the Air Force, Army, RCAF, and Army and Air National Guard.

Double Trouble Dog Eats Only Those Odd Socks Off the Line

MILLINGTON, Tenn. (AP) — John C. Howard has a dog that eats socks from his clothesline and, what's worse, usually only one to a pair.

"He just goes up in the air and takes alternate socks," Howard said in a baffled tone.

Several brands of dog repellent have been applied to the socks. Once they were even sprinkled with cayenne pepper. In vain. The dog's appetite for socks couldn't be better. Furthermore, the peppered socks complicate matters for Howard, the admiral's educational adviser at the Naval Air Station here. Admirals frown on foot-scratching.

Theories Abound

Inflation or Deflation, That's Economic Quandary of the Day

BY ERIC SEVAREID

Seventy-five years ago James Russell Lowell said, "In a world of daily — nay, almost hourly — journalism, every clever man, every man who thinks himself clever or whom anybody else thinks clever, is called upon to deliver his judgement point blank and at the word of command on every conceivable subject of human thought."

A legion of journalists and politicians (who are in much the same profitable fix) have now delivered their judgments on the pricing backdown of the steel industry, and the country has been told: (1) that the back of the inflationary spiral has now been broken, and (2) that there wasn't any inflationary spiral to break because living costs have risen only about one per cent a year over the last four years.

Opposing Theories

In any case, we now seem to be heading into a period of relative price stability for the first time in a full generation. It is extremely hard for most of us to get used to this idea, and we are bound to witness the development of two opposing bodies of theory, one maintaining that when and if the period of stability breaks it will break toward further inflation, the other maintaining the direction will be toward deflation.

This reporter admits at once to complete uncertainty. I took formal leave of advanced economic theory in graduate school with Chamberlain's Theory of Monopolistic Competition and that was a long time ago; in any case, economics remains one of the most unscientific as well as one of the most "dismal" of the sciences. But if fundamental predictions are perilous, it remains true that certain fundamental historical forces have been, and are, at work and can be seen. They seem to be opposing forces. And which set of forces will dominate over the next years is the whole question before us.

Inflation Permanent

for this century have said that our belief in the possibility of a return to the "sound dollar" was based on the illusory experience of the 19th century, the only period in 500 years during which prices settled downward over a long stretch. This school of thought has argued that general inflation in the Western world is permanent for these reasons, among others: the shift of virtually all democratic governments towards the political left; the movement away from the gold standard; the growing power of labor unions; the great growth of social services; the almost universal and perhaps irreversible subsidization of agriculture; the relative expansion of the middle classes with their sharper awareness of education and the good things of life; the constant state of war in terms of defense expenditures; the shift from the welfare state to the "welfare world" as international aid programs become a fixed pattern of world politics, and the general rise in population with its pressures on the supply of goods and space.

For this country, at least, it is harder to isolate the opposing, deflationary forces, because so many of them are relatively new phenomena and we have not yet taken the measure of their practical effects. One seems to be unemployed but, not just of the unemployed but of the unemployable. Perhaps the important fact, the sleeper, in the March figures issued by the Labor Department, is not that unemployment was down by a million compared with last year but that more of those who remain unemployed have been in that unhappy condition for six months or more. For the short run this only means that the more easily employable get hired first, but there may be long run implications.

Population Changes

It would seem to this layman that the key to the future in terms of inflation or deflation may lie in the net effect of the rapid spread of automation and the rapid growth of the population. It is a sufficiently staggering thought that our population is likely to bound upwards by 35 million in this decade of the '60s. The total effect of population "explosion" is supposed to be inflationary. But consider the age and racial pattern of this explosion.

America has passed a watershed — for the first time in our history the number of mouths to be fed is increasing faster than the working hands to feed them. The greatest population growth is among the very young and the very old: the number of new workers applying to the job market will triple in the '60s over the '50s. Furthermore, the Negro population — "last to be hired, first to be fired," if prejudice persists — increases at a far faster rate than the white population. In this technological age we can go badly out of joint if the supply of the unskilled increases faster than that of the skilled.

If some master of the bewildering new set of economic, demographic and technological factors will now appear amongst us to synthesize all this in terms of a deflationary or inflationary future, this writer will stand in line along with all other Oliver Twists of journalism, empty cup in grateful hand.

New London Advances Expansion Plans for School Construction

Architects Get Recommendations For Building Two New Structures

NEW LONDON — The much-discussed building program for the New London Unified School District was started on its way to reality last week when Edgar A. Stubenrauch and Associates of Sheboygan, architects, were directed by the board of education to design an elementary attendance center for the northern part of the district and a new high school for the city.

With completion dates set for Sept. 1, 1963, for the attendance center and Sept. 1, 1964, for the high school, the board has indicated temporary structures may be provided to house the burgeoning school population in the interim.

Preliminary plans for the new schools will be drawn in accordance with recommendations forwarded to the board by School Superintendent Lloyd Qualley.

Cost Ceiling

He told the board and architects that average costs of the component parts must be at or below average costs experienced by districts in the neighborhood. This cost ceiling must be observed, he said, or the buildings cannot be built.

The size of the high school has been indicated to meet the needs of an enrollment of between 1,000 and 1,200. The northern attendance center would compare with the $245,000 Readfield School.

Special features in the buildings include a gymnasium and hot lunch facilities in the elementary school and a swimming pool, children in the district the opportunity to learn how to swim — a skill, he said, that should be known in an area where water activities were so important.

Commissioner George Kopp points out the need of the pool in the district's long range plan and Commissioner Vernon Truesdale reported that in schools the size proposed for New London, swimming pools are in constant use by the school and the city.

Commissioner Delbert Beno has said he favors the pool because it will give rural children a chance to swim barred to them at the outdoor municipal pool.

Consider Cost

Mayor Wilmer Schlafer urged consideration of the cost, but indicated he felt a school of the proposed size should have the pool now and not at a later date.

On the other side of the proposal are suggestions from the public that other facilities are needed in the area more pressing than a swimming pool.

The attendance center gymnasium and hot lunch facilities have won support from Truesdale of the Dale area and from Qualley.

Truesdale reported the Readfield school gymnasium has not only proved helpful in teaching and physical education use but has served well as a community center for the public.

Qualley said the hot lunch facility should be arranged for central kitchen use that also could be made available to the community.

Qualley was instructed to investigate possible sites for the schools and provide the board a report for study.

During the week, Qualley obtained for a possible high school site an option on a parcel of land of 30 acres, more or less, west of Nassau Street.

The board owns property near Hatten Memorial Park, but it has been discovered the site has an underground water problem. An alternate school site, it is felt, must be obtained if the problem proves the park site untenable.

However, it has been indicated the park site is the board's first choice if it is useable.

School Plan

Qualley said he favored a high school of two stories for academic use with a single story shop area designed for a second story

What can equal it? The thrill of accomplishment with that first pan of brownies is written all over her face. She's proud, and she has every right to be.

The successful results of these first time projects are remarkable at times. The same is equally true of the "small wonder" of newspaper advertising, the want ad.

Nothing equals them in their ability to sell, buy, find, rent or hire . . . and at such a low cost too. Why not try a Post-Crescent Want Ad yourself? Phone RE 3-4411 today and put a small wonder to work for you.

Boating Industry Opposes Tax Plan

President's Proposal to Place New Levy on Pleasure Craft Meets Strong Objection From 2 Sources

The boating industry is opposing President Kennedy's plan to levy an annual use tax on pleasure craft.

The proposals are a "perversion of sound tax principles," the Outboard Boating Club of America and the National Association of Engine and Boat Manufacturers have charged in a joint statement.

"While we most certainly subscribe to the overall objective of long range planning and action to assure adequate recreational resources for our people, we strongly oppose this attempt to tax a small segment of our population to pay for such lands for the benefit of the entire population," the statement continued.

Too Many Taxes
The two groups expressed confidence that the Congress would reject the proposed tax as "discriminatory."

According to OBC, boatmen are already paying local, state and federal governments more than $100 million annually in boat registration fees, taxes paid on fuel, personal property taxes and similar fees.

The administration measure would levy a $5 annual fee on pleasure craft 14-16 feet in length, with a $2 charge for each additional foot.

The money collected would pay for the acquisition of additional land for federal parks, forests and wildlife refuges.

Both OBC and NAEBM have pledged a joint effort to defeat the measure.

Two days after the Presidential message in which the proposals were made, the two groups issued the following joint statement:

"On April 4, 1962 legislation was sent to the Congress to impose an annual graduate tax on all sail and motor boats 14 feet and over. The stated purpose of this tax on boat owners is to finance the acquisition of additional federal lands.

"It is our conviction that taxing boat owners for this purpose is a perversion of sound tax principles.

"While we most certainly subscribe to the overall objective of long range planning and action to assure adequate recreational resources for our people, we strongly oppose this attempt to tax a small segment of our population to pay for such lands for the benefit of the entire population.

"We feel confident that when all the facts are placed before the Congress, they will agree with us that this proposed tax on boat owners is discriminatory and should be rejected."

Bonduel Winner In Triangular Meet

BONDUEL — The Bonduel High School track team opened the 1962 season with a win over Marion and Iola with 128 points.

Marion scored 49½ and Iola was third with 34½ points. The Bonduel Bears won 11 firsts, 9 seconds, 6 thirds and 1 fourth.

Bikes Can Bring Outdoors Close

Cyclist Trails in Top Scenic Areas May be Developed

In an era of crowded highways and prospectively crowded waterways, the old-fashioned bicycle may become a more important tool for the outdoors lover who craves the enjoyment of the quiet countryside.

The state department of resource development, on the lookout for contributions to the growth of the Wisconsin tourist business, says that good bicycle trails in the better scenic districts of Wisconsin would soon strengthen tourist volumes in such localities.

"There is, we believe, a vast potential market among city people who would like to get out and see the country-side close-up. Many of them have bicycles and those who don't can get one for a fraction of the cost of a boat," the agency observes in a current bulletin.

The department disclosed that it intends to suggest cycling trails on some of its plans for "scenic corridors" in the state. Philip Lewis, the department's landscape architect in charge of such planning, reported that he has traveled in England and in continental Europe and has been impressed with the success of the bicycle trails provided there.

Stammer landed his prize catch with a spinning rod and an eight-pound test line. Fishing continues to be spotty on most areas of the Wolf. Most anglers are blaming the unseasonably cold weather.

Outdoor Area Buying Hiked

Recreation Act Has Helped Set Pace in Obtaining New Land

State recreational land buying has more than doubled under the new Outdoors Recreation Act, and the pace is likely to be accelerated even more.

A conservation department tabulation just issued disclosed that nearly 25,000 acres of lands at a cost of just under $2,000,000 have been bought since the new act was adopted less than a year ago. The normal land buying program of the department, out of ordinary revenues, during the same period amounted to about 16,000 acres at a cost of less than $400,000.

The availability of additional revenues has apparently permitted the department to move for the purchase of properties of relatively higher cost, that were outside the range of its financial ability before the new act.

Pace Continues
That the land buying pace will continue to increase is indicated by the fact that the department has $5,000,000 a year under the new revenue program, for a period of 10 years. Not all of it will be used for fish and game lands. Some is dedicated to park, scenic easement along highways, and similar programs, but the bulk of the money will go into the purchase of strategic parcels for the standard outdoors sports.

The objective is not merely to acquire land, but land that has special characteristics and values in particular locations of prospectively intense user demand. Thus the 240 parcels acquired ownership rolls during the last year include more than 256,000 feet of lake and stream frontage, or the equivalent of more than 48 miles, counting both sides of streams. More than 3,600 acres of private ponds have also been added to the state.

Weimaraner Boasts Ducal Ancestors

BY BUD LARIMER

Here is no other stalwart Teutonic transplant to our upland bird sportsmen. The Thuringian game preserves of the Dukes of Weimar were his cradle and proving grounds. The old SCHWEISHUND, a solid red blood-hound, was the basic stock with infusions of pointer blood and several other sporting breeds, resulting in a trimmer frame, more speed and keener intelligence. Courage and hardness were essentials for his earliest use as a tracker and "hold-dog" for deer, bear and wild boar.

As game decreased and bird-hunting increased in popularity he easily transferred his unusual capabilities to master this form of hunting. Developed under a strict German breeding program, an exclusive club of sportsmen-owners bred only top specimens and firm culling of all litters was enforced rigidly. Representatives of this club travelled far and wide, inspecting all litters and enforcing the destruction of all but the choicest. Owners were limited as to the number they might own at one time, they must not be shown or run in field trials and three members voting NO could keep any non-member from owning one.

About 1929 the illustrious Howard Knight, New England sporting mate and being the solace to and great, was admitted to membership in this German Club and imported the first brace into the United States. These two and a later six he imported were the germs for an almost equally strict breeding program in this country. They were given A.K.C. recognition in 1943 and skinned up the ladder of popularity like the shimmering silver ghosts that they are affectionately likened to.

Silver Pelt

This shining silver pelt, powerful frame handled with an acme of grace, keen scent and an actively intelligent trainability have served to make them go far. They reach maturity and knowledgeable hunting very early, and thrive and perform best as home members, personally hunted by the owners.

When all of the dust of the early fanfare cleared it was found that the Weimaraner was a pleasing companion, a really striking beauty and a top-notch hunter.

An imposing package of animal, he stands up to 27 inches at the shoulder and weighs from 55 to 85 pounds. The coat is soft, with a high sheen, and must be of various tones of silver. The eyes may be blue or amber and the tail is docked.

The Ducal Scion who illustrates this article is Spook Leech, respectfully ministered to by the Fred Leeches of Neenah. He is kept well occupied looking after Tibby, his Lhasa Apso housemate and being the solace to and great, was admitted to membership in this German Club and imported the first brace into the United States. These two and a later six he imported were the germs for an almost equally strict breeding program in this country.

New Funds Spur Development of Scenic Route

Great River Road in Western Wisconsin Gigantic Project

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — Budgeting of additional state funds for scenic easements will provide a boost for the development of the Great River Road project in western Wisconsin, envisioned as one of the key scenic travel routes in mid-America by state resource planners.

The Wisconsin goal of the interstate planning for a unified scenic route along the vast length of the Mississippi River is a road that will follow the river as closely as possible from Cassville in the southwestern corner of the state to Prescott in the northwestern district.

Scenic Values
Much of the route of Highway 35, extending close to the river between Prairie du Chien and Hager City, has already been reconstructed or otherwise improved by the state highway department. The highway department has already bought scenic easements, which protect roadside scenic values, along about 50 miles of that road section. During the next two years, according to the department, easements along an additional 60 miles northward to Hager City will be purchased.

Existing highways from Prairie du Chien southward and from Hager City north run some distance from the river.

Relocate Roads
The new Mississippi River Parkway Planning committee recently announced that it has asked state and U.S. government highway officials, with the National Park Service, to accelerate studies involving the possible

The Three Species of Trout in Wisconsin streams look alike, but there's a difference. These drawings show how to tell them apart. Knowing one from another will be especially important this season because regulations now allow no more than five rainbows in the total bag of ten trout. Studies have shown that while most fishermen can identify rainbows, about one-fifth have trouble with brookies and one-fourth with brown trout. The state trout season opens next Saturday.

Fish Survey Crews Planning Busy Schedule of Waupaca County Jobs

WAUPACA — The Wisconsin Conservation Department is again planning an extensive survey program to determine the fish population in lakes and streams.

In conjunction with the survey, the fisheries division also has scheduled fish planting operations, rough fish removal and chemical kills to prepare lakes for restocking.

The schedule of activities opened April 2 when Flume Creek in Waupaca County became the first operation for boom shocking as part of a trout survey.

Michael Primising, Waupaca County district fish manager, reported that Flume Creek, which has been planted a number of times, has many nice speckled trout.

The survey will be concluded Thursday.

White Lake
White Lake, located east of Waupaca on State 54, is scheduled for a seine and boom shock survey as soon as the ice melts. The lake, which is Waupaca county's second largest body of water, second only to Partridge Lake, near Fremont, suffered a severe winter kill.

Restocking operations at White Lake were started in March when a number of northern pike were planted there.

Black Otter Lake in Outagamie County is scheduled for the same treatment. The schedule for survey activities opened April 2 and will conclude Sept. 27. It covers Waupaca, Sheboygan, Marquette, Dodge, Washington, Portage, Door, Kewaunee, Manitowish, Calumet, Fond du Lac and Waupaca counties.

Each year, specific lakes and streams are scheduled for the survey with a broad plan of three to five-year rotation so that each lake and stream will be tested every five years.

Feed Conditions
Fisheries wardens check on natural reproduction of the various species and determine relative numbers in relation with others. They also study the condition of the fish to determine if they are getting enough feed.

Results of the surveys determine the manipulation program, such as stocking various species, removal of species, chemical control and harvesting. Survey teams also check the physical and chemical properties of the lakes to find out how conditions are for spawning, oxygen and temperature.

If the temperature is right, the lakes and streams are classified as suitable for cold water plantings such as trout or warm water plantings such as northern pike. "In general there are some very nice fishing lakes in Waupaca County, based on the results of these surveys," Primising said.

The Chain O'Lakes is the only series of lakes in the county where muskies are found. Each year there are a couple reports of catches but there are an equal number of reports that the big fish have been killed by motorboat propellers. There also are some big brown trout and northern pike in the Chain.

Plant Trout

Conservation crews each year move rough fish from Weyauwega Pond May 28, 29 and 31 and the trout have been tagged and are later caught on the Emmons Creek.

The survey has indicated that trout do not sustain themselves in the Chain O'Lakes. Predator fish, such as walleyes and northern pike, hold down the population.

Survey results show that School Section lake in the Town of Union, Graham Lake, and the Iola and Manawa Mill Ponds are tops in fishing. They have largemouth bass, northern pike and a big crop of pan fish.

In addition to White Lake, other Waupaca lakes have been classified as having a severe winter kill. They are Silver Lake, Scandinavia: Crystal Lake, Town of Dayton: Hatch Lake, Town of Iola: Campbell's Lake, Town of Helvetia: Kenney Lake, Town of DuPont, and the Ogdensburg Mill Pond.

The Marion and Clintonville ponds suffered a partial kill, but due to the water from the Pigeon River, the kill was not complete.

Primising also has disappointing news for anglers who were planning to invade the Hartman Creek refuge area, west of the Chain O'Lakes. Although the area has been converted into a state park, there will be no fishing there for a number of years. The area, which is several hundred acres, is being used by the department to rear largemouth bass, northern pike and pan fish for restocking winter kill and chemically killed lakes.

The Schedule
The schedule for the 1962 summer survey for Waupaca county is as follows:

Deep seine, Casey Lake, start-series of lakes in the county June 1: boom shock, Bailey Lake, July 9: boom shock, Vesey Lake, July 10: boom shock, Twin Lakes, July 11: boom shock, Jones Lake, July 12: and boom shock, Bass Lake, Sept. 20.

Feeder stream surveys are scheduled in the county Aug. 30 to 31 and Sept. 4 to 14.

Two crews are scheduled to remove rough fish from Weyauwega Pond May 28, 29 and 31 and the trout have been tagged and

Plants Help Improve Looks Strong Groupings On Corners Make Good Appearance

Foundation plantings at the entrance of your house, skillfully chosen and strategically placed, help bring out its best architectural features and help make it a part of the surrounding landscape.

The basic rule for foundation plantings is to develop strong groupings which will be colorful at least three seasons of the year. Supplement these groupings with accent plantings placed at either side of the doorway. In general, use plants where strong vertical lines of the architecture meet ground, and use plants in pots, planters, and along the wall to create special effects.

Build Corners
To build up corners and the driveway, choose upright, rounded pointed evergreens, which are different in form, color, and texture, such as junipers, yews, and cedars. Support these plants with accent groupings of low-growing, spreading forms, such as Pfitzer juniper or spreading Japanese yew.

For striking color accents, add a few annuals and perennials in pots, along the wall, or in front of a shrub hedge.

Location of the main roads. In these two sections to bring them closer to the stream and thus extend the "Great River Road" a mile. Nelson told the new statutory planning group at its organization session here that the department of resource development is now plotting "scenic corridors" along the river in the undeveloped portions for the assistance of the conservation commission in scenic land purchases and the guidance of the highway department in the scenic easement program.

WHY, ask the earnest inquirers after wpat answers, do we have these dreadful holiday riots—the spring-vacation troubles at Fort Lauderdale, Fla., the riots in New England and California last Labor Day, the Newport Jazz Festival riots of recent years?

Why do masses of college students, high-school students, and other young people masquerading as students converge on holiday resorts? Why, once too many of them have crowded together, do they drink, fight, destroy property and, in short, riot?

Is it a sign of social decadence? Are we witnessing a breakdown in law and order? Are these stampedes, as one psychiatrist has suggested, evidence of youth's search for status?

No simple answer suffices. Probably as long as university towns have existed, the conflict between Town and Gown, between the sober citizenry who have to work and the privileged youth who have "nothing to do but study," has intermittently broken into the open.

At best, the responsible authorities of the university and the community try to divert student shenanigans into more acceptable channels or they ruefully tolerate them; at worst, they combat them, turning simple gaiety into rioting.

In English-speaking countries, where all students are treated as minors without rights, these high jinks usually are meaningless pranks. On the European continent, in Latin America, and in Asia, the conflict between students and authority more often takes political forms. Students demonstrate for the Right or the Left, protest against visiting politicians or the continued presence of foreigners, demand the release of political prisoners. A mass gathering may overflow into a riot, and such a riot can be a spark that ignites a larger fire.

TODAY'S U.S. student riots are pranks run wild, fanned by mass-media publicity and the mobility of our population into activities that involve not a few hundred but many thousands of students. In the past, each college could think up its own troublemaking activities each spring, and the fracas with the local police or the fire department ended with a few fines, a night in jail, at most a few expulsions.

But today any such activity is given national attention and spreads like wildfire. If the troublemakers use something difficult to get—like the snowballs which Yale rioters threw at the police—their activities may not be copied. But if the troublemakers provide an easy model and if publicity provides a detailed description, the new activity may spread with incredible speed, as the panty-raid riots did.

If the troublemaking can be tied in with a place (Fort Lauderdale) or a date (the spring

WHAT MAKES COLLEGE KIDS CUT UP?

Holidays and collegians often add up to riots, but a renowned anthropologist says it's old stuff —what is new is our habit of popularizing the ridiculous holidays; Labor Day), the ensuing activities are all the easier to promote. The styles are old. The scale, the nationwide participation, the numbers of participants—all these can be attributed directly to the magnifying effects of our modern-day ability to communicate ideas (good and bad) fast and far and also our ability to hop in a car and "see what's going on."

By MARGARET MEAD

Bored vacationing students rioted in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., in 1961. This year the community took constructive countermeasures with dances, games, and parties.

As on all occasions of this kind, the trouble is aggravated by some who pretend to disapprove as well as by others—the merchants and the police—whose duty it is to prevent trouble by making adequate preparations for a crowd. Some merchants close their shops and try to offer constructive channels for youthful energies; others, however, order extra truckloads of beer. Sometimes the police disappear, giving the excitable young a sense of false security.

At other times, the police arrive in such large numbers and so well-armed that they appear to be encouraging a dangerous game of cops and robbers. Sometimes one side or the other misconstrues the situation, and the result is bloodied heads and filled jails.

But a riot can also be avoided. On a Midwest campus the dean of women filled a wheelbarrow with girls' panties, wheeled it into the center of the campus, and called out: "Come and get them!" At that moment, the fun evaporated. There were no takers; there was no riot.

ONE OTHER element enters into riots. This is the desire to effect action immediately instead of working toward some goal. We see this when idealists mass at state capitals or in Washington to protest about something instead of settling down soberly to win adherents. Philosopher Bertrand Russell forcing British authorities to send him to jail and the masses of mothers with baby carriages insistently parading the streets in a "peace strike" are not unrelated to the masses of students invading seaside resorts and the masses of younger teen-agers following their example.

But overshadowing all factors, penetrating everywhere is our tendency to popularize the ridiculous, blowing up the size of what happens, eagerly reporting what one part of the world is doing and what the rest may be doing next.

As long as publicity, the forces of law and order, the commercial interests who profit by the sale of gas and beer and hot dogs, continue to endorse student high jinks there will be more riots—and more serious ones.

But one sober, imaginative effort to prevent them, to reduce the whole thing to ridicule and put it in context, would be enough. Like the dean of women with her wheelbarrow, one adequate, extravagant, mocking answer would help deflate the picture, and this particular form of rioting would become history. Whatever the stripes on the top of the socks, the kids who tried it would no longer be reported as "swinging."

The Easter That Changed

The widow of a beloved minister faced this feast alone and in despair; then from a pile of papers

HAVE YOU EVER dreaded Easter and wanted to flee it? I did that spring of 1949.

Early in that year, I had been happy in my snug little world. Then came a January morning when that world lay in pieces at my feet. My husband Peter Marshall was dead. Acute coronary occlusion, the doctor said. A single blood clot—a man's life snuffed out at 46.

As spring approached, I could scarcely bear the thought of Easter. I could never have analyzed why I resisted even the general atmosphere of gladness. Would not my small son's fun in coloring Easter eggs, the gay shop windows, the usual triumphant church music merely mock my grief, throw into greater contrast my sense of loss?

It was in this mood that I plunged into frenzied activity. A month earlier I had agreed to the editing of a book of Peter's sermons. So now I plunged into the task of sorting out the sermon manuscripts.

I remember that I chose for the task my favorite spot in our Washington home—the sunroom. There the windows were filled with shelves of colored pressed glass which Peter and I had collected during our summers on Cape Cod. The spring sunshine—filtering through the cranberry, amber, amethyst, cobalt blue, opalescent glass—laid patterns of color on the floor and across the piles of papers.

There were some 600 sermon manuscripts. I was trying to divide them into types: Biblical word pictures, those with a national or patriotic flavor, sermons on prayer, special-occasion ones, and so on.

Suddenly beneath my hand was the last Easter sermon that Peter had preached. Vividly I remembered that service. What a happy day it had been! And now? Bitterness seeped in. Shut off that train of thought, a part of my mind warned. Get on with your work.

I was about to toss the sermon onto the special-occasion pile when my eyes were drawn like a magnet to the typed words before me. Soon I was caught up in the thoughts that flowed from line to line:

Jerusalem had been anything but impressed with the way Christ's disciples had conducted themselves during the arrest and trial of the Nazarene.

His followers had certainly not been courageous. In fact, they had all either fled to save their lives or followed at a great distance. Simon Peter was so fearful that he had even denied having known the Nazarene. Then, after their Master's death, the band of disciples had stayed in hiding with the doors locked.

Yet after that first Easter morning, we find these same men, who had been so timid, frightened, ineffective, now preaching openly, with no fear of anyone. Their personal conviction rings like a bell through the pages of the New Testament, steady and strong:

"That which we have heard with our own ears, seen with our own eyes, handled with our own hands, declare we unto you."

And of what were they so sure? That Jesus Christ was alive—but no spiritual resurrection this—not just the perpetuation of a dead man's ideas.

Furthermore, they were saying these things in the same city that had sought to destroy the Christ, right at the door of the stronghold of the priests, a thousand paces from the tomb where Christ had lain.

Christ's enemies would have given anything to have refuted their claims. One thing would have done it—so simply. If only they could have produced a body. But they could not.

So they tried everything they could think of to silence these fishermen, tax collectors, farmers, carpenters, shepherds—imprisonment, threats, scourgings, stonings, and death.

Nothing succeeded in silencing them.

Now it takes a very great conviction to change men so drastically. Men do not persist in a lie, or even a delusion, if every time they insist on its truth they are driving nails into their own coffins.

A self-hypnotic illusion may sustain men for a time—but not for long. In the long run, an illusion does not build character strong enough to withstand great hardship, great persecution. Only the bedrock truth can do that!

Moreover, men who are merely fooling themselves do not become purposeful men, well-integrated men with self-sustaining qualities of leadership, as these erstwhile timid apostles became.

For now they had boldness and courage, and they had power—qualities that they had not had until after the first Easter morning.

They now felt they still were in touch with Him—in a different way, yes, but in a more powerful way. They knew that He was with them still, even as He had promised that He would be.

And you, too, may have that same fellowship with the Risen Christ. Indeed you will not believe the fact of the Resurrection for yourself until the living Christ lives in your own heart. When you have in your own life that sense of His nearness and His power—ah, then you, too, will know! To you there may come the same wonderful changes that have come to other men and women down through the years.

This is the reality that can be yours. This comradeship with the Resurrected Christ through His spirit is available now—to the man in the street, to the government clerk, to the anxious mother, to the confused schoolboy or schoolgirl.

Your life may be guided by Christ. Your problems may be solved by His wisdom. Your weakness may be turned into strength by His help. Your struggles may become victories by His grace. Your sorrows may be turned into joy by His comfort.*

SORROWS turned into joy? It was as if Peter were speaking to me. Suddenly I realized that I had been refusing to let God turn my sorrow into joy. I had been shutting Him out. I had not really believed that God could give me a new life without Peter—a happy life.

For weeks I had been walking unseeing through the world. Grief had blinded me, deafened me. So now I had to stop dreading Easter, go to meet it with an open heart.

My newly opened eyes were rewarded. That year, spring burst upon the nation's capital with unusual beauty. The forsythia was more brilliant than I had ever seen it. The azaleas were punctuation marks of flaming coral and cerise. Out past the creamy whiteness of the Lincoln Memorial, the Tidal Basin was adrift in pale pink blossoms. There were fairy-feathered avenues of pink and white dogwood.

And my heart responded. I discovered in myself a new kind of peace. It was the peace that comes not from the absence of any difficulties but from knowing that happiness is possible in spite of difficulties.

By Easter Sunday morning the triumphant music of the massed choirs echoed my own gladness. In my heart I could kneel before the Risen Christ and promise Him to try to live in the present—joyfully; tell Him that I was finally willing to put myself in the stream of His creative purposes for me—though at that moment I had no idea what those purposes were.

And in my mind's eye I saw again Peter's sermon lying on the floor of the sunroom with the light dancing across the words:

You will not believe the fact of the Resurrection for yourself until the living Christ lives in your own heart. When you have in your own life that sense of His nearness and His power—ah, then you, too, will know!

Now I believed. Now I knew.

The risks were great—violence, loss of business, crushing defeat; the possible reward—a clean city; these men chose to take the risks

Editors' Note: This week the 75th anniversary of the American Newspaper Publishers Association comes to a climax as the group holds its annual convention in New York City. In tribute to the ANPA, Family Weekly presents this dramatic example of how newspapers and citizen action can bring about better government.

The story happened in Utica, N.Y., and though it is familiar to Uticans it is being retold to Family Weekly's 5½ million readers across the country.

NEAL BINTZ, managing editor of the Utica Daily Press, picked up a jangling telephone one damp spring day in 1958.

"This is just to tell you," a muffled voice said, "that you're going to get a working over if you keep printing those crime stories." The caller rang off before the startled editor could reply.

At almost the same moment, in another part of the city, the wife of Gil Smith, managing editor of the Utica Observer-Dispatch, opened an envelope without a return address. What she read left her ashen. The letter was an obscene tirade with threats directed against her husband. She forwarded it to the police—and wondered if they could be relied upon to protect her family.

A few nights later, Mason C. Taylor, executive editor of the morning and evening sister papers, heard an intruder jimmying the back door of his home. Armed with a No. 5 golf iron and mindful of violent threats against his staff, he crept into the darkened kitchen. The intruder, however, fled into the darkness. "Just a kid prowling," he told his wife—and hoped that he was right.

At an editorial meeting the next day, the newsmen agreed that the threats added up to one thing. "We've finally got them worried," Taylor said, grimly aware of the irony of his remark. "But who are 'they'?"

Utica, a peaceful city of 100,000, once known as a textile center, had gone through a "loom to boom" transition after World War II. Preoccupied with jobs in new industries, new homes, and raising families, its residents had become apathetic toward police laxity, political bossism, gambling, and growing corruption. Their newspapers had warned of these things, but no one seemed to be listening.

Then came the state police raid on the famous "summit meeting" of alleged Mafia leaders at Apalachin, N.Y., during which three Uticans were seized. Investigators speculated that Utica may have become upstate headquarters for a national crime syndicate.

The papers launched a no-holds-barred attack on prostitution, gambling, and the apathy of public officials. At first, city hall, vice lords, and the gamblers laughed it off. By May, 1958, the laughs had turned to threats.

"We weren't sure at first whether big-time hoods had moved in or we were dealing with local muscle," said Taylor. "Our best guess was that the syndicate had started to take over but the nationwide crackdown after Apalachin had sent them to cover. Apparently we guessed right."

The police chief retired, after admitting to a legislative committee he had never raided a disorderly house in his 20 years of service. His deputy resigned.

The bosses countered by hitting at the newspapers' life blood—advertising. They tried to organize a merchants' boycott. "They're giving Utica a bad name," the bosses told businessmen. The boycott failed. So did attempts to bring a Justice Department antitrust suit against the papers. Next came a proposed tax on advertising, so blatantly punitive it was howled down.

WHEN REPORTERS Jack Germond, Tony Vella, and William Lohden began probing municipal purchasing, officials cried, "You're disrupting office routine," and sought to bar them. They persisted, and found that while the city was buying truck tires in large volume at above retail prices, they weren't showing up on city vehicles. Private firms were being paid as much as $10 a car space to clear snow from parking areas. Payrolls were loaded with drones, politicians' relatives, and cronies.

The hornets' nest stirred by the newspapers and a resulting grand-jury investigation convinced Averell Harri-man, then governor, that Utica needed a special prosecutor to supplant the local district attorney. He appointed Robert E. Fischer; top investigator for Fischer was Sgt. Ed Crosswell, who had gained fame as the raider of the Apalachin mobster meeting.

Fischer's investigators blanketed Utica, and what they found in courtroom evidence vindicated the bitter fight of the two newspapers. The deputy chief of police, a captain, and three detectives were fingered by prostitutes (who also said they themselves had contributed handsomely to political fund raising) in conspiring to protect brothels—and were convicted. Fischer's men also swooped down on bookie joints, and operators were caught with receipts in hand.

Thwarted in all their reprisals, the political bosses banked on their machine winning the November election, as it had for 14 years.

But a group of "young Turks," moved to action by the newspaper exposés, selected car salesman Frank Dulan as reform candidate.

The machine took no chances and attacked the newspapers in below-the-belt fashion.

Mason Taylor, said the hatchmen, was anti-Italian (Utica has a large Italian population); he also was anti-Jew, anti-Catholic, anti-Protestant, depending on who was listening. The newspapers had "perverted the truth, influenced jurors, defamed innocent persons."

Whether the campaign, waged by whispers and a pre-election party "newspaper," was effective was impossible to gauge. Only ballot counting could tell.

The voting was quiet and heavy. First returns showed it would be a close election, and the loser could pretty well be sure his influence in Utica was ending. Taylor admits to being a little nervous as he drove back to work that evening. Suddenly a bulletin flashed over his car radio: "Latest returns indicate that Frank Dulan has won an upset victory . . ."

THE EDITOR stopped his car and sat for a few minutes savoring the news.

Dulan's victory was partial, a 3,500-vote plurality with the city council still in control of the machine. But the cleanup campaign had been endorsed by the people, and the war was no longer one-sided. Over a period of three years, 23 indictments and 21 convictions were obtained by Fischer. The resource of civic pride, particularly in the long-dormant League of Women Voters and the new Citizens Association of Greater Utica, brought about a redistricting of city wards and an end to gerrymandering.

The upheaval started cleanups in both political parties; young insurgents, for example, began to campaign to oust the machine bosses who had disgraced their organization, and just recently succeeded in electing Lawrence T. Gilroy, a 38-year-old insurance executive, as county chairman.

AS FOR the Observer-Dispatch and the Daily Press, they won journalism's highest honor, the Pulitzer Prize, "for disinterested and meritorious public service."

When votes were counted in the November, 1961, election, Utica showed it liked the new look. Dulan was re-elected by a large majority, and his party took control of the city council. "Sin City" was yesterday's news.

So was citizen apathy. The local Chamber of Commerce now offers a practical-politics course. In three years, more than 350 persons have completed it—and put the lessons to use.

Civic vigor brought business vigor, too. John Grier, a Utica executive, says: "When a community is well run, it keeps the cost of doing business down. This makes it possible for industry to compete, and this, in turn, creates more jobs."

As for editor Taylor, he looks back on the campaign like this: "No newspaper wants to stir up dirt about its home town, but in most cities the newspaper is the only protection people have when local law breaks down. We hope we never win another Pulitzer Prize if it means putting certain aspects of our city in a bad light. No editor would—but no editor would hesitate, either, if corruption were driving out honest business and honest citizens."

We Escaped

As bullets sprayed the water about the icy waters of a canal—to freedom

Editors' Note: The wall that seals off East Berlin is effective. Ninety-five percent of the men, women, and children who have tried to escape since it was erected last August have failed. Yet attempts continue. This is the story of a recent—and successful—attempt. Karl Ernst is not the author's real name; that must be withheld to protect relatives still behind the wall.

EAST BERLIN'S wall of shame and tears cannot be imagined. You must see it as I have with border guards patrolling its 28-mile length of ghastly bricks, concrete, and barbed wire.

Only then could you know why escape seems impossible—and only then could you understand the feeling that compels an imprisoned people to try to scale the eight-foot barrier in full view of Communist submachine guns.

My wife Erika and I had talked for years of fleeing to the West. Our apartment was only a few yards from the American sector. We could have walked across the street to freedom at any time. But when the door of escape is open, it is easy to put off such a decision.

Then, in the early-morning hours of Aug. 13, 1961, the door slammed shut.

The evening before, we had been in West Berlin celebrating my wife's birthday with friends. On our way home after midnight, we noticed nothing alarming. Four Vopos (border policemen) were standing around the check point looking bored as usual.

But two hours later Erika and I were startled from our sleep by the ringing of the telephone. A man who worked with me was calling. He said: "Karl, the boss wants you to assign me a car from the motor pool. I have to install a telephone line at the sector border. Do you have any idea why?"

Switching on the radio, I tuned in RIAS (Radio in the American Sector), which we always listened to, and heard the incredible news. By Communist decree, all travel and communication with West Berlin were cut off. East German troops and tanks were stationed at strategic positions to enforce the order, and Soviet tanks and infantry units had ringed the city to discourage an uprising.

Erika and I knew we could postpone our escape no longer. The question now was: how can we get out?

The first thing we did was to send for our seven-year-old daughter Helga, who was staying with her grandparents in the country. Then I took a "vacation" from my job as telephone repairman and began searching for a place along the border where we could escape.

Every day I covered a new district. For weeks I searched for some gap, some rent in a fence, some unpatrolled garden, thick-et, or cemetery. But I found none.

I had almost given up hope of escape when I played my last hunch. Near our apartment there was a large factory compound that bordered the Teltow Canal. The 15-foot-deep waterway forms part of the frontier with the American sector. Although the Communists had strung a barbed-wire fence six feet high along the canal's bank, I still felt it could somehow be used as an escape route.

Dressed in my telephone repairman's uniform and carrying my tool kit, I visited the factory area one morning as if on a routine job. The guard let me enter the grounds without difficulty.

C LIMBING a staircase in a building that jutted over the canal, I found what I was looking for. It was a window on the water, large enough for a man to squeeze through. Its individual panes were framed by metal bars, but there was a center opening 25 inches wide and 40 inches high which they had forgotten to seal off.

I went home and told Erika that we would try our escape the next day. We would leave everything behind except our life's savings of 800 East German marks (about $40), which I planned to stuff into a bag and fasten beneath my clothing.

Early the next morning, I left the house alone to avoid arousing suspicion. Later, my wife and daughter followed.

At the factory gate, the guard I had talked to the day before waved me by with a nonchalant good morning. Erika and Helga were following about 75 feet behind me. As they approached the gate, the guard asked Erika where she wanted to go. She told him firmly, "I want to visit the foreman of our street." She aroused no suspicion. Foreman is a Communist weasel word for neighborhood informer.

from East Berlin

By KARL ERNST as told to Helen Zotos

Clutching my child, I leaped into the icy water. Erika came hurtling down after us

The guard signaled her to go through.

I met Erika and Helga at the window. The previous day I had carefully pinpointed its location for my wife on a rough sketch I had drawn.

I was to jump first. Opening the window, I climbed onto the sill. Erika handed me the child.

Helga had been brave so far. But she had never learned to swim, and when she saw the water churning 18 feet below, she began to cry and scream.

AS LONG AS I LIVE I shall never forget clutching my child to my chest and leaping through the air into the freezing water. Erika came hurtling down after us.

Then the worst happened. The three of us had hardly hit the water when machine-gun bullets began slamming into the canal all around us. Helga gripped me so tightly that my body ached. I was almost as terrified as she was, but I kept my eyes fixed on the shore ahead and swam on.

We had agreed that once we started there would be no turning back. We would get through singly if not together. I struggled on through the icy water, dragging Helga under one arm. She grew heavier and heavier each moment. I felt my strength giving way. Fifty yards to freedom seemed an eternity away. But I numbly clawed at the water and somehow inched my way forward.

Suddenly the western shore drew near. Friendly hands and arms came reaching toward Helga and me. "Hurry," voices said, "they are still firing guns over there." With my last ounce of energy, I flung Helga toward our rescuers and then sank back into the water.

Later, in the hospital, I learned that Erika had made it safely, too.

As this is written, Erika, Helga, and I are at Marienfelde, the West Berlin reception center for refugees, waiting to be flown into West Germany. My wife and I are still young enough to start our lives anew and to forget past horrors.

God willing, Helga will forget, too. But right now she is down the hall playing "Flight" with four other refugee children. Two of them are the Vopos, the stairway landing is the border, and beyond that is the West. Whoever is slapped twice on the back by the Vopos is dead. "Flight" is a children's game, 1962-style!

Dressed-up Easter Eggs!

By Henrietta Towne

Would you like to dress up some of the Easter eggs you've colored? Beautifully decorated Easter eggs come from some of the countries overseas, but you can do almost as well with the contents of a sewing box, odd items from a desk drawer, or things from a box of old hats and trimmings. You will need a bottle of glue, too.

Put newspapers over a table, spread out all the things you want to use, and let's start with a turquoise blue egg. Paste two bands of 1/2-inch rick-rack braid around it (see drawing). Right on top paste a tiny, silly flower, or stick gummed circle reinforcements (the kind for loose-leaf notebooks) in a band around your egg. Add bits of lace, bows of narrow ribbon (or sequins and beads) to create one-of-a-kind Easter eggs. See what you can do. It's fun!

Fan Eggs-actly!

By Dee Scarborough

For this Easter-party game, you need a dining table marked with a center line. Two groups of players armed with fans stand on opposite sides of the table. A blown egg is fanned hard by both sides. If it drops off the table on your opponents' side, you score a point. Don't touch the egg while the play is on. Good fanning!

I was just thinking...

ON THIS EASTER morning, a woman will sing in her church choir.

This music will not be half so wondrous as her faith.

She will see the lilies at the altar and find them not half so beautiful as the faces of her children.

On my desk is the letter she wrote me three years ago. I have kept it, waiting for the postscript I knew would be written.

Her letter said:

"My husband died much sooner than we'd anticipated. I'd still believed the day before that he could pull through.

"I can't grieve as deeply perhaps as some people because he suffered so terribly that I prayed God would take him. Feeling that way, I can't regret his dying. Rather, I regret the things he must miss and those the children, too, will miss.

"We've been so fortunate, though. This past year he and I found a happiness and a depth to our relationship that I know many never touch upon. Many, many times we told each other how happy we were. What more can a person want or wish to remember?

"The only difficult thing now is a feeling of drifting that I can't seem to shake. Things seem so pointless. I realize, however, that it is only a matter of time before God answers this need and shows the way..."

THE WOMAN in the choir has written her own postscript. In these years, she became both father and mother to her children. Her tears were shed in secret. She faced the future with new friends, new work. Recently, with fearful hesitation, she spent a pleasant evening with an old friend.

The friendship grew and deepened, and one day it was her son who asked him to become their father, and he did. The core of her sorrow shattered into joy.

Today she will look out into the congregation and see her family, and her clear voice will swell with beauty.

She will not forget the young man who died. His features live forever in the faces of her children. His memory lives forever in her heart. But beside her now walks the husband of her maturity. To all of them have come peace.

Yet she already knew something of this three years ago when she wrote to me.

She said: "God answers this need and shows the way."

Jesus said it another way: I am the resurrection, and the life.

IS THERE SUCH A THING AS A SPECIAL LAXATIVE FOR WOMEN?

So many women are asking this important question.

The answer is—yes. A remarkable new medical discovery called Dioctyl Sodium Sulfosuccinate has now made possible a special new laxative for a woman's sensitive system. We call it Correctol®.

Correctol works two ways. First, its miracle ingredient takes advantage of the natural moisture in your system. Second, its mild laxative acts gently but most effectively. Working together, Correctol's two active ingredients give a woman more natural relief than any ordinary laxative can.

Correctol is recommended any time in a woman's life, even during and after pregnancy.

Try gentle, hospital-tested Correctol... bearing the Good Housekeeping Seal. Ask your druggist for Correctol.

YOU can dodge death, disguise it, ignore it. But sooner or later you must die. Alone. How will you face it? As the final end? Gateway to an indefinite "beyond?" Christians say death's finality is defeated for them by the resurrection of Jesus Christ.

AFRAID TO DIE?

Christians affirm He offers the way through death—not a way around it. Christ makes death a door—not to a wispy existence of the soul, but to a fresh, new life that embodies the whole person... the resurrection and the life everlasting. More complete than this life, with the ultimate joy of real fellowship with God and man.

Christians confront death by uniting with God now, through Christ. And they find not only bold readiness for death, but new zest and joy for all of life. How to die? The question is one of life and death. Request this free booklet, AFRAID TO DIE?

THE VERDICT IS YOURS

BY EDGAR PENTON

HOLLYWOOD — In the history of modern drama, focusing the action on a courtroom has always been a pretty certain way of winning audiences. The success of fictional legal series on television is additional proof of the device's appeal.

So, it is no surprise that "The Verdict Is Yours" attracts an estimated ten million viewers who tune in the CBS-TV program five afternoons a week, Monday through Friday.

Since "The Verdict Is Your" had its premiere in September 1957, it has consistently been among the top ten daytime shows, winning audiences by carefully balancing dramatic demands and legal standards.

Many Obstacles

What distinguishes "Verdict" from other courtroom shows that have come and gone from television? How does it meet the requirements of its audience and what are the obstacles—obstacles no other show faces—that it overcomes?

To producer Bertram B. Berman, a tall, soft-spoken midwesterner, "The Verdict Is Yours" is a success because it fulfills the needs of its viewers to become involved in great personal conflicts.

"There is a pre-sold interest in the courtroom," said Berman who majored in classics at the University of Cincinnati in the 1940's and is today still proficient in eight languages other than English.

Aware of the crucial issues which it handles daily, "Verdict" places the strongest possible emphasis on the authenticity of the performer and the production.

The lawyers are real lawyers, the judge is also a lawyer and, although the witnesses are actors and actresses, they are not acting in the usual sense of the word.

They have not memorized a single word of dialogue. They have been filled in on the background of the character they are portraying and from that point forward must ad lib or improvise their answers to each question as the attorney asks it.

They do not know what questions will be asked of them at any time.

Uninstructed Jury

Equally important to the authenticity of the show, according to Berman, is the work of Bill Stout who, as the courtroom commentator, interprets the day's testimony.

He indicates what is at stake, pointing out the meaning not only for the trial but for the viewer at home.

"We're not ashamed to say that Stout often sermonizes," Berman said. "But the way in which he handles it is a decided affirmative value for the show."

It wasn't until "Verdict" moved its base of operations to California in the summer of 1960 that Stout took over the monitoring of the courtroom action. Now in his early thirties, Stout had compiled an enviable reputation in Southern California as a newscaster on the local station, KNXT.

Not limiting his efforts to newscasts, Stout became even better known for his hour-long special news reports on such controversial subjects as capital punishment, narcotics, civil defense and juvenile delinquency winning a Sylvania Award, a First Award from the Associated Press and three Gold Mike awards from the Radio and Television News Club of Southern California.

Despite the presold interest in the courtroom, the emphasis on authenticity and the utilization of Stout's searing commentaries, "Verdict" has still had to overcome many an obstacle that would have felled a lesser show.

"Unlike the soap operas," Berman said, "Verdict" has no predictable format. And this is a serious problem. We have no out-and-out villain. The good and bad guys are not clearly drawn."

As in the classic story, "Rashomon," it is the interpretation of uncontested facts that creates the highly dramatic and emotional aspects of the show.

"If you were to hear only the prosecution side of the case there would be no question in your mind as to the guilt of the accused. Or if only the defense were heard, innocence would be unquestioned," Berman commented.

Affirmative Value

"Add to this the fact that our jury is completely uninstructed and must determine its verdict solely on the testimony it has heard and then it is easy to see the problem we face in keeping the audience.

"After all, daytime viewers have always liked to identify with the characters in a story. But in 'Verdict' they are always left with the uneasy feeling they may be rooting for the wrong guy," he remarked.

As if that weren't enough of an obstacle, it should also be remembered that a new case is docketed in the Overlook County courthouse, where all the action for "Verdict" is set, every five or six days.

This means viewers must periodically become acquainted with a whole new set of witnesses.

"There is no other such episodic show on television today," Berman said.

How do the actors take to their appearance on "Verdict"? "We love it," said the beautiful red-haired Patricia Barry, who has starred on nearly every major

Satirist Stan Has Big Idea—Promote Pictures With Truly Honest Ads

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Satirist Stan Freberg has come up with one of the most novel ideas yet to sell movies—honest advertising.

Freberg's biting wit made him an advertising tycoon a few years ago. He still pokes fun as he did on records but the only difference is that the victims now pay him directly for the jibes.

Frank Sinatra, more hep than most movie moguls, hired Freberg to plug "Sergeants 3." During production, one of the best kept secrets in the nation was the fact that this movie was a remake of "Gunga Din" set in the old West instead of Kipling's India.

But when the advertising campaign was launched, unorthodox Freberg based his whole campaign on what press agents previously had tried to hush.

Honesty Paid

The picture was a hit and Sinatra told United Artists that Freberg's humorous but honest campaign deserved much of the credit.

So UA hired Freberg for "The Road to Hong Kong," latest fling of Bob Hope and Bing Crosby.

"I'm a satirist," explains Freberg, "and all satire must be based on obvious truths. So when I saw the movie last week, I was amazed to find that the movie has little to do with Hong Kong. It's mostly based on a flight to the moon.

"I came up with the idea of a campaign which asked: Why in the hell wasn't this picture called 'Road to the Moon?'"

"Everybody liked the idea but the producer. Then I found out that Hope and Producer Norman Frank feuded all during the movie on the same idea. Hope fought to make it 'The Road to the Moon.'

"The producer still doesn't like the campaign but he's going along with it because Bing, Bob and UA all like it. Me, I'm the innocent guy in the middle."

Freberg's witty but bitingly honest approach to advertising has quadrupled his income since his strictly performing days.

For consultation alone, he says, his retainer fee is in five figures.

A prosecution witness, played by Karen Sharpe, discusses a piece of evidence with the People's attorney, Jim Wilson, in preparation for an episode on CBS-TV's popular "The Verdict Is Yours."

dramatic show on television and was on "Verdict" last year.

"This show gave me an opportunity to start from scratch with a character, to create something out of my own emotional complex. This is the best dramatic exercise an actor can find," she said.

Miss Barry is just one among many top Hollywood names who have appeared in the last year.

Even Christina Crawford, daughter of the famed actress Joan Crawford, has been on "Verdict," echoing Miss Barry's sentiment that the show provided a great training ground for learning dramatic skills.

Take It Seriously

How seriously the actors take their roles is demonstrated by the reaction of veteran character actor Joe Bernard when he appeared in a recent trial.

As the defendant in the case, Bernard fought hard to convince the jury that he was innocent of the charge of arson and attempted murder.

As the jury filed back after reaching a decision, Bernard waited tensely and then heard the words "not guilty." He broke into a broad smile.

But a moment later, the jury foreman said that he had misread the slip of paper in his hand. The defendant was guilty.

Bernard was dazed, he was crushed to put it mildly. He rushed up to producer Berman and cried "What did I do wrong?" Reassured by Berman, Bernard persisted.

Two days later he called again, still shaken by the decision and firmly believing his credibility as an actor had been shattered.

Actors aren't the only ones to take "Verdict" seriously. In several hundred letters received each week there is always a handful that ask if the writer can hire the lawyer who has just won the case, extend sympathy to defendants, ask how long a girl adjudged guilty will have to stay in a detention home.

One letter writer in St. Louis beseeched Bill Stout to try to save a marriage, dramatized in a particular trial as having split, causing a child to be kept from his mother.

Viewer Pleased

A viewer in Seattle, Wash., wrote expressing pleasure that a particular defendant had been found innocent and hope that he didn't have to return to prison as a parole violator because "he has suffered enough."

Perhaps the intensity of viewer interest can be related to the balance of guilty and not guilty decisions during the five years "Verdict" has been on CBS.

In some 183 cases, the jurors have found for the plaintiff 94 times and returned verdicts of not guilty 81 times. On eight other occasions cases have been either settled out of court, charges dropped, reconciliations effected or divorces refused.

If you remember that these decisions by the jurors, then it is easy to see that the quality of "Verdict" merits the honors it has received, including the Gavel Award of the American Bar Association.

As Berman remarked, "The Verdict Is Yours" dramatizes the American principle of a government under law where the great and the small have redress before a jury of their peers."

Judge Philip Edwards and the jury wait outside the Overlook County Courtroom awaiting their "cue" in a case enacted on the CBS-TV daytime show "The Verdict Is Yours."

Don Vorpahl, who writes, produces and distributes the series, selects tape from over 300 in his office. Another 300 reels may be scattered across the country at radio stations and in the mails.

That was in 1958.

It told the amusing story of a week's work creating a modest new radio series, "Music from Lawrence College."

Today, four years later, from a tiny office in Lawrence's new Music-Drama Center, stream miles of magnetic tape to radio stations across the land—from Wheeling, to Coldwater, to Anchorage.

For 36 weeks each year, thousands of new and old listeners hear the Lawrence Choir exclaim, "Sing and Rejoice . . .", and then, "We present a program of 'Music from Lawrence College.'"

LAWRENCE PA

It began that year when Robert A. Peterson, a young Lawrence publicity department entrepreneur, visited a number of commercial radio stations while on his national travels.

His boss, Publicity Director Marguerite Schumann, had suggested that Lawrence's Conservatory of Music provided "one commodity in abundance" that might be exploited for public consumption. She assigned RAP to explore the field, and he flew into it furiously.

Finds Ready Market

Peterson found a ready market for Lawrence musical recordings (which didn't yet exist), and he and his boss quickly proposed the radio-tape idea to Lawrence President Douglas M. Knight. Knight, too, liked the possibilities, and soon, a skeletal group of 24 15-minute recorded programs went out to eight radio stations, mostly in Wisconsin.

From this "100" series grew new sets of programs annually, until today, 30 stations across the United States are beaming the latest "400" music series.

Among them are some real broadcasting muscles—11 stations of 50,000 watts, and 12 of 10,000 watts, plus Lawrence's own student-operated 10,500 watt FM station. Two others have 7,500 watts, three have 5,000, and one youngster puts out 1,000 watts of power. Thirteen of the list are FM broadcasters, and all were selected for their "fine music" reputations.

Biggest cities involved are Cleveland, Chicago, Milwaukee, Atlanta, San Francisco, Seattle, Miami, Pittsburgh, and Cincinnati. Eleven of the stations are in Wisconsin; in this area, WLFM, WNAM and WHKW (a State Network affiliate) carry the series to more than a quarter of a million potential Fox Valley listeners.

No Charge for Tapes

Stations receive the Lawrence tapes without charge, and program them as public service features. Each tape is created by the Lawrence publicity department from recordings made of student and faculty public recitals.

Production and distribution of the programs are the work of the college's music-drama publicist, Don Vorpahl, a 1955 graduate of the conservatory. Vorpahl took over Peterson's tape series job last summer, and turned out the latest set of programs, the "400" series.

MALE CLOTHES-UPS by BRAUER'S

NOBODY LIKES to discard a perfectly good suit jacket. We hope Jim C's lends itself to the purpose he has in mind. He writes:

"Through a confusing set of events, the coat of a gray ivy suit I own fits perfectly, but the pants don't. Would I be safe in wearing slacks with this coat or would it look odd?"

Not if it's in a tweed, shetland, flannel or other casual type fabric. Otherwise, much as we'd like to see you use it, combining an odd coat of a hard finished "sui" material with slacks could look that way.

To "High School Teacher" — Cuffless slacks are not a "student-only" style. If this idea appeals to you, go right ahead. Don't let your age stop you from trying it.

That little decorative item, a tie, seems to get M. J. hot under the collar. His complaint:

"Why must we be saddled with such uncomfortable things as ties? I don't know who started this custom, but they feel like a noose around the neck. Naturally, you won't agree!"

Only for one reason, J. M. We have an idea that it's too tight a collar, not your tie, that's the problem. An 'easy' collar, cut low in front will eliminate that noose feeling. Sceptical? We'll be happy to prove it.

FASHION NEWS — We often wonder what makes our blazer jackets so popular. Perhaps it's their simplicity — trim lines, rich deep tones, smooth texture — all adding up to an at-ease feeling. Stop in and slip one on. The moment you do, you'll think of plenty of other reasons why it belongs in your wardrobe!

Oh Incidentally . . . Brauer's are now open Monday and Friday 'til 9. Brauer's are located 226 W. College Ave., in the A.A.L. Building.

PRODUCES RADIO SERIES

He is now gathering music and script ideas for a "500" set. By mid-September, he will have written, produced, "sold" and distributed this new series.

Vorpahl, is not alone, however. A conservatory faculty member, Paul Hollinger, and his well-trained student helper, Al Dees, make the recordings. The college's audio consultant, Adrian Godshalk, gives endless technical assistance and advice. The four materials, and a marked up-grade in recording quality has repaid their efforts.

The entire operation appears to have settled into a smooth-flowing rhythm, and proof of their success is the willingness of major stations, and even networks to solicit and use their output. A few rare rejections have been traced to equipment weaknesses, and these are being eliminated by the gradual addition of the very finest professional-quality components.

Quality High

One station recently described the Lawrence tapes as "the best-quality non-commercial recordings we've found."

The actual tape-production process is intricate. Vorpahl begins by auditioning and timing each newly recorded performance, and cataloguing each selection. About 10 minutes of the choicest music can be fitted into a program, the rest of the time taken by the script.

Scripts describe the Lawrence community — its academic, cultural, and social sides. Or, often, Fox Valley scenes are depicted — people, places, and ideas. Sometimes, he writes only musical program notes. In any case, "The style is definitely soft-sell," Vorpahl says.

Sent to Madison

This "raw" program content is then sent off to the Madison studios of the State Radio Network, where announcer, Ken Ohst, dubbs in his part, and music sequences and copying are completed. In time, these steps may be possible right on the Lawrence campus.

Meanwhile, stations will have been aligned, certain necessary administrative materials distributed, and mailing circuits set up. When the tapes are ready, they are simply mailed about these circuits in tandem, with a half-dozen "standby" tapes ready for emergencies.

"The long-distance telephone and the air-mail stamp are my two best friends when a tape is lost or accidentally erased," Vorpahl smiles.

His little office fairly bulges with magnetic tapes — large, small, old, new. Outdated ones are saved for new stations to audition, and some are salvaged to build small, incidental series, if requests crop up. The "100" series quality went begging, and those tapes were destroyed, but every other series has been kept, and will soon be in library use by students for their "historical musical examples."

The recording session and public performance are the heart of the series. Austin Bonchure and Helaine Muehlmeier doing a "take." Mailing boxes, labels, instructions and miles of magnetic ribbon are the tools of their trade.

Plan to Expand

Expansion ideas are many. More and bigger, and always, better stations are sought. The audition tapes are out humming away right now, with several juicy outlets in prospect. And as time allows, the publicity department will increase its seasonal tape broadcasts, as at Christmas and Easter.

Yes, things have already come a long way since the days when RAP and his boss went a hunting. And, as they say at the end of each tape, "We invite you to listen next week for 'Music from Lawrence College.'"

'Bargain Basement' TV Network in South Sets Pattern for the Nation

BY ROBERT McHUGH

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP)—In an abandoned supermarket here, a bold experiment in education has soared from a $60,000 gamble to the only state-wide closed circuit school-TV system in the world.

It has captured the imagination of the Ford Foundation, which is considering pouring millions of dollars into it.

And U.S. Commissioner of Education Sterling M. McMurrin has said the U.S. State Department ought to see what South Carolina is doing with educational-TV from its makeshift quarters where bargain basement schooling has replaced marked-down cans of orange juice.

The system, McMurrin said, "has great possibilities" in any program to educate backward peoples of the world.

In September of 1958, the educational-TV experiment was launched with a $60,000 appropriation for two courses in one high school in Columbia.

Quick Growth

The system now includes 68 schools in 21 counties. The goal is to cover all 46 counties by next September. The state legislature has before it bills appropriating $1,290,000 to make this possible.

South Carolina was ripe for a bold venture in education. Its antique school system staggered along for years without even a 12th grade in the high schools. In 1946, the 12th grade was added.

In 1951, a 3 per cent sales tax was inaugurated with proceeds earmarked for education. Despite these efforts, the illiteracy rate of 7.9 per cent exceeded every state in the union except Louisiana. South Carolina ranked 43rd nationally in average daily school attendance.

The number of registrants failing the 1959 selective service mental test—61.97 per cent—was higher than that of any other state. The drop-out and failure rate were among the nation's worst.

Yet South Carolina relatively had the highest number of school-age children of any state in the country.

Short Cut

School officials decided a shortcut to quality education was needed. Educational-TV had been tried by broadcasting from airplanes in the west. And in Hagerstown, Md., a small closed-circuit system had been operating for several years.

In the midst of TV technicians and cameras, Mrs. Rhoda F. Lugenbeel tapes an algebra lesson for South Carolina's educational-TV network. The closed circuit state-wide system is being used as a quick means of raising educational standards in the state. Started in 1958, the TV network now goes to 68 schools in 21 counties.

The South Carolina Educational-Television Commission found TV could be established statewide for $8,000 a school, or only $14 per pupil per year.

And John Cauthen, a member of the governing commission, says costs will decrease with newer and better equipment.

Also, he notes, E-TV can eventually cut the teacher load. A TV teacher with her counterpart in the classroom can handle many more pupils than a single classroom teacher.

In addition, Cauthen says, E-TV will eventually solve the teacher shortage and enable payment of higher salaries by reducing the number of those on the payroll.

TV Courses

At present, algebra, geometry, physical science, South Carolina history, and French are taught by television. They are taught by master teachers—the best in the state.

An art department provides elaborate visual aids far beyond the reach of any individual school.

As the system is expanded into each county, the E-TV commission pays for bringing in the cable and installing equipment in two schools. Other schools within the county may hook onto the cable. The cost varies, depending upon how close they are to the cable.

The system thus far includes, in addition to public schools, three independent colleges, one a Negro, church-supported institution, and one Roman Catholic parochial high school.

With six channels available the maximum potential here is 72 half-hour lessons during a school day.

Happy Marriage Helps Gordons Find Success

Gordon Gordon and Mildred Gordon credit their success as a writing team to a happy marriage. It is also fostered by the coincidence of their backgrounds and experience.

For example, Gordon Gordon's former work with the FBI is largely responsible for the ring of real about the Gordons' teleplay, "The Walls Have Eyes" to be presented on "Robert Taylor's Detectives" 7:30 p.m. Friday on Channels 4 and 5.

The story concerns the joint efforts of federal authorities and local police to track and capture counterfeit ring by using electronic detection—closed circuit television.

The Gordons met at the University of Arizona School of Journalism. Both subsequently became editors in Tucson—he for the Tucson Daily Citizen and she for Arizona Magazine. Both served as correspondents for press associations.

Their "whodunit" writing stems largely from Gordon Gordon's work as an FBI counter-espionage agent during World War II. Gordon says, "It isn't so much that we call upon this experience when we write, actually it prompted Mildred to initiate the fan mystery writing while I was off chasing spies."

Her first book won an award as one of the best of the year. Twelve years and 10 mystery books later the Gordons have the distinction of being widely read, not only in this country but all over the world.

Missa di Santa Cecilia (Alessandro Scarlatti); University of Utah Alumni Chorus, Utah Symphony and five soloists, Maurice Abravanel conducting. Vanguard BG 621 (Stereo BGS 5043).

Mass No. 6 in E-Flat Major (Schubert); St. Hegwig's Cathedral Choir and Berlin Philharmonic with five soloists, Erich Leinsdorf conducting. Capitol P 8579 (Stereo SP 8579).

Since the dawn of a distinctly "western" kind of music in the great cathedrals of medieval Christendom, setting the mass has fascinated composers of many centuries and religious convictions. The three examples here present a striking variety of musical techniques and styles across a period of 325 years.

Josquin Des Prez was the greatest composer of the turn of the 16th Century, Alessandro Scarlatti was one of the master craftsmen of 18th Century High Baroque and Schubert—well, he was Franz Schubert. Despite differences in time and technique, all approached the mass with a common idea. They wrote with dignity and sincerity, just as the performances of these recordings are presented.

Des Prez's "Missa Hercules" is a solid example of the skill of a master polyphonist of his day, made memorable in recording by the skilful use of long obsolete instruments for which the orchestral portions were originally written. The Scarlatti Mass is a leap forward of more than 200 years, featuring crashing choruses, and the masterly alternation of small and large ensembles.

Schubert's setting, completed shortly before his death in 1828, is typical of the early Romantic approach. In a cheerful key, it emphasizes a huge chorus (150 voices), only short solo passages and restrained use of orchestra.

All are recorded in brilliant, ringing sound. The Des Prez jacket notes are jumbled, the Schubert notes terse and the Scarlatti explanation the best of the three. Preferences are strictly a personal matter, together the three recordings are unique

The praiseworthy attempt to revive flutist Anton Reicha, lifelong friend of Beethoven and teacher of Liszt, Gounod and Frank, founders on the major error of pairing a competent craftsman with the genius of Mozart. Competition is too tough. The quintet, composed of first chair players of the Philadelphia Orchestra, presents a strong reminder that, although Ormandy's strings are world-renowned, the bread and butter boys aren't bad, either. David Johnson provides excellent and amusing notes.

'Mutiny' Mounted By Two Bands of Strolling Actors

BY WILLIAM GLOVER

NEW YORK (AP) — A mutiny against Broadway is on.

The rebels are two bands of players who have quit Broadway on separate hill-and-dale campaigns to restore old-fashioned traveling repertory.

Their ranks include such performers as Eva Le Gallienne, Faye Emerson, Rosemary Harris and Will Geer.

"We wanted to work in a wholly different kind of theater than Broadway now makes available," says Michael Dewell explaining how the National Repertory Theater began.

"Broadway is a terribly limited place today," declares Ellis Rabb, artistic director of the Association of Producing Artists.

Although closely parallel in basic purpose, the two groups sprang into being quite independently and have been roving without perceptible overlap since.

Repertory

National Repertory, with Miss Le Gallienne and Miss Emerson as stars, is now completing its initial season tour of 63 cities with Schiller's "Mary Stuart" and Maxwell Anderson's "Elizabeth the Queen."

The organization is an outgrowth of the National Phoenix outfit which sent "Once Upon a Mattress" on a 140-city circuit last year. It is co-managed by Dewell and Frances Ann Hersey.

The APA, which Rabb launched just a week after he and Miss Harris wed in 1960, has since done 18 diverse dramas in such scattered culture centers as New Hope, Pa., and Milwaukee.

Both groups travel by bus and truck (and occasionally, helicopter) and staunchly believe in maintaining high standards in appearance as well as performance.

"We've been able to do the kind of theater that we wanted, and to unite practical with artistic success," reports Rabb as he traces the career of APA.

Loft Start

With 75 friends contributing $2 weekly at the start ("just enough to pay for our mailing list") the fledgling group got together in a Greenwich Village loft.

"There were 60 of us from all parts of the theater—acting, writing, designing—and we knew it would be a gamble," the lanky Carnegie Tech graduate says. "And almost before the workshop was under way, things were moving faster than we planned."

An invitation to inaugurate a new theater in Bermuda switched the group from discussion to production.

"In the 24 months since then there have been 17 months of steady employment," notes Miss Harris, the family statistician. An alumna of England's Old Vic, she quit leading Broadway roles without a backward glance to take part in the rep venture.

Big Response

Summing up their work, Rabb comments:

"The public response has grown more quickly than we anticipated. Perhaps the biggest problem we have faced has been getting some of the managements that we have booked with, to present us naturally, and not as some sort of an idealistic, cultural experiment."

He regards repertory as the foundation of theatrical enterprise.

"I think it was started by someone who found out that it actually is the most economical way of operating," he says.

"The long runs required for commercial success today on Broadway are really anachronism—and they are certainly not natural for the performers."

Tailor Needs

A different operating method has been evolved by the National Repertory Theater. It places big reliance on coordinating with local sponsors in each community on the itinerary.

"We usually fit in with their season's cultural schedule," explains Dewell.

Operating this year with the financial assistance of the American National Theater and Academy, the project is committed to obtaining sustained subsidy.

"Admission charges will never completely cover costs," Dewell says. "We try to hold to a $4 top in all but the biggest cities, and in addition always offer student tickets at discount."

He estimates expenses this season will outrun box office receipts by $180,000—just about 15 per cent of the operation's total cost.

The company is embarked upon a million-dollar fund-raising campaign to support activities during the next three years.

Within 10 years, says Dewell, the National Repertory venture plans to have four companies on annual tour of 200 cities, each displaying four plays.

'I Love Intrigue,' Declares Top Stage Comedian Ritchard

NEW YORK (AP) — Cyril Ritchard thrives on complications. If necessary, he provides them himself.

"I love intrigue," says the debonair star. "Even better than acting or directing."

There's no danger of his giving up that multiple international career. But his cloak-and-dagger nature gets an invigorating workout each time a fresh bid for his theatrical talents comes along.

Versatile Cyril Ritchard in the title role of "Romulus," his current contribution to Broadway. In addition to an international reputation as an actor, Ritchard holds high rank as a director.

"There is nothing like going trout-fishing," says Ritchard, changing the metaphor for his delight in devious negotiations.

Such deliberate digression preceded the amiable Australian's current participation in the comedy "Romulus" at Broadway's Music Box.

"It all started when Roger Stevens (he's the producer) sent me a flock of wires, all of which I ignored. Then when neither Stevens nor Gore Vidal (he's the author) could be reached, I went looking and located Stevens in London.

"He was so startled by my Trans-Atlantic phone call that he sputtered simply that someone else had been suggested for the part. 'If it's Sir John (Gielgud) I don't mind,' I answered. 'But if it's anyone else I do.'

'Trout Fishing'

"Later I found out from Vidal that it was Robert Morley they had in mind. But he was getting ready to play Nero in another drama, and felt that one could only don the Roman toga a limited number of times in a career. So then I was in demand again—and went trout fishing again."

The roundabout finally halted and Ritchard immersed himself in a role which he now rates as the "most difficult I've ever done because of its complicated two-layer interpretation."

Other recent occasions upon which Ritchard has indulged his penchant for wiliness concerned acting in "The Pleasure of His Company" and his first directing assignment with the Metropolitan Opera Company.

Sponsors of "Pleasure" threw a fancy luncheon for Ritchard to discuss the project, but the star kept away from that topic. So Playwright Samuel Taylor in desperation went along afterwards as Ritchard hurried to the airport.

Charmed Writer

"I had all my funny stories ready, charmed him utterly—and we never got around to the play until I was getting out of the car," he gleefully recalls. "Taylor mentioned it and I said 'oh, yes,' and went up the ramp. When he got back to town Taylor told all the others, 'We've simply got to have him.'"

General Manager Rudolph Bing of the Met ran into an unexpected retort when he phoned the redoubtable Ritchard, vacationing on Nassau.

"I had never talked with him before," the star says. "When he asked if I would stage an opera, I said, 'Oh, come off it Murray—that's a friend of mine—and hung up.

"Well, he had Alfred Lunt direct that year—but I did one the next season."

In "Romulus," Ritchard performs under the supervision of another director, Joseph Anthony.

"I can keep the actor and director sides of myself well separated as long as I respect the other director," he declares. "This is a discipline which harks back to my early training as a dancer and to my Jesuit school."

Easter Oratorio Is Played on TV Today

"Revelation," the Easter oratorio by classical pianist and composer Earl Wild, especially commissioned for the ABC Television Network, will be presented on "Directions '62" at 1:30 p.m. today.

The hour-long telecast, blending dance, music, song and unprecedented stage production, will be the first work of its kind ever presented on television. The oratorio, based on the visions of St. John the Divine, represents the promise of truth, glory and wisdom of the new tomorrow.

Produced for the ABC Public Affairs Department by Wiley Hance, the oratorio will be performed by the ABC Symphony Orchestra under the direction of the composer.

The Easter Oratorio is the most ambitious and long-range plan that "Directions '62" has ever undertaken.

Variety Is By-Word on WHBY Music Program

"Contrasts in Classics" will present a wide variety of concert favorites in a one-hour show at 9 p.m. today.

The program will open with Jascha Heifetz playing "Clair de Lune" by Debussy. Next will be heard the strings of the Philadelphia Orchestra, Eugene Ormandy, conductor, in Vaughan Williams "Fantasia on Greensleeves."

Main work of the evening will be "Till Eulenspiegel" by Richard Strauss played by Toscanini and the NBC Symphony Orchestra. The celebrated Toreador Song from Bizet's Carmen will be sung by Robert Merrill, and the New York Philharmonic Cello Quartet will present "Dance" by Josef Jongen.

The program will close with Espana, a brilliant and familiar waltz by Emil Waldteufel.

Oscar Nomination Helps Piper Laurie Forget Flower-Eating Past

BY JAMES BACON

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—There's nothing like an Oscar nomination to help bury the past. Ask Piper Laurie.

A decade ago, a press agent at Universal-International saw a young red-haired starlet nibbling on a flower stem.

Before long, a parade of Hollywood columnists and photographers descended on the U-I commissary to record that Piper Laurie was a young actress who ate flowers.

She ate a carnation salad for one syndicate, a daffodil for another and so on.

Bad Reaction

"It was horrible tasting," she recalls. The after-effect was even worse. It would have been good publicity for a budding sexpot like a Jayne Mansfield or a Tuesday Weld.

But for Piper, it was not. A dedicated serious actress even in those days, the stunt hurt her career.

Producers couldn't take seriously an actress who ate flowers. So she went to New York and delivered some of television's best dramatic performances.

There she also made "The Hustler." Her performance as the lonely, alcoholic girl friend of Paul Newman won her an Academy Award nomination.

Bob Hope then put her on his television show in a sketch kidding method acting.

"I ate a flower in the sketch but it was my idea, not Bob's. I figure that I have now lived it down so I can afford to kid about it. To think it was I who had to suggest it. I have arrived."

She's Never Met Marlon But They're an 'Item'

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—French Actress Agnes Laurient came to Hollywood and soon saw her name linked in gossip columns with actors she had never heard of. It's an old publicity trick to launch an import.

"I would read in the gossip columns about myself while all the time I was staying home and not going out with anyone. What hurt most of all was that they paired me with actors I had never heard of.

"So one day I talked on the phone to a woman columnist. She asked me if I were steady dating some unknown?

"I said, 'No, I'm going out with Marlon Brando.' " Explains Agnes:

"I learn fast. If it's Hollywood custom to do this, then do it big.

"As long as I'm staying home and reading about myself dining in some restaurant, I want to read about someone I have heard of."

She, of course, hasn't met Brando. She also was surprised to learn that the actor she was paired with in the columns is also a client of her own press agent. She hasn't met him either.
